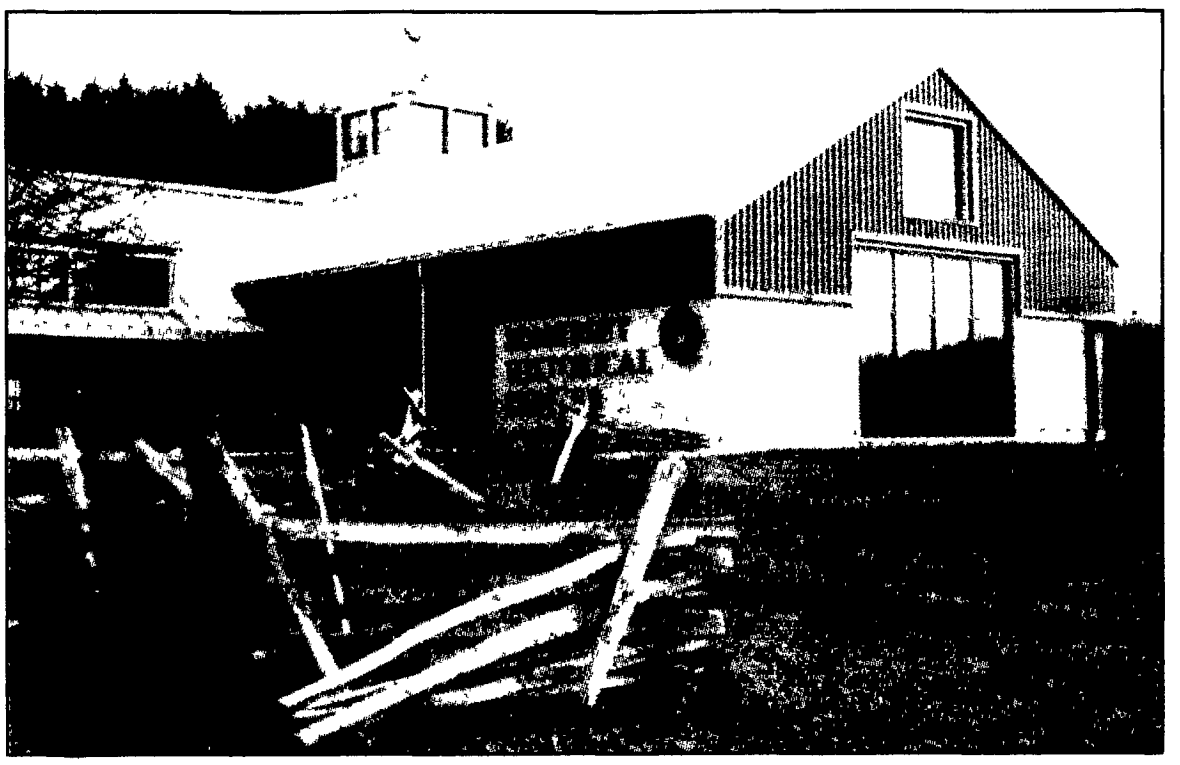
Storybook Exhibit Showcases Farm Life History In Southwestern Pa.



The Somerset Historical Center, located off Rt. 601 north of Somerset on Rt. 985, looks much like a big red barn to complement the farming history exhibit it houses on the inside. The center, along with its nonprofit entity, the Historical and Genealogical Society of Somerset County, works to preserve the history of southwestern Pennsylvanian agriculture in a state-run facility. Photo by Sandra Lepley, Somerset Co. correspondent

SOMERSET (Somerset Co.) — The history of farming in southwestern Pennsylvania is showcased through a unique exhibit called "Patterns On The Land: Farming In Southwestern Pennsylvania," which opened late last summer as a full-scale

Hinton Named Outstanding Young Farmer At Virginia Convention

GAY BROWNLEE
Virginia Correspondent

WYTHEVILLE (Wythe County, Va.) — Jeffrey Hinton of Heathsville was named Virginia's Outstanding Young Farmer recently during the 52nd Annual Convention of the Young Farmers of Virginia and 10th Annual Convention of the Virginia FFA Alumni at the Holiday Inn.

Hinton, his dad, James, and late brother, Jimmy in 1997 established a corporation comprised of the 188-acre family farm in Lara and other land the brothers had begun to invest in back in 1986.

Their discipline and patience in the years following their high school graduation was owing to their shared childhood dream to be full-time farmers, like their dad and granddad. Every dollar they earned was invested, along with plenty of muscle, and eventually the tally was 750 acres for harvesting corn, soybeans, wheat, and barley.

Lancaster Farming's quarterly exclusive booklet, Dairy Plus, begins its 2002 season this issue, devoted to manure management. Special features include a story about a dairy family who installed a manure system in Bangor, nutrient management concerns and the future of state and federal policy, manure management guidelines, improving milk quality, managing odors, and an update on a calf cloning project.

Senate Farm Bill Heads To Joint Conference

Economist Explains Unique Northeast Dairy Program

DAVE LEFEVER

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The U.S. Senate passed their version of the new Farm Bill last week by a vote of 58-40.

The House Ag Committee and the Senate Ag Committee will form a conference committee to negotiate the differences in the Senate bill and the House version passed last fall.

The Senate bill contains a dairy title that would provide support for dairy producers in 12 northeast dairy states including Connecticut, Delaware Massachusetts, Maryland, Maine, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, and West Virgina.

According to the National Milk Producers Federation (NMPF), the program would provide dairy producers in those states with a payment whenever the monthly Class I (fluid milk) price falls below $16.94 per hundredweight.

Ken Bailey, Penn State dairy economist, recently analyzed the provision and the effect it may have on the region's dairy producers. While a relatively small amount of Farm Bill funds go to dairy programs nationwide, this new provision is significant, according to Bailey.

"It's huge," he said.

Targeted to dairy farms with about 400 cows or less, the measure would provide significant payments to farmers in the absence of a Northeast interstate dairy compact removed from Farm Bill legislation last year.

The program is less controversial than an interstate compact, and the benefit to northeast producers would likely be about equal to that provided by a compact, according to Bailey.

"One of its biggest advantages is that it's not a compact," Bailey said. "The compact was extremely controversial."

Under the new Farm Bill provision, payment levels and interstate trade would be regulated by Congress instead of a panel of board members as the interstate compact would have done.

"You're not turning pricing over to a citizen's panel," Bailey said.

The new program will also use taxpayer dollars instead of milk processor monies, as would have resulted from an interstate compact.

The Northeast Dairy Program will likely have less effect than a

YORK (York Co.) — From towering brick buildings in the center of the city, to roadside stands, to family-run farm stores, producers have used various venues to market their wares.

This week a conference helped to disseminate ideas and information for farmers interested in marketing directly to consumers.

The Mid Atlantic Direct Marketing Conference (MADMC), hosted by the Pennsylvania Retail Farm Market Association, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and Penn State Cooperative Extension, is actually a joint effort of these organizations in Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, and Virginia, besides Pennsylvania. The event attracted 400 participants from across the U.S.

Preconference workshops included a seminar at the York Central Market House, a fruit basket seminar, a community

Northeast Broiler Fryer Parts Part I

ATLANTA, GA.
Report Supplied By USDA

Trucklot buying activity was noted as mostly fair and typical of midweek trading. Offerings of boneless-skinless breasts ranged adequate to better balanced. Bone-in breasts were at least sufficient. Leg quarters had increased in availability and dark meat cuts were fully sufficient. Wings remained ample and discounted. Movement through retail channels was noted as fairly good as active features spurred additional refill demand. Distributive draw was generally fair to no better than moderate. The market tone was barely steady to weak on wings, barely steady on leg quarters and about steady on the balance.

Eastern Region Frozen Eggs

ATLANTA, GA.
Report Supplied By USDA

Mostly prices were lower on yolks and unchanged on the remainder of items when compared to previous week's trading. Demand was light and unaggressive. Supplies were at least adequate for current trade requirements. The market tone ranged barely steady to weak and trade sentiment was unsettled. Liquid and frozen eggs (ingredients included) processed under federal inspection in the Eastern region for the week ending February 09, 2002 were 5% lower than the previous week but 10% higher than the same week last year.

A Dry Cow Booster That Costs 7¢ a Day

Hoffmans Horse and Cattle Powder is an ideal tonic for cows over freshening. Feed 6 wks. before freshening. 1 Tablespoon a day. (Two weeks over freshening, feed 1 Tablespoon in the morning & 1 Tablespoon in evening)

Cows will clean better after freshening Cows have a lower somatic cell count and will have less mastitus problems Great for reproduction tract and cows will cycle better after freshening Will help rumen function over freshing Less feet problems and less stress

This is an over-all good booster if fed to dry cows, and it will pay you big dividends.

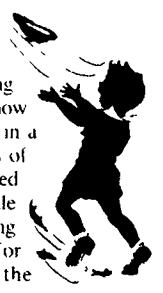
The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

FEB. 25–MAR. 3, 2002

FULL SNOW MOON, FEB. 27

BLOWING IN THE WIND

The weather lore of March says, 'In like a lion and out like a lamb," or vice versa The blustery winds of March usher in the warmer spring weather At about 39 miles per hour, however, blustery winds can become a damaging force In 1806, Admiral Sir Francis Beaufort of the British Navy devised a wind velocity scale, which described a wind between 39 and 46 miles per hour as a fresh gale According to Beaufort s Scale of Wind Speeds (now used by the National Weather Service in a slightly modified form), wind speeds of more than 73 miles per hour are classified as hurricanes In between the fresh gale (or gale) and the hurricane are the strong gale (up to 54 mph) the whole gale (or storm up to 63 mph), and the violent storm (up to 73 mph)



It looked just as if the wind blew you here.

~Jane to Mary Poppins from Mary Poppins by Pamela L Travers

TIP OF THE WEEK

CURRIED CHICKEN SALAD

- 1 2 cup light cream
- 1/2 cup plain yogurt
- 1/2 cup mayonnaise
- 2 teaspoons curry powder
- 1 cup chopped apples (no need to peel)
- 2 medium stalks celery, chopped
- 1/2 cup slivered almonds
- 3 to 4 pounds chicken, cooked deboned, and shredded or cubed

Combine first three ingredients, then stir in curry powder Add apples, celery, almonds, and chicken Chill briefly

Makes 6 to 8 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

If February gives much snow, a fine summer it doth foreshow

In beginning or in end, March its gifts will send

OPINION

What We Know

We are often mesmerized by the amount of poll-taking over the issue of the safety of ag biotechnology.

These polls tend to gauge the overall confidence the American public may have — or not — to applying science to everyday living.

We received a release over the PRNewswire recently about another such poll, released earlier this month by the Pew Initiative on Food and Biotechnology. Zogby International conducted the poll.

Overall, respondents nationwide were more likely to say that the risks of biotechnology outweighed the benefits (40 percent to 33 percent), according to the release, while 19 percent thought the benefits and risks were about the same, and nine percent were unsure.

Generally, consumers seem unaware about risks and benefits of genetic engineering as a whole. Ten percent believe they have heard nothing about benefits of the technology.

Yet they believed in the potential of the technology to clean up toxic soils (74 percent), reduce soil erosion (73 percent), reduce fertilizer runoff into streams and lakes (72 percent), reduce the amount of water used to grow crops (68 percent), and others.

The poll included 1,214 adults nationwide with an additional 407 adults in California, conducted from Jan. 14-18 this year. Copies of the poll, according to the release, are available at http://www.pewagbiotech.org/research/survey1-02.pdf.

A modern American writer once wrote how bemused he was by the fact that, with so many libraries and bookstores, and with reams of information within easy reach, even via Internet for the remotest places on earth, that the public would still remain largely ignorant about so many topics. And some of them who are distrustful (and we know some) simply believe that, until we understand the exact nature of atoms, the behavior of atoms in forming genes, and ways to direct those genes, we cannot understand how truly "safe" biotechnology can be.

But yet we recognize those immediate benefits. And why wait until we understand all — who knows how long that may be? — when the direct benefits would certainly outweigh any risks for a large portion of the public right now.

Like any tool, biotechnology goes with the caveat, buyer beware, and of course, use wisely, even with a little bit of healthy skepticism.

By the way — did you know: agriculture is the nation's largest employer, with more than 21 million people working in some phase of the industry, from growing food and fiber to selling it in supermarkets? The industry generates 20 percent of the nation's gross national product (this last tidbit supplied by Colorado State University News).

Now Is The Time

To Purchase Crop Insurance For Drought Risk Management

The ongoing drought in Pennsylvania reminds us of the risks faced every year when crops are planted. Pennsylvania farmers are reminded that the final date to apply for crop insurance on most spring-planted crops for the 2002 crop year is March 15, 2002. Current policyholders likewise have until March 15 to make any changes to their existing contracts.

As a result of significant premium subsidy increases in 2000, crop insurance is now more cost effective than ever before, especially at the higher levels of coverage. For Pennsylvania growers the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture will pay 100 percent of the premium for catastrophic coverage (greater than 50 percent crop loss) and part of the premium for additional coverage for lower levels of crop loss. Crop insurance provides protection against losses in crop production because of natural perils such as drought, hail, or excessive moisture.

In addition, new revenue products such as crop revenue coverage and indexed income protection are also available, providing additional protection against declining grain prices at harvest. Producers are strongly urged to contact a local crop insurance agent as soon as possible for a premium quote and additional details. Don't put it off! For a list of crop insurance agents in your area, contact your local USDA Farm Service Agency office or log on to the following Risk Management Agency Website: http://www3.rma.usda.gov/tools/agents/.

To Prevent Creosote Buildup

Dr. Robert Thee, housing and family resource management agent in Lancaster County, offers this advice on managing your woodstove and preventing creosote buildup. Creosote is a by-product of wood burning which is formed from unburned gases that condense onto the surfaces of the wood burning system, especially the flue.

Although you cannot eliminate creosote, by purchasing the right size woodstove and operating it properly on a daily basis, you can minimize its formation and at the same time get more heat output from your wood.

There are three guidelines to follow for reducing creosote buildup. The first is to burn dry wood. Dry firewood is wood that has been cut, split, and stored under cover for nine months to a year before being burned. By this time, the moisture content in the wood is 20 to 25 percent.

The second guideline involves burning the wood as completely as possible. This means always allowing enough air in the stove to maintain hot flames which will increase the combustion of the wood. A hotter fire and more complete burning result in less creosote.

The third guideline involves warming the flue as quickly as possible. Keep the stove drafts wide open when the fire is first lit and keep them wide open for at least 30 minutes or more so the heat from the fire warms the chimney flue. This will cause a strong upward draft in the chimney. The draft will exit the smoke faster from the chimney and will result in less creosote buildup.

Never close the drafts completely. This shuts off air supply to the fire and prevents wood from completely burning. If you still have an excessive amount of creosote accumulation after following these steps, you should check for an incorrect chimney height or size and lack of incoming air to the fire.

According to Dr. Larry Jahn, wood products specialist, North Carolina State University, there are products designed to reduce creosote buildup. Research, however, indicates these cleaners have no significant effect on the reduction of creosote. Even granting that chemical cleaners may sometimes work, it is clear they do not always work. Therefore, it is dangerous for those who use chemical cleaners to presume they are working, for if they are not, complacency may result in less frequent inspection and cleaning, and that could lead to a chimney fire. Frequent chimney inspection and cleaning when necessary are essential to heating with wood safely.

To Visit Penn State's Weed Management Website

The weed management Website produced by the Penn State Crop and Soil Science department has a wealth of information related to weed science. You can visit the URL at http://weeds.cas.psu.edu/.

At this Website you will find information on weed identification, herbicides, pesticide labels, weed management publications, invasive plant information, as well as abstracts on weed research projects. There is a section on weed related job openings. At this site you can also learn about graduate study opportunities in weed science. Become familiar with this site before the spring workload picks up. Then when weed questions arise during the growing season, you will know where to go for the answers.

❖ FARM FORUM ❖

Editor:

It seems a little ironic that February is Dental Health Month, and last week I had my first appointment with a new dentist. I will have to admit that I was not really excited about going to the dentist, and I wondered what this new dentist would be like. I also had a lot of questions for him about my teeth and their care.

This initial appointment began with a question and answer session. He asked me many questions about my health in general. He feels that dental health relates to all other areas of your health. Not only did he question my brushing and flossing habits, how I feel and what I eat were also an important part of this interview.

Then we began with the examination. He had a tiny camera that he used to look over my teeth and I could watch everything he did on a television hanging from the ceiling. As we looked at each tooth, he described what he saw and noted any problems that may exist. As this was happening, one of the hygienists was recording his findings on a dental chart. What an interesting way to view the inside of one's mouth. This was

MISPLACED PITY

Background Scripture:
Jonah 3 through 4.
Devotional Reading:
Psalms 113.

If you read the story of Jonah and don't laugh a little along the way, you're missing the point. Jonah is laughable, because we can see ourselves in him: petulant, sulking, and ready to pick up his marbles and go home. In him we can laugh at ourselves and that can be healing if it helps us to see how childish adults can act in God's sight.

Finally, Jonah surrenders and agrees to carry out God's plan. Let's at least give Jonah credit for recognizing the inevitable — some of us can't even do that. Going a day's journey into this vast city, he cried: "Yet forty days and Nineveh shall be overthrown" (3:4). This part Jonah relished. He liked pronouncing doom and gloom. Some are never happier than when prophesying God's judgment — on others!

We also need to give some credit to the king of Nineveh. We know very little about him, but we are told that he was fast to catch on. "Nineveh shall be overthrown"? Well then, "... let them cry mightily to God; yea, let everyone turn from his evil way ..." (3:7,8). The king is a pragmatist: "Who knows, God may yet repent and turn from his fierce anger, so that we perish not?" (3:9). Oh well, it's worth a try!

Pragmatism

Now, you may call him an opportunist, turning over a new leaf only to avoid destruction. But at least it is better than one who responds to dire warnings with indifference or hostility.

Some refuse to change even when common sense says that nothing else will save them. Changing your ways just to escapee destruction may not be the purest of spiritual motives, but it is better than no change at all. Whether the king was sincere or not, "When God saw ... how they turned from their evil way, God repented of the evil ... and he did not do it" (3:9).

So God is pleased with this change and the people are ecstatic. There is only one unhappy soul: Jonah: "... it displeased Jonah exceedingly, and he was angry. And he prayed to the Lord and said, '... is this not what I said when I was yet in my country? ... for I knew that thou art a gracious God and merciful ..." (4:2). Jonah was furious because God acted like God.

But, before we chuckle at Jonah's childishness, should we not ask whether we, too, do not become unhappy because God acts like God, forgiving whom we condemn?

More Childish Than Ever

Then Jonah becomes even more childish: "Therefore now, O Lord, take my life from me ... for it is better for me to die than to live" (4:3). If God won't do it Jonah's way, he'd rather die. That will show God!

"Do you do well to be angry?" God asks, but there is no response from Jonah, who goes to the east of the city where he may wait to see what will happen to it. Jonah still hoped for the worst!

If I had been God, I would have lowered the boom on Jonah. But God, not being me, deals somewhat tenderly and playfully with him. First, he causes a plant to shade Jonah. The next day, however, he sends a worm to attack the plant and it withers, plus a hot sun and sultry east wind that beats upon Jonah, whose only response is petulance: "It is better for me to die than to live" (4:9). Jonah can pout with the best of them!

God is certainly patient with this guy (as I hope he is patient with the one who writes these words). "Do you do well to be angry for the plant?" You bet! says Jonah. Way beyond the point where I would have exploded, God says: "You pity the plant for which you did not labor, nor did you make it grow ... And should I not pity Nineveh, that great city, in which there are more than a hundred and twenty thousand persons who do not know their right hand from their left ...?" (4:11)

The problem is not that Jonah pitied the plant, but that he did not pity the people of Nineveh, who were like cattle, without understanding. But then there was Jonah, who understood the mercy of God, but couldn't bring himself to share it with others.

Agriculture Secretary Reminds Growers, Homeowners About Planting Restrictions

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes reminded fruit growers, business owners, and homeowners in the quarantine zones in Adams, Cumberland, Franklin, and York counties of restrictions on planting trees and shrubs that are susceptible to plum pox virus.

"Plum pox virus is a serious threat to the stone fruit industry of Pennsylvania," Hayes said. "The goal of the Department of Agriculture is to lead the fight in eradicating this devastating virus. To do this, we need the help of everyone in the quarantine zones. We don't want to reinfect our orchards once they are free of plum pox virus, nor do we want reservoirs of infection to be lurking in landscape trees around homes and businesses.

"By working together and abiding by current planting restrictions, we can avoid future plum pox outbreaks and the tremendous economic hardships they bring fruit growers."

The plum pox quarantine covers the following areas: the townships of Huntington and Latimore, portions of Menallen and Tyrone townships, and the Borough of York Springs in Adams County; the townships of Dickinson, South Middleton, and Southampton, as well as Mount Holly Springs Borough in Cumberland County; Mont Alto Borough and Quincy Township in Franklin County; and Washington and Franklin townships in York County.

Hayes noted that this spring, the Department of Agriculture will continue to survey all homes, businesses, and commercial orchards within plum pox quarantine zones.

"The restrictions on plantings in the quarantine zones eliminate the addition of new host plants and shrubs susceptible to plum pox, thus speeding up eradication of the disease while enabling us to conduct a more effective survey," Hayes said.

Enough Is Enough, Says Ag Engineer

ST. JOSEPH, Mich. — Farm parents, influential agricultural organizations, and other leaders must take a stand in preventing childhood fatalities on farms, says one agricultural engineer. Until they do, the current rate of such tragic losses — about 100 child deaths annually in the U.S. — will likely continue.

Writing in the February issue of "Resource" magazine, John Shutske, Ph.D., associate professor in the department of agricultural engineering at the University of Minnesota, says that better engineering and educational programs can only go so far. Farm families and rural-community leaders must take a tough stand and say, "Enough is enough!

"Community leaders must partner with farm families to get at the real roots of these issues and help find acceptable, effective, appropriate solutions," says Shutske.

Better laws, enforcement of existing laws, and better engineering, Shutske argues, cannot feasibly address the range of hazards and inherent dangers that exist in a farming environment. Design solutions can prevent some tragedies, he says, "But to expect an agricultural engineer to design a livestock facility, grain storage structure or machine that will prevent injury to a young child seems an unreasonable expectation."

Educational programs, too, have limitations, although they are a valuable ancillary tool in promoting safe practices. The University of Minnesota, Shutske says, is a leader in offering programs that educate parents and children alike on hazards of farming, and in particular helps parents correlate tasks to the stages of child development. Such knowledge helps parents assign tasks that are age-appropriate and protect children, especially younger children and toddlers, from situations that they are not developmentally capable of handling.

Nevertheless, education, as well as laws and engineering, are only tools in the prevention of farm fatalities: Parents and community leaders must assume the primary role in the effort by taking a stand and focusing on the underlying issues that contribute to farm tragedies. If they don't, warns Shutske, "Farming will continue to be one of the nation's most dangerous industries."

The American Society of Agriculture Engineers is a professional and technical organization dedicated to the advancement of engineering applicable to agricultural, food, and biological systems. Founded in 1907 and headquartered in St. Joseph, Mich., ASAE comprises 9,000 members representing more than 90 countries. Special Meeting Conducted On Codorus Creek Watershed

YORK (York Co.) — The Codorus Creek Watershed Association conducted a special meeting Feb. 11 with representatives from York City, including the mayor; numerous municipalities; industries; county planners, engineers; and Department of Environmental Protection (DEP).

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Baltimore District, gave a presentation relating their availability and willingness to partner with CCWA in making improvements to the flood control banks in York City. Options for improvements were explained as well as funding methods. Their work in assessment of the channel would be cost free. The Corps can also partner with CCWA for restoration projects elsewhere in the watershed.

The Association's winter meeting took place Feb. 19 at the P.H. Glatfelter Company. The meeting began with a tour, followed by a program at 7 p.m. presented by Glatfelter representatives on the progress of their New Century Project.

To join the Association, contact Ryan Ural at the York Water Company at (717) 845-3601 for membership information.

"WAFFLE SLAT" Syri-Con Corporation

"We would use slats again if doing it all over!"

Harold Keeney, David, Nancy & Mark Wolfskill

"The answer to the most common question is 'No, there is no build-up.' "

Our original plan was to install scrapers. But after 10 minutes in a slatted barn in Somerset County, we changed our minds. Some people stay away from slats because of the initial cost, but that extra cost is made up for in the first couple years.

The one thing I like the most about slats is that there is no expense. I don't have any scrapers or drive units to maintain. I don't have to run scrapers every day or haul manure like we did in our previous tie stall barn. The cows' foot health has been a lot better, and the cows stay much cleaner. Our milk production is up and the somatic cell count has gone down. I give at least some of the credit to the slats because with less moisture on the floor, there is less bacteria.

Senate Passes Farm Bill With Dairy Title

- Uses countercyclical payments.
- Extends price supports.
- Extends DEIP.
- New Johne's program.

The National Milk Producers Federation (NMPF), a trade group that represents dairy cooperatives, announced the U.S. Senate passed a Farm Bill recently (www.nmpf.org). The bill contains a dairy title that is very different from the House version. The actual language of the Senate bill, which would reflect all of the various amendments, is not yet available. According to NMPF, the dairy title includes:

- Extending the dairy price support program at the current $9.90/CWT. level.
- Authorizing a new national Johne's Disease control program
- Extending the Dairy Export Incentive Program (DEIP).
- Increasing Market Access Program (MAP) funds.
- Fixing the statutory mandatory inventory and price reporting language by the USDA.
- Requiring dairy importers to pay into the National Dairy Board for promotion and research projects.

The bill is unique in that it contains a countercyclical program that would provide direct payments to dairy producers whenever the price of milk falls below a certain level. The payments, made on a hundredweight basis, are capped on the first 8 million pounds of milk a farm produces in a single year.

How many cows does 8 million pounds represent? That's equivalent to a farm with 400 cows producing 20,000 pounds of milk per cow per year. Farms that ship more than 8 million pounds of milk a year would receive the same payment as the 400-cow farm.

According to NMPF, there are actually two countercyclical payment programs, depending on where a producer lives. One program is for producers located in the 12 northeast states of Connecticut, Delaware, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont, and West Virginia. This program provides a federal payment each month equal to 45 percent of the positive difference between $16.94 and the Boston Class I price. Thus the federal order Class I price — which rises and falls with market forces — is unaffected by this new program.

For example, suppose the Class I price of milk in Boston in a given month is $15.94 per CWT. The program payment would be equal to $0.45 (($16.94 - $15.94) X 0.45). No program payments are made if the monthly Class I price for milk in Boston exceeds $16.94 per CWT. Producers under this program face the same annual production caps outlined above (8 million pounds per farm per year). The program also has a budget ceiling of $500 million over a 4-year period.

The other program is for the rest of the U.S. It provides countercyclical payments to producers whenever the all-milk price in any given quarter falls below a rolling 5-year average price. The payment rate is equal to 40 percent of the amount by which the average price of milk in a given quarter falls below the average price of milk for the same quarter during the previous 5 years. So, if the all-milk price in the current quarter is $13 per hundredweight (CWT) and the 5-year average all-milk price for the same quarter was $15 per CWT, the payment rate would be $0.80 per CWT (($15 - $13) ★ 0.4).

The Senate version, since it is so different than the House version, is scheduled to go to conference where the differences will be worked out. Thus at this stage, it is unclear how the final bill will turn out.

An economic analysis of this dairy title (previously called the "Daschle Compromise) is available on my Website, http://dairyoutlook.aers.psu.edu/reports/SenateDairyBill.pdf.

DAIRY EXPANSION THROUGH GRAZING

IT WORKS!

✓ Low Cull Rates

The typical involuntary cull rate for grazing-based systems is 15%, allowing herds to naturally expand without buying high priced cattle and their replacements

✓ Lower Costs

Forage Costs:
1 lb. dm from pasture = 2¢
1 lb. dm other sources = 4¢ to 10¢

Low investment costs. Additional structures for stored forage and manure may not be needed Housing can be as simple as a bedded pack during poor pasture conditions When conditions are good, the pasture provides great housing with super quality forage in front of the cow

✓ Higher Profits

23 conventional dairies
profit/cwt $2.01 profit/cow = $387
10 grazing dairies
profit/cwt $3.38 profit/cow = $582

Summary of 33 dairies from 1996-2000 Conducted by Don Swartz, University of MD Extension Agent, and Dale Johnson, Farm Management Specialist

✓ High Quality Forage

East Fluid Milk And Cream Review

Spot prices of class II cream, dollars per lb butterfat F O B producing plants Northeast 1 4634-1 5885 Delivered Equivalent· Atlanta 1 4759-1 6135 mostly 1 4759-1 5010

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, dollars per lb wet solids, F.O.B. producing plants Northeast· Class II, includes monthly formula prices: 9700-1 0500, Class III - spot prices - .9200-9900

SPOT SHIPMENTS OF GRADE A MILK FLORIDA This week - In 0, Out 47, last week - In0, Out 0; last year - In 0, Out 120 SOUTHEAST STATES This week - In 0, Out 0; last week - In 0, Out 0; last year - In 0, Out 0.

During January, milk production in the 20 major states totaled 12.27 billion pounds, up 1 8% from January 2001. The following are the January-to-January changes for selected states· Vermont 5%, New York 2%, Virginia .6%, Kentucky no change, Pennsylvania 0 1%, Texas 1 1%, and Florida 4 0% For the above-mentioned states, the combined milk cow numbers are down 55,000 head from last January. Milk cows in the twenty major states total 7,740,000 head, down 44,000 from a year earlier

Milk production is steady to slightly heavierin the Northeast and Middle Atlantic areas Output is steadily growing in the Southeast Fat and protein tests on the incoming milk are quite high for this time of year Fluid milk supplies are reported as heavy in all areas of the region. Bottled milk sales are sluggish in most sections of the East Milk suppliers report that many retailers are calling to see if the slow demand is localized or wide spread with the answer being wide spread This slow Class I demand results in more surplus milk to process and contacts report growing volumes of surplus milk moving greater distances This is a little unusual for February Florida shipped nearly fifty loads out of state for processing and nearly all the balancing plants in the Southeast are operating at or near capacity In the Northeast, milk supplies are equally long and manufacturing plants are full

The condensed skim market is mixed Contract sales are clearing decent volumes, but spot interest is seldom better than fair.

The fluid cream market remains weak and supplies continue to be excessive of the slow Class II spot demand. Prices did move a little higher as the CME butter average moved about 3.4 cents higher last week However, multiples are often lower to help offset the butter price increase Some cream contacts think that "things" are starting to turn around in the cream market, but most see increasing supplies and sluggish demand for some time to come. Ice cream production is steady to slightly higher as some producers take advantage of the abundant cream supply and relatively low prices to put up some inventory. Cream cheese producers are taking a few spot loads, but their contracts are supplying about all the cream they need at this time. Cottage cheese sales are improving, which does clear a little more cream This is typical for Lent. Churning activity is heavy. Excess cream volumes are burdensome and clearances to Midwestern butter makers continue.

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Summary

St. Joseph, Mo.
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL FEEDER CATTLE SUMMARY for week ending Feb 15 Receipts This week 187,400, last week 148,200, year ago 150,600 This week's reported volume included 48 percent weighing over 600 lb Compared to last week, feeder steers and heifers across most of the nation sold steady to 2 00 higher, according to the USDA Livestock Market News Service

After almost tripling their receipts from last week, the Southeast states sold cattle firm to 3.00 higher, with some areas up to 4 00 higher. The Southeast was crippled by severe winter storms last week which included heavy ice Buyers were very active as producers were able to make it back into the auction barns Several markets in Tennessee offered preconditioned, load lots, and grouped cattle which found excellent demand as feeders under 600 pounds traded up to 6 00 higher The snow and ice has melted in the Southern Plains and given wheat pastures a long overdue drink.

The Senate passed their version of a Farm Bill this week, which included a provision that would ban packers from owning cattle 14 days prior to slaughter The House's version of the Bill did not include this provision, and the two must meet in a conference committee to hammer out the details If the Senate's version were to pass it would no doubt shake the cattle feeding industry As with any Farm Bill there are producers on both sides of the fence, and cattle feeders are keeping their eyes glued to the issue

Packers may need to add more money to their bids and procure cattle before today's COD report comes out Analysts are expecting to see larger marketing than a year ago, and smaller placements Dressed sales in the Northern yards as of Friday morning ranged from 114-115 00 which is 1 00 higher than last week. Cutouts continue to be good, and chain speeds have increased at the plants Most factors are stacking up in the feeder's corner as consumer demand is strong, and break even sheets are looking better every week

The benefits of using a 3 in 1 fertilizer are rather impressive.

Would higher yields impress you? How about better quality? K-MAG® can help. It provides a unique, naturally occurring combination of the potassium, magnesium and sulfur that your alfalfa needs. Since it's 100% water soluble, nutrients are always readily available. And it won't affect soil pH – even at high application rates. To make K-Mag a big part of your balanced soil fertility program, visit www.kmag.com or see your fertilizer dealer today.

Preseason Preparation Pays Harvest-Time Dividends

MOLINE, Ill. — What happens during planting and seeding often affects the entire season. And while there's nothing you can do about foul weather or unfriendly markets, you can improve your equipment's performance.

So rather than find out a month from now that your planter was out of calibration, take steps to make sure your equipment works smoothly, before heading to the field.

"The repair that may only take a few minutes with the planter unloaded, clean, and disassembled in the shop might take hours if you have to pull it back to the shed, empty seed hoppers, bleed the hydraulic system, and hose off the dirt to even get to the part that needs attention," said Bill Barr, project manager, John Deere Seeding Group.

And downtime is only one concern. Studies at universities across the country have shown a positive yield response from a uniform stand. The best way to get that, said Barr, is to make sure your planting equipment is in top condition.

"Your owner's manual provides a good preplant checklist, but you can generally follow one rule — check anything that moves," Barr said. "Your planter's accuracy depends on the right adjustment of a combination of sprockets, chains, and wheels. There's a lot of turning and spinning going on, so making sure everything moves smoothly is a good first step. And remember, a tune-up isn't a field check — your machine will still have to be checked in the field to confirm the correct population and spacing is being achieved."

Also, Barr said, "keep in mind many dealerships offer good deals on planter maintenance and tune-up work during the winter months. Letting your dealer's service department do the job can be a good way to free your time for other chores."

Regardless of who does the work, Barr said, there are specific maintenance items common to most machines. Make sure your planter, air seeder, or drill tune-up includes these critical items.

Planters

- Check all bearings and springs. Even if they appear to be in good condition, make sure to have a few spares on hand for unexpected breakdowns.
- Check the hydraulic system for leaky cylinders, cracked hoses, and worn fittings.
- Check the drive chains for wear or stiffness and treat with a high-quality chain lubricant.
- Check the disk openers for wear or damage, and make sure coulters and openers are correctly aligned.
- Adjust planter tire pressures according to your owner's manual.
- Check seed delivery belts for wear.
- Check the seed tubes for obstructions, and replace if necessary.
- For vacuum-type systems such as the John Deere VacuMeter, inspect the vacuum lines and seals, especially the main vacuum seal on the meter. Make sure the vacuum pressure is adjusted properly for the size and type of seed.
- On planters with finger-type pickup systems, check for wear on the back plates and brushes, and adjust tension on the fingers.
- Check gauge wheels for wear and excess movement. Check for bent arms.
- Check seed boots for wear.
- Check alignment of the press wheel, disk opener, and closing wheel.
- Make sure all air hoses are firmly connected and free of wear.

Once you're in the field, check that the planter frame and individual units are parallel with the soil. Make sure the seed trench is closing, that you're getting good seed-to-soil contact, and that the seed is deep enough.

"There's a lot riding on the accuracy of your planter," said Barr, "so make sure you see for yourself that everything is working."

In-Field Troubleshooting

Even with the best maintenance programs, items can be overlooked or misadjusted. Make sure you pay attention to what your planter is doing in the field, and watch for these common problems.

- Seed trench isn't closing. Check the pressure on the closing wheels and increase if necessary. Make sure the planter hitch is set to the proper height.
- Poor seed-to-soil contact. Make sure the entire unit is running at the proper height, and be sure to check the coulter height. Check the disc openers for wear, and replace if necessary.
- Seed is too shallow. Check the pressure on the closing wheels and decrease if necessary. Make sure the planter is properly ballasted. Make sure the seed depth is set correctly on the planter.
- Inconsistent seed placement. Check for excess residue in the seed trench, and use a clearing device if necessary. Make sure the planter tires are properly inflated. Check the drive chains, and lubricate if necessary.

Calibration: An Investment That Pays

Start controlling what you can with the first big operation of the year — planting. A properly calibrated planter pays you back in more uniform emergence, even stands, and better yields.

"We know that a miscalibrated planter can have a significant negative impact on yields," said Bill Barr, project manager, John Deere Seeding Group. "But it's also one of the easiest variables to control."

As evidence of the importance of calibration, Barr points to studies performed at universities across the Cornbelt. Compared to plots planted with mistuned equipment, plots planted using properly calibrated units are the better performers in nearly every case — sometimes by surprising margins.

"We've seen one corn plot outyield another by more than 20 bushels per acre," Barr said, "The only difference being that one was planted with a properly calibrated planter."

What's The Difference?

The effects of a miscalibrated planter are usually observed in one of two ways — plants are either too close together or too far apart. Too close, and one plant is essentially a weed, drawing water and nutrients away from the other. Too far, and you end up with gaps or "skips" in the row. Either way, you lose bushels on every acre.

"The potential yield loss due to planter miscalibration is more than enough to justify the cost of calibrating the equipment," said Barr.

He also said one of the best ways to calibrate your planter

Variable-Rate Seeding: A Good Fit?

MOLINE, Ill. — Now that some of the "new" has worn off of global positioning systems (GPS) technology, growers have stopped asking "What'll they think of next?" and have started asking "What'll this cost me and when will I see a return?"

Receiving special attention from efficiency-minded producers are implements using variable-rate technology, specifically map-based, variable-rate seeding systems that allow computer-controlled, on-the-go changes in seeding rates.

Though the specifics of variable-rate seeding systems differ between manufacturers, most systems use several common components. A GPS receiver mounts on the roof of the tractor or combine, and is used to plot the location of the equipment. During harvesting operations, the receiver may work in conjunction with a yield monitor to plot a yield map of a particular field.

Before planting the next season, that yield information, along with other data, can be used to set up a seeding-rate prescription on a data card. The data card is then placed in the processor on board the tractor during planting. The processor controls the variable-rate drive on the planter, putting down less seed in low-yielding, or low-potential areas and more in high-yield, high-potential areas. A monitor in the cab tells the operator what the system is doing, and allows for manual override.

The question on growers' minds, of course, is one of economics: Does variable-rate, map-based seeding pay?

"That's not a simple yes-or-no question," said Mike Albaugh, project manager, Ag Management Solutions, John Deere. "The cost-effectiveness of the system depends to a large extent on the way it's used, as well as the grower's commitment to getting maximum benefit from the technology. Used by itself, without the benefit of a yield map, soil-type map, or other data, a variable-rate seeding system isn't much more than a monitor. It can be useful, but considering the cost of the system the grower isn't likely to see a quick return on his investment.

"But when you incorporate map-based seeding into a larger precision-farming effort, with soil-type information, yield mapping, and variable-rate chemical or fertilizer application, the entire system can return the investment much faster, just through more-efficient use of seed and chemicals. And there's real value to the information the system gathers."

Precision farming technology can pay in other ways besides just agronomics, Albaugh said. Seeding monitors and variable-rate planter drives take a lot of the guesswork and fatigue out of planting, and can help simplify recordkeeping. Your GPS equipment could also work with an implement guidance or automatic steering system that can help further reduce fatigue, and possibly allow you to use a less-qualified operator during any operation that involves driving down, or across, rows or other activities requiring precision.

Still, said Albaugh, there are plenty of other considerations, including the source of the equipment. Though many of the individual components are available from independent manufacturers, there are advantages to using a single company's system.

"There are definite advantages to using equipment, systems and technologies that are completely and fully integrated," Albaugh said. "Take the GreenStar® system, for instance. The advantage is that the common components — the StarFire™ position receiver, the GreenStar display, and the mobile processor can be used on any GreenStar-ready John Deere tractor, combine or sprayer, for any field operation."

Also, consider how you'll use the system to its fullest abilities, and how you expect it to benefit your operation.

"As far as map-based seeding is concerned, yield history isn't enough to base your seeding rate on; you'll want to consider soil-type information as well as moisture and nutrient availability, so that information has to be collected and entered into your system. There's a lot to learn about using the machinery and the software; count on spending some time figuring it all out. And because of the cost of the equipment, knowing how to use it to its fullest potential will give you the best results and fastest returns on your investment."

Air Seeders Make Sense For High-Acreage Producers

MOLINE, Ill. — Replacing your grain drill with an air seeder is like using any other high-efficiency, high-performance piece of equipment — you've got to keep it working to get the most from your investment.

But for growers who seed significant acreages to small grains or soybeans, an air seeder will probably get more than enough work, and save enough time and seed to make the investment worth thinking about.

"If a grower covers more than a thousand acres with a traditional box-type drill, upgrading to an air seeder starts to make sense," said Steve Detrick, project manger, John Deere Seeding Group. "With an air seeder, there's an increase in seed capacity, so you don't have to make as many stops, and you also get more-accurate seeding, which helps prevent wasted seed. But there is a number of acres below which you won't get a significant return, so talk with your dealer or consultant and put a pencil to it."

Besides having enough land to justify the investment in air-seeding equipment, he says, larger-acreage growers are more likely to have the heavy tractors necessary to pull these more power-intensive implements.

"Hydraulic capacity is a huge consideration," Detrick said, "because all the components are hydraulically powered. And you may be pulling a seed cart behind the seeder, so your tractor will need the horsepower to handle it."

But for growers with large acreages and the right equipment, switching from a drill to air has significant advantages.

• Capacity and refill interval. "An average-sized drill can hold around 90 bushels of seed," said Detrick. "But you can pull a 430-bushel seed cart behind an air seeder, so you're staying in the field almost five times longer between refills.

• Accuracy. While a drill relies on gravity to deliver the seed, an air seeder uses a precisely controlled fan to deliver the proper seeding rate. Studies at various agricultural institutions confirm that air seeders are five to seven percent more accurate than drills. And while this difference in accuracy may not mean much on 300 acres, it means a lot when you're covering 3,000 acres.

• Variable calibration. A box drill typically uses a gearbox and shifter mechanism to adjust the seeding rate. The air seeder uses an infinitely variable system that allows you to fine-tune the rate to fit your needs, potentially saving two to six pounds of seed per acre.

• Easy transit. "When it's time to move from one field to the next, that drill will take about half-an-hour to prepare for transit," said Detrick. "With the air seeder, you fold up the wings and you're ready to go in minutes."

Still, Detrick said, it's a good idea to put it all down on paper and talk over your plans with your dealer.

"A good air seeding system can cost up to twice as much as a comparable box drill, so talk to your dealer and see if switching makes economic sense for your operation."

The StarFire receiver is the heart of the GreenStar system, with static accuracy to within 10 inches. Using multiple satellites to calculate the position of your tractor, sprayer or combine, the receiver feeds location data to the monitor. Using this data, the GreenStar processor can then collect yield information or, with properly equipped implements, control seeding and chemical application rates.

With JDmap software loaded on your PC, you can download GreenStar data and create maps of individual fields showing yields, input history and more. Import other data such as soil type maps, or marked tile lines. Use JDmap to create a field-by-field seeding "prescription," which you can then upload to the GreenStar mobile processor using a data card.

Harvest-Time Dividends

is to rely on professionals to do it.

"A qualified, well-equipped dealership service department can, in most cases, calibrate a planter faster and more accurately than a grower working in his own shop," Barr said. "Plus, dealerships often run service specials during the winter, so you can usually find a good deal."

Regardless of who does it, Barr said, there are ways to help make sure it's done right.

"Make sure you calibrate in environmental conditions similar to those at planting," said Barr. "Once you're in the field, stop and look at your rows. Make sure you're getting the spacing and population you want and that there's good seed-to-soil contact. A visual check of the seed trench is the only way to be sure your equipment is working right."

Keep It Safe With Common Sense

MOLINE, Ill. — You've got tractors pulling planters, workers mixing chemicals, and ATVs hauling heavy seedbags. There are welders and power tools, people working long hours in a hectic environment — everything you need for an accident is there at planting time.

But with a simple, commonsense approach to workplace safety, you can significantly cut your risk of accident, injury, and liability.

"Accident prevention boils down to recognizing the hazards associated with each operation and each piece of equipment, taking the appropriate steps to minimize the risks, and having a plan in place to handle emergencies," said Gary Mills, manager, product safety, John Deere.

The single most effective way to prevent accidents, he said, is simply to be aware of what's going on around you.

"Pay attention to what you and the people around you are doing. If it looks wrong or feels wrong, you should stop, take a look at what you're doing and see if there's a safer way to do it."

• Make sure each operator is thoroughly trained and familiar with the tractors he or she will be driving.

• Make sure the rollover protective structure (ROPS) is in place. Always use the seatbelt.

• Do not allow riders, especially children, anywhere on the tractor.

• Fatigue, stress, and medication can impair safe operation — take frequent breaks to help stay alert.

• Shut down equipment, turn off the engine, and wait for moving parts to stop before exiting the tractor.

• Keep all PTO shielding in place. Avoid loose clothing, long necklaces, or other items that could get caught in a spinning PTO.

System Puts Growers AcresAhead At Planting

MOLINE, Ill. — Corn growers using John Deere planters and Capture® liquid insecticide from FMC Corporation can nearly double the seed-carrying capacity of their planters and cover more acres with fewer stops.

John Deere and FMC have partnered to introduce the AcresAhead™ Planting and Insecticide system, which allows growers to replace the standard 1.6-bushel seed boxes with heavy-duty 3-bushel units.

"We can cut by half the number of stops a grower has to make to refill the seed boxes, so that's going to be a tremendous boost to planting-time efficiency," said Chad Braden, product marketing and planning, John Deere Seeding Group.

The new system installs Capture liquid insecticide application equipment on John Deere planters, allowing removal of the granular insecticide boxes and installation of the larger seed boxes. Depending on the size of their tanks, growers can then carry enough insecticide to treat 150 acres or more, making the AcresAhead system an efficient alternative to granular systems.

Dealer-Installed, Low Or No Cost

To help sweeten the deal, John Deere and FMC are offering the equipment and installation at little or no cost to the grower. John Deere dealers will install and service the equipment — costs can then be applied to the grower's Farm Plan account. Based on the amount of Capture purchased, much or all of the system cost is then credited back to the account. No installation or equipment charges will be incurred until all the credits have been issued.

"We developed this program in conjunction with FMC to help supply an increasing interest in liquid at-plant insecticides," said Braden. "Growers are looking at the liquid materials and seeing they're easier to handle — there's no dust — and that a liquid application can give more thorough and more accurate coverage."

The Capture application equipment includes a monitor, which eliminates the need to calibrate individual rows, as well as easy-to-read flow indicators that help growers ensure each row is getting the proper dose.

"This system is a tremendous value," said Braden, "and can help corn growers everywhere get more done this spring."

The AcresAhead system can be installed on nearly any make or model planter. Only John Deere planters can be equipped with the John Deere 3 bushel seed boxes. For more information, see your John Deere dealer or contact your local FMC representative.

AcresAhead program doubles the seed-carrying capacity of John Deere corn planters, and includes installation of Capture liquid insecticide application equipment. Deere manufactures this 1760 NT planter.

Steering By The Stars: Guidance Systems Keep Tractors, Sprayers On The Straight

MOLINE, Ill. — Steering a tractor in a straight line — it doesn't sound hard, but after dozens of acres and hundreds of rows, and with planting-time stress in the air, that straight line can get pretty hard to hold. And if the tractor or sprayer strays just an inch or two, you could be wasting chemicals, fertilizer, seed or fuel.

But GPS-based guidance and steering-assist systems can help drivers keep their track or wheeled tractors on the line.

"Farmers and their operators spend hundreds of hours each season in their tractors, so we want to make it as easy and stress-free as possible," said Steve Robisky, product manager, John Deere, Ag Management Solutions. "That's what led us to develop the AutoTrac assisted-steering system for track tractors and Parallel Tracking for all other self-propelled ag machines."

Although the systems are designed to reduce operator fatigue from constant attention to steering, Robisky said there are real agronomic and economic benefits as well — specifically, reduced compaction and more efficient fuel and chemical use.

"These systems allow you to determine exactly where in the field you want your traffic lanes to be, so you can isolate compaction to those lanes. And by holding the tractor on a specific line, you avoid overlapping tillage or spray applications, so you save on chemicals and fuel."

Plus, he said, the John Deere systems are compatible with GPS equipment that the grower may already have in place. "It doesn't have to be a huge investment, but it can save a lot of wear on drivers."

Post-Plant Maintenance Can Keep Your Equipment Running Smoothly

MOLINE, Ill. — The N is down, the crop is in the ground, and planting season is over. Time to think about mid-season pests and diseases?

Not just yet, said Bill Barr, project manager, John Deere Seeding Group. Before you break out the sprayer and cultivator, take the time to prepare all that planting equipment for storage.

"Dirt, rust, seed residue — contaminants like these can foul sensitive seeding equipment if the planter is put away dirty," he said. "But with just basic maintenance, these machines can last for years."

Barr recommends a simple but thorough approach to post-planting equipment maintenance. "Wash away the dirt," he said, "See what needs to be repaired or replaced, and take care of it before you put the machine away for the season."

Start with these steps and adapt them to your own equipment, Barr said, and keep a couple of guidelines in mind: "If it touches the soil, clean and inspect it, and if it moves, you should probably lubricate it."

- Rinse. A power-washer can blast tough dirt off of planter frames, tanks, and disks. Avoid spraying pressurized water directly onto chains, sprockets and other drive components.
- Clean the boxes. Empty any seed residue from boxes and hoppers, and make sure no clumps are lodged in the bottom. Wipe box drills down from the inside, and clean off all moving parts. Be careful not to let any solvents come into contact with the rubber seed tubes.

Once the machine is clean, look it over carefully for components that need attention. A few areas to inspect:

- Disks, openers, knives, shanks. Anything that comes into contact with the soil should be checked carefully and replaced if necessary. A manufacturer's estimate on the service life of a particular part should be used as a guideline only; soil type, tillage practices and use patterns can drastically shorten a component's estimated life span.
- Chains and sprockets. Clean the drive chains and coat with an appropriate lubricant. Replace any chain that has sticky links. Inspect sprockets for excessive wear, and replace as necessary.
- Vacuum and hydraulic lines. Carefully check hydraulic lines and fittings for leaks; use a piece of wood or cardboard, not bare hands. Check vacuum lines for wear and kinks, and replace as necessary.
- Bearings. Wheels, blades, closing wheels — spin everything that turns and watch for excessive wobbling or drag that could indicate a worn bearing. Repack and replace any questionable bearing.
- Bare-metal parts. Treat all bare-metal components with a light oil or rust preventative. Don't forget the exposed threads of nuts, bolts or screws that are used for adjustment. Retract or lubricate all hydraulic pistons.
- Tires. Inspect all tires for tread wear, and inflate to the proper pressure.
- Scratches. Use a good touch-up paint on deep scratches or gouges to help prevent rust.

And if it all seems like too much to remember, don't forget your dealer may be running attractive off-season service specials on planter maintenance, so check it out — the time you save may be well worth the cost of the service.

Solid. Stable. Still John Deere.

THE MAXEMERGE® PLUS ROW UNIT FOR CORN

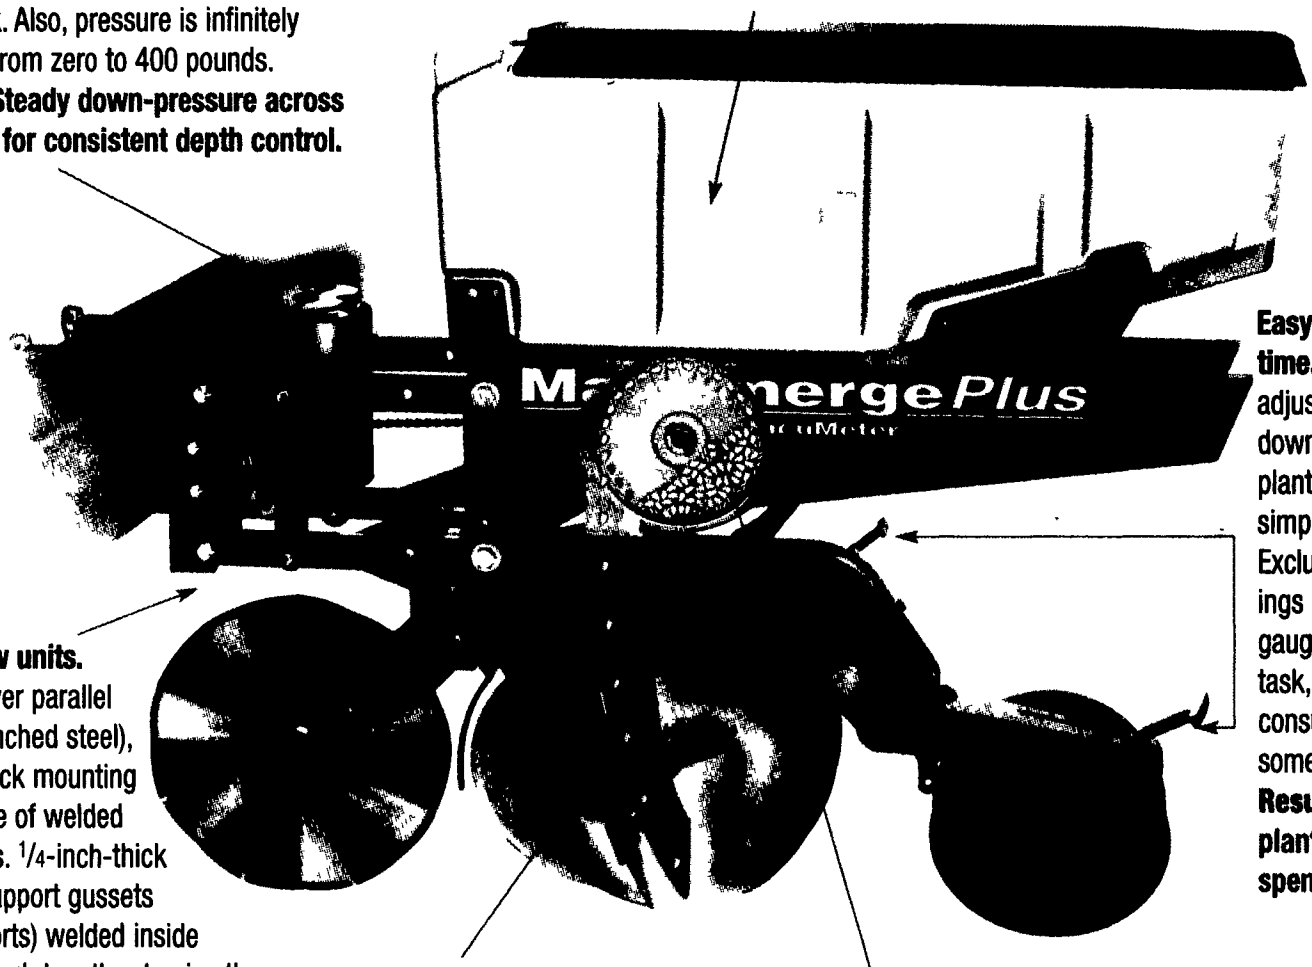
MEASURABLE DIFFERENCES. Better results.

Precise down-pressure. Exclusive pneumatic down-force keeps openers in the ground, unlike competitors' down-pressure springs that contract when they hit a rock. Also, pressure is infinitely variable from zero to 400 pounds.
Result: Steady down-pressure across the field for consistent depth control.

Large-capacity hopper boosts efficiency. A generous 3-bushel hopper means fewer refills and more productive field time. A tongue-and-groove design keeps the lid in place during filling – even on windy days. And new molded markers let you see hopper levels at a glance. Also available: A 1.6-bushel hopper for use with the 70-pound chemical hopper.
Result: Vastly improved productivity. In fact, 3-bushel hoppers give a 12-row planter the productivity of a 16-row planter with 1.6-bushel hoppers.



Stronger row units. Cast-iron lower parallel arms (vs. punched steel), a 3/8-inch-thick mounting bracket made of welded angle iron (vs. 1/4-inch-thick steel), and support gussets (vs. no supports) welded inside shanks, all work together to give the John Deere row unit greater strength to resist side-to-side deflection.
Result: A longer-wearing tool that plants straight-as-an-arrow rows.

Every seed counts. If your corn planter doubles as a bean planter, then you'll want the exclusive new AccuCount™ seed sensor. It maintains an accurate seed count during planting, even at populations above 200,000.
Result: More peace of mind at higher speeds and populations, improved seed savings, and reduced input costs.

Easy adjustments save time. Set depth and adjust closing-wheel down-force for the entire planter in minutes with simple-to-use T-handles. Exclusive threaded bushings make adjusting the gauge wheel an easy task, unlike the time-consuming shims on some other-color planters.
Result: More time spent planting, less time spent tweaking.

More and better metering systems. The John Deere VacuMeter™ metering system gently uses vacuum to deliver seed to the furrow. Twenty seed disks are available to match the crop being planted. A no-tools disk change-over means switching crops is fast. And with fewer wear items, VacuMeter maintenance is easier on your wallet. John Deere also offers the radial bean meter and an improved finger pick-up meter that's 96 percent accurate – a figure no competitive model can top.
Result: More precise seeding spacing in any crop.

A better planter starts with a superior row unit. And the John Deere MaxEmerge*Plus* row unit is the best in the business. Period. It's stronger, more reliable, and easier to use. All of which makes it more effective at doing its job – placing one seed at a time right where it needs to be to reach its yield potential…and help you reach your profit potential. And more profit? That's a difference you can really measure. See your John Deere dealer today…and start getting better results.

Va. Convention Names Hinton, Of Heathsville, Outstanding Young Farmer

During the last five years, the Hinton crop per-acre averages are 135 bushels of corn, 35 bushels of soybeans, 75 bushels of wheat, and 80 bushels of barley.

Some 45 brood cows, 45 calves, and two bulls are supported on 40 acres of pastureland. In non-grazing periods, the silage made on 10 acres and held in a pit silo is the main food source. Hay cut in the summer fills in, too, when necessary.

Hinton said when the calves are approximately 10 months of age they are sold in early October at a special state-graded sale in Fredericksburg.

Five grain bins are capable of storing 18,000 bushels of grain. There are two barns. three outbuildings, and a workshop. All pieces of equipment are protected from the elements in special enclosures.

In small grain production, Hinton said fertilizer is applied in the fall and lime as needed. In the spring, nitrogen is applied in February and at the end of March. Sulfur is also applied. Crops are treated, as needed, with fungicide and insecticide.

One month prior to planting corn, a dry broadcast of fertilizer is applied according to soil samples. Nitrogen is applied to corn during the planting stage and herbicides as needed. At 12-18 inches tall, the second application, consisting of sidedressing, is applied to corn.

Hinton said about 150 pounds of nitrogen per acre is the target aimed for. During planting, some 200 pounds of 15-15-0 is also applied down every row to maintain a soil pH of 6.2-6.5, he said.

The operation maintains a close working relationship with the fertilizer dealer who keeps detailed records, including soil samples and field maps of all fields. Participating farms are eligible for state grants, so a nutrient management plan has been established to be in compliance with the state guidelines.

Concerns about erosion, nitrate, leaching, and conservation in general necessitate an active relationship with the Northern Neck Soil and Water Service. To help maintain the earth's integrity, Hinton said no-till methods are used for 95 percent of corn they plant.

The treasure of neighbor helping neighbor cannot be overstated, as Hinton will attest. Not only because sharing equipment is cost-effective, but also to preserve the tried-and-true methods of providing for one's own needs the same way one's forebears did.

They also avoid veterinary fees by immunizing and neutering cattle.

Thinking about losing his only brother to a terminal illness in March of 2000, Hinton is living out a childhood dream by farming full time.

With his wife, Tina, and children Chelsea, 11 and Austin, 2, he credits the Lord, a close-knit family, and his church for sustaining him with the grace and support.

"We feel very blessed," he said.

Tim Liskey presented the Outstanding Young Farmer Award sponsored by the Virginia Farm Credit Association.

Hinton is a 15-year member of the Northumberland County Young Farmer Association and has served as its president, vice president, and secretary. His adviser is Dale Sanders.

Runners-up were David Hughes of the Broadway/ Timberville Association and David Ingram, the Floyd Association. Also participating were Jon McDonald of the Rockbridge Association and Chris Grove of the Turner Ashby Association.

State winner of the Diversification Award was Robert Ingram of the Floyd Association. Central area winner was Craig Brann of Northumberland Association. Jon McDonald of the Rockbridge Association was the northern area winner. The Virginia Department of Ag and Consumer Services sponsored the award presented by Chase Lowe.

The Outstanding Young Farmer Agribusiness Person Award state winner from the Broadway/ Timberville Association was Anthony Shorter. Tim Grove from the Turner Ashby Association was state runner-up. Winner in the northern area was also Anthony Shorter. David Dunaway of Northumberland Association was the central area winner. Virginia Council of Farmer Cooperatives sponsored the award and Brett Seal presented.

Craig Brann of the Northumberland Association won the state Corn Growing Award and Mack Smith of the Rockbridge Association was second.

The state Silage Growing Award was presented to Craig Bailey of the Broadway Association.

The Soybean Production Award winner was Shirley Powells from the Northumberland Association. Tim Selfs, Northumberland Association, was second. Charles Leech of the Rockbridge Association was the northern area winner.

Honorary memberships were presented to Donnie Liskey and Connie Liskey of the Spotswood Association.

The Northumberland Association was named outstanding association. Turner Ashby Association was second.

Taking the Outstanding Young Farmer Adviser Award was Shannon Dryden of the Rockbridge Association.

Turner Ashby Association received the Farm and Home Safety Award and, next to Rockbridge Association, the state winner, was second in membership development.

Tom Lam of Turner Ashby received the state Spokesperson Award. Stuart Melton and Mark Devers were also in the running.

The Agricultural Stewardship Award winner was Dan King. Mark Deavers was second, John McDonald, third, and Linda Leech and Shannon Dryden shared fourth.

State first place in the Farm Business Management Award was Terry Slusher; Mark Deavers, second; Carrie Monger, third; John McDonald, fourth, and Charles Leech, fifth.

Spotswood Association had the highest percentage of members attending. Turner Ashby Association actually had the most members in attendance.

The state officers named to terms during 2002-2003 are President John Bowman, Vice President Brett Seal, Secretary Elizabeth Ramsey, Treasurer Mark Deavers, Reporter Tarinda Showman, Sergeant-At-Arms Tom Lam, Directors Scot Lilly and Johnny Davis.

The tour Saturday included visits to the Southwest Virginia Bull Station outside Wytheville. In coordination with Scott Grider of Virginia Tech, Danny Umber and family manage the facility, which showcases a senior bull sale averaging 200 bulls yearly.

Next on the tour itinerary was Dalton Enterprises in Rural Retreat which specializes in horse and cattle trailers, manufacturing 1,200-1,400 steel and aluminum trailers annually.

Last was the Jim Hylton Trout Farm in Cedar Springs. Said to be the largest of its kind in Virginia, the operation accounts for about 25 percent of state trout revenues.

supported agriculture (CSA) workshop, and a consumer solutions seminar. Information about the fruit basket seminar is scheduled for the B section of Lancaster Farming next week.

York Market House

In the York Market House session, Dan Leese, operations manager for the facility, gave a brief history of the building and business conducted at the market.

Standholders from various markets, market managers, orchardists, and planning commission members attended the seminar.

"One of the best things about this market is the history," said Leese. "York was very much a market town."

After marketing their wares in the square, farmers began to began to build sheds to house their produce in the 1840s. Traffic and sanitation issues, however, brought about their demise and in 1888 the market building was constructed, joining several other markets already established in York.

Today the market, all 34,000 square feet of it, hosts 65-70 vendors. One third of the stands are lunch stands, one third traditional farm market stands, and one third "specialty" stands such as potato chips, homemade chocolate, or even coins. A few stands are left open for organizations to use the areas for fund- raising events.

One of Leese's challenges is keeping a dwindling number of farmers interested in coming into the city. In addition the high cost of maintaining the old building has become an obstacle for Leese and the board of directors. They are looking at ways to improve the general lighting, brighten the floor, and possibly add an upper deck area for tables.

Although the market is open Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, lunch stands recently began to open on Wednesdays and Fridays.

The proximity of the courthouse the market brings jurors over during lunchtime, in addition to the employees of nearby downtown businesses.

"We get really good exposure because of our lunch crowd," he said. "We're really a gathering place."

In addition live entertainment such as school groups or community members playing a donated piano works as a draw for consumers. A recently purchased property will provide space during the warm weather for visitors to take lunch outdoors.

The market offers three things that keep it in competition with other food purveyors, said Leese.

First, consumers can find unusual varieties of foods that they may not be able to find elsewhere. Second, personal service, always important to customers, is a constant because the standholders are available for questions about the merchandise. Third, high quality merchandise produces a loyal customer base, he said.

CSA Workshop

A community supported agriculture (CSA) workshop provided participants with ideas as speakers shared their experiences with CSA, also called subscription farming.

Managers of a CSA sell memberships farm to community members who pay a set fee and come to pick up produce.

Mike Baki, Blairstown, N.J., shared information about the community supported garden at Genesis Farm in Blairstown. Since 1988, the garden has allowed members to help take responsibility for operating the farm and enjoy cultivating and eating the food.

With the CSA system, consumers have a better grasp of agriculture, can enjoy fresh produce, and can help financially support a local farm.

At Genesis Farm, which covers approximately 51 acres of land, the majority of work is done by a small team of gardeners. Three greenhouses not only provide a longer growing season but also produce greens during the winter. An orchard and 10 acres of biodynamic vegetables and berries round out the farm.

A gardenhouse, complete with a root cellar, also serves as a distribution area. Much of the construction of the building was accomplished through shareholders providing gifts or no-interest loans.

The farm sells approximately 100 family shares. A family share averages about 19 pounds of vegetables each week.

In addition members can opt for single shares. Either way, the members can chose full-year or summer and winter shares.

During the summer, family shareholders pick up the food once a week and single shareholders pick up every other week. Seasonal produce, fresh herbs, and flowers are among the offerings, which will be joined by fruit in the future.

December greens are supplemented by homemade sauerkraut and freshly-ground cornmeal.

The abundance sometimes provides a quandary for the gardeners. "There are so many vegetables that people don't know about," said Baki. "Cooking is a lost art — we're constantly training people."

The farm is also cooperating with other farms to sell eggs and cheese and will possibly expand into grains.

Diversity is key in dealing with crop failures and insufficiencies, said Baki. "Last year we had trouble with eggplant, but it's hardly noticeable because there are 11 other things there."

In addition Matt Steiman, organic farm manager for the Fulton Center for Sustainable Living, based at Wilson College, Chambersburg, gave a review of their operation. The center has a core group of volunteers so the gardeners can focus less on administrative and more on agricultural tasks. Steiman has a goal of getting more members to take on responsibilities of the CSA, such as the newsletters or computer work, in exchange for a break on the cost of a share.

He advised conducting meetings with the members, which made the business arrangement less of a customer and more "people-to-people" relationship.

The center also collaborates with nearby farms to sell bread, eggs, cheese, and meats. Although it's a service to the CSA, the farmer should still make a profit, said Steiman, to cover the administrative aspect of the arrangement.

Because the center grows more food than necesary for their own shareholders, they also participate in a farmers market. However "in case of drought, members come first," he said.

Dr. Richard George, St. Joseph's University, addressed changing consumerism and delighting customers.

Food consumed at home takes up approximately seven percent of the average American's disposable income, said George, and is growing at a rate of less than two percent a year. Also there are fewer components, or ingredients and side dishes, in each meal. In the 1960s, for example, there are seven components compared to today's meal of 1-2 components.

"You have to address how people are changing. You can no longer say, 'I wish it wasn't that way,'" he said.

"Here's the interesting part — only 10 percent of those surveyed don't like or don't know how to cook. We just haven't helped people. If we're in the food business, how are we helping them? What we can do for the new moms and working moms? What's the opportunity?"

He highlighted the fact that shoppers say that they do not want to go to supermarkets, a fact that farm stand owners should capitalize on. "How do we make shopping fun or easier?" he said. "It's about solving customer problems."

Post a weekly meal planner or pair produce with complements, such as cool whip with strawberries.

Besides providing planning solutions, another way a farm stand can have an edge on competition is by customer service.

"We aren't doing them a favor by waiting on them — it's our job," said George. "Ask the customers how you could serve them better. Ask them what frustrates them about your service. What would they like you to do more of? Less of?

"Look at complaints as opportunities and profit from them. They can tell the difference between personal and assembly-line treatment."

A satisfied customer is still willing to listen to your competition, he said. However "a delighted customer is a walking billboard."

Good business is not just making a sale, it is developing the loyalty of that consumer.

"The goal is customer delight, not profit. We're trying to bring people back," he said.

Chuck Brunner, York, of Brunner's Exotic Fruits, is joined by Dan Leese, manager of the York Market House, and York Market House board member Tony Dobrosky, right.

Storybook Exhibit Showcases Farm Life History In Southwestern Pa.

display at the Somerset Historical Center in Somerset County.

"People made the patterns on the land," said Barbara Black, curator at the center, located off Rt. 601 north on Rt. 985 a few miles north of Somerset. "This is not just an exhibit about farming, but about the people and how their lives were improved by farming. People continued to change the pattern on the land throughout history and they will continue to change those patterns through time."

The winding storybook about the farmers in southwestern Pennsylvania begins with Native American culture and ends at the age of modern farming in the 1970s, intertwining 200 artifacts, 1,500 graphics and photographs, sound effects, telephone interactive sites, life casts similar to mannequins, and even a simulated maple tree being tapped for sugar water.

"What we have tried to do is tell a truthful story of how life really was, and not embellish it with too much nostalgia," said Black. "This is not necessarily an exhibit that reminds one of 'Little House on the Prairie,' but a more accurate view of life in southwestern Pennsylvania."

The Somerset Historical Center, a Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission (PHMC) site, has been based at the location along Rt. 985 north of Somerset for more than 30 years, and includes an expansive 165 acres. The late Dr. Earl O. and Elizabeth "Betty" Haupt, local historians from Somerset and founders of the Somerset County Historical and Genealogical Society, donated three acres to the state commission, along with an additional purchase of acreage by the commission, to provide enough land to build a center in 1970.

After their deaths in 1985 for Earl and 1990 for Betty, the Haupts' legacy included the donation of their home and property, which provided 135 acres for the Historical Society. In the meantime, the society and commission were able to purchase additional acreage, all of which creates a spacious location rich for development and a unique agreement between the commission and society to work together to preserve the history of Somerset County.

In 1997, part of the older center was replaced with a grand, steel-framed museum simulated to look like a big red barn. Center staff began working to put together an interpretive exhibit, including farmsteads. For the past 33 years, the Mountain Craft Days Festival, a well-attended event highlighting old-fashioned crafts and demonstrations, has been conducted every September as a community outreach and major fundraiser for the site.

"Mountain Craft Days serves as our single largest visitation weekend," said Black. "Craft Days visitors said what a top-notch exhibit it was, and many remarked that they would need to come back because there is so much to see. So many local people said, 'I learned things about this area that I never knew before'."

After viewing a 13-minute orientation video, visitors are warmly welcomed into the exhibit with a mural-size photograph of a 1907 barn raising at the Joe Miller Farm in Bakersville, Somerset County. In this particular photograph, farmers, their wives and children alike wave for the purpose of the photograph as they are scattered throughout the framing of the massive barn.

This exhibit begins first with the very first farmers in the county, the Monongahela Native Americans, prehistoric gatherers and permanent farmers who lived year-round in the area from about 900 to 1625 A.D. A scaled model of a Monongahela hut done by Crissman Studios in Pittsburgh was done in conjunction with the leading expert on Monongahela culture, Dr. Richard George of Carnegie Mellon, Pittsburgh. In addition, artifacts found from a recent archaeological dig in Meyersdale are also on display as reminders of these ancient agriculturalists.

Then, the exhibit moves into Settling the Frontier (1750-1820), when the first Europeans crossed the Allegheny Mountain. Life-size models, called life casts, of a young frontier couple become visible around one of the first corners. At that phase in time, settlers made one of the foremost impressions the land by cutting down old growth forests and settling into the wilderness. Also, conflict made its impression upon the land when struggle arose between the British and the French in the French and Indian War, and also between the settlers and Britain during the Revolutionary War.

Although photographs were nonexistent prior to the late 1800s and original research was difficult to find for the earlier portions of the exhibit, visitors can explore reproductions of ledgers, books, and diaries and compact on milk pricing in regions outside the Northeast, according to Bailey.

A reaper, fanning mill, and corn sheller are just some of the many items that tell the historical story of farming in southwestern Pennsylvania in an exclusive exhibit called "Patterns On the Land: Farming In Southwestern Pennsylvania." Here, Vernon Berkey, president of Historical and Genealogical Society of Somerset County, right, Charlie Fox (at the phone), administrator at the Center, and Barbara Black, curator, look over some of the tools.

Senate Farm Bill

Federal payments to dairy farmers in other parts of the country will be based on a five-year moving average.

Bailey's written explanation of the Northeast Dairy Program follows:

The farm level payment rate is equal to the difference between $16.94 per hundredweight (CWT) and the announced Class I price for Federal order 1 in Boston. If the announced price is less than $16.94, the difference is multiplied by 45 percent to reflect Class I utilization in the Northeast market. No payment is made if the Class I price rises above $16.94 per CWT.

Suppose the Class I price of milk in Boston in a given month is $15.94 per CWT. The program payment would be equal to $0.45 (($16.94 - $15.94) X 0.45). No program payments are made if the monthly Class I price for milk in Boston exceeds $16.94 per CWT.

Producers under this program face annual production caps of eight million pounds per farm per year.

That's equivalent to the amount of milk from a farm with a little more than 400 cows. The program also has a budget ceiling of $500 million over the four year life of the program.

A recent Penn State University study analyzed this dairy title.

A summary of the results of the study follows:

• First-year effects: The annual average farm payment rate for the first year of the program is estimated to be $0.77 per CWT.

Farms with 50 cows would receive $5,791; farms with 100 cows would receive $11,582.

Total outlays the first year are estimated to be $15.5 million for Vermont, $68.4 million for Pennsylvania, $69.8 million for New York; and a total of $176.4 million for the 12 Northeast dairy states.

• Years 2-4: The annual average farm payment rate is estimated to be $0.57 per CWT over this period, ranging from $0.18 to $0.96 per CWT, depending on market conditions.

Given an average payment rate of $0.57 per CWT, a farm with 50 cows would receive $5,130 a year and a farm with 100 cows would receive $10,260.

The annual cost of the program would be $62.8-$252.1 million depending on market conditions, averaging $157.5 million per year.

Other dairy provisions in the Senate Farm Bill include:

• Extending the dairy price support program at the current level of $9.90 per CWT

• Authorizing a new national Johne's disease control program

• Extending the Dairy Export Incentive Program (DEIP)

• Increasing Market Access Program (MAP) funds

• Fixing the statutory mandatory inventory and price reporting language to prevent further costly reporting errors by the USDA

• Requiring dairy importers to pay their fair share into the National Dairy Board for promotion and research projects.

Provisions for Other Programs and Commodities

The Senate Farm Bill also:

• Prohibits large meat packers from owning livestock more than 14 days prior to slaughter.

• Limits farm payments to $225,000 for individuals.

• Increases conservation, nutrition, and rural development funding.

• Mandates country-of-origin labeling of fresh produce, meats, peanuts, and farm-raised fish.

• Prohibits confidentiality clauses in agricultural contracts.

• Limits the amount of funding corporate CAFOs receive.

• Bans mandatory arbitration for farmers seeking legal recourse in contractual situations.

• Increases marketing loan rates.

• Eliminates formula loan rates.

• Bases assistance on current production, yields, and market prices.

• Provides greatest countercyclical loan assistance during low price periods.

• Provides assistance to farmers and ranchers suffering weather-related crop and livestock feed losses.

• Provides retroactive reauthorization of bankruptcy protection for farmers and ranchers.

• Expands programs to alternative commodities such as peas, lentils, and chickpeas.

The final version of the Farm Bill will be hammered out by the joint House and Senate conference committee.

Storybook Exhibit Showcases Farm Life History In Southwestern Pa.

the exhibit experience itself is made more realistic with sound effects, such as birds chirping, the chopping sound of cutting trees, and leaves rustling. Fabrications of a portion of a log home, the temporary structure and then the permanent one, guide visitors to the basic concept of frontier home living.

In the 1820-1880 section, better tools made life easier. A fanning mill, a reaper, and a grain cradle are on display. As America grew into a more productive society, trades became more popular, including coopering, blacksmithing and pottery, all of which are displayed.

From 1880 to 1920s, farming became an industry. The Frick thresher and Frick steam engine in this section are impressive testaments to this age of growth. Railroading, mining, and logging became part of the agricultural landscape as well.

Also, the exhibit highlights three nationally known enterprises unique to southwestern Pennsylvania: linenmaking, Glades buttermaking, and maple sugaring.

According to Black, one of the unique things about the southwestern Pennsylvania farmer is that he was diversified.

"In the early days, the farmer had to be a jack of all trades and he relied upon his neighbors for help," said Black. "Farmers also acted as part-time tradesmen, whether it be blacksmithing, coopering, or maple sugaring. His family was also very busy with buttermaking and linenmaking. It's hard to believe all that they did in one day."

The interpretive exhibit in the barn-like museum doesn't stop there. Visitors also have the opportunity to tour the grounds where a 1773 homestead has been erected with a rebuilt log cabin and the 1800s log house, once owned by the late Adam Miller, is located. In future years, when everything is completed, there will be a 1860s and 1920s farmstead.

"The exhibit serves as an introduction to the farmsteads six months out of the year and the other six months it stands alone," said Black. "The mission of this whole exhibit is to tell the story of farming in relationship to the bigger picture, which includes transportation, trades, economics, local industry, and recreation. It's a great experience for families, young and old alike, and definitely time well spent whether you are from the local area or from a distance."

The Farmall farm tractor is usually a favorite piece at the farming exhibit at the Somerset Historical Center and serves as a testament to the modern, industrial age of farming.

Southwest Pennsylvania To Host Regional Dairy Day

GREENSBURG (Westmoreland Co.) — A consulting veterinarian and dairy management specialist from Arizona will be featured at the Southwest Regional Dairy Day here March 14.

Dr. Tom Fuhrmann grew up on a small dairy farm in Wisconsin and went on to become a veterinarian. He has consulted with various large dairy operations, including a 15,000 cow dairy in the Middle East and several 500-1,500 cow dairies in the U.S. and Mexico.

He developed DairyWorks Management System, a program that helps producers increase profitability by helping ensure that workers are making the right "cowside decisions."

Fuhrmann will be the featured speaker for the daylong event, which also includes a trade show.

The seminar will take place at Mountain View Inn, Greensburg, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Registration is $10. Deadline is March 11. Call your Southwest region extension agent for more details.

Western Pa. Sheep Symposium March 1-2

WASHINGTON (Washington Co.) — A two-day symposium for sheep producers will be conducted March 1-2 at the Meadow Lands Holiday Inn in Washington County.

Sponsored by the Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Growers Association and other state organizations, the symposium includes a program on Friday with sessions about activities of the association and workshops addressing pasture design and wool marketing strategies.

Saturday's program will begin with a choice of concurrent sessions addressing an introduction to sheep production and lambing management or forage plant establishment and species selection. Updates on the scrapie eradication program and the wool market and a lamb marketing panel discussion will make up the afternoon session.

There will be a trade show of sheep equipment and supplies on Saturday. Early registration fees are $5 for Friday evening and $20 for Saturday. Lunch on Saturday, refreshments, and educational materials are included in the registration fees. Late and walk-in registrations will be accepted as space allows for $6 and $25.

Clean and Green Act Meetings Set

NEW CASTLE (Lawrence Co.) — The Clean and Green Act 319, or more formally, the Pennsylvania Farmland and Forest Land Assessment Act, was initiated in 1974 and most recently amended by Act 156, in 1998. The purpose of the act is to help preserve farm and forestland by offering special use based property tax rates, in exchange for landowner commitment to preserve the land resource.

Sponsored by a joint effort of the Penn State Cooperative Extension, Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, Lawrence County Conservation District, and the Pennsylvania Granges, meetings conducted last October informed area farmers about the "Clean and Green Act." Reassessments for property tax valuations in Lawrence County are soon to be completed. It will then be time for landowners to decide on whether to enroll in "Clean and Green."

Two additional meetings have been scheduled to explain "Clean and Green" and to assist landowners, who wish to enroll, complete their application.

The first meeting will be at the Westfield Grange, located on Rt. 108 just west of Mt. Jackson, from 1 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. March 7.

The second meeting will be at the Liberty Grange, Rt. 108, about five miles west of Harlansburg, from 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. March 7.

The purpose of the meeting is to explain how the Clean and Green Act works. It will include information on both the tax benefits and the landowner obligations.

Dan Brockett, community development agent from Venango County, will be the principal speaker.

This is a meeting that no farm landowner should miss because the farm real estate taxes you pay are likely to change following reassessment. Reassessment in Lawrence County is scheduled to be completed before April 2002, with new valuations applying to 2003 tax year. Clean and Green may be the principal means that landowners have to help counter the farm and forestland property tax increases that may result. You may be able to reduce any increase in your taxes from the information to be presented at this meeting.

For more information regarding these meetings, contact Bill Chess at the Lawrence County Cooperative Extension office, (724) 654-8370.

Cattlemen To Meet

MERCER (Mercer Co.) — The annual meeting of the Northwest Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association will be conducted at the Mercer County Extension Center Monday, March 4.

There will be a braised steak dinner starting at 7 p.m. Cost is $7 per person.

The program for the evening will be presented by Dr. David Wolfgang, Penn State University, veterinarian. Wolfgang will be discussing "Forage Quality" — Winter Rations And Animal Health."

Learn How To Improve Or Start A Landscaping Or Other Green Industry Business

STROUDSBURG (Monroe Co.) — The 2002 Northeast Region Landscape Seminar II, sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension and the Small Business Development Center of the University of Scranton, will be conducted Wednesday, Feb. 27.

"Professionalism in Horticulture" is the main topic of the day. The seminar will be at the Clarion Hotel in Stroudsburg, Monroe County. Registration will start at 8:30 a.m. and the program will finish at 3:45 p.m.

This program will focus on cash flow management, marketing, plant selection for peculiar sites, landscaping and contracts, controlling weeds; and a discussion on acquiring a pesticide applicator's license.

An excellent roster of speakers includes Dr. Rick Bates, Dr. Jim Sellmer, and John Becker, JD from Penn State; Kristin Maile from the Small Business Development Center, Glen Jacobsen from Jacobsen Landscape Design in N.J., and Chris Santore will be presenting a pesticide update. Training credits for pesticide applicator's recertification will be available — both core and category credits will be awarded.

Call the Monroe County Cooperative Extension office at (570) 421-6430 for a registration brochure. Registration fee (including lunch) is $30, and must be returned by Feb. 20 to Monroe County Cooperative Extension, 4499 Route 611, Stroudsburg, PA 18360.

AGRICULTURE
THE GRAIN OF OUR ECONOMY

Shenandoah Valley Bred Ewe And Club Lamb Sale Upcoming

HARRISONBURG, Va. — The fifth annual Shenandoah Valley Bred Ewe and Club Lamb Sale will be conducted Saturday, Feb. 23, at the Rockingham County Fairgrounds, Harrisonburg, Va.

Take exit 243 off I-81 to Route 11 South. The fairgrounds are one mile on the right.

Beginning at 11 a.m., there will be 10 ewes with lambs. Following will be 70 bred ewes consisting of club lamb type, Suffolks and commercial crossbreds. The ewes will be pregnancy checked and inspected for health, quality, and soundness by a review committee, and will be sold in small groups of up to five head.

At 1 p.m., fall born club lambs will be offered for sale. Many ewe lambs will also be available in this offering. Most of the lambs will weigh 60-90 pounds. The lambs must meet quality and health requirements to be in the sale.

Sheep equipment and supply vendors will be on hand. Lunch, prepared by the Virginia Junior Sheep Breeders, will be available for purchase.

Sale day phone number at the fairgrounds is (540) 434-1002. For more information prior to the sale, contact Mike Carpenter, Virginia Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services, Harrisonburg, at (540) 434-0779.

Dairy And Grain Outlook Teleconference Set

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Are dairy and grain prices up or down? Has the Farm Bill passed? If you have these and other questions, then the Penn State Dairy & Grain Outlook Teleconference is for you.

The Penn State Dairy & Grain Outlook Teleconference will be conducted Thursday, March 7, 2002 from noon to 1:30 p.m. Lou Moore and Ken Bailey, Penn State economists, will talk from State College over the conference phone in each of the participating areas.

Regional contacts for the teleconference include extension agents from Bradford, Cambria, Clarion, Fayette, Lancaster, Potter, Tioga, Indiana, Warren, Washington, and Westmoreland counties.

Participants from those areas will have a chance to ask questions about the topics that are presented. The scheduled presentation will be on the general economy, grain outlook, dairy markets, and update on the Farm Bill policy outlook. Call your extension agent to register to attend the location nearest you.

MOISTURE LEVELS AFFECT FEEDING RATES, MILK PRODUCTION AND FEED PRICES

Glenn A. Shirk
Extension Dairy Agent, Lancaster

Whether they realize it or not, dairy producers are really in the business of adding value to feeds by converting them into milk, meat and cattle for sale, and cows are the factories that make this possible. To accomplish this feat, cows have to consume high quality dry matter, and lots of it!

The first increment of dry matter a cow consumes is used to meet her maintenance and pregnancy needs and to produce the amount of milk necessary to cover her share of the farm's basic overhead and operating costs. Think of this as the break-even level of production. The next increment of milk she produces moves you into the profit zone — it will be the cheapest milk you produce. Go for it!

About the only expense of producing this additional milk is the feed needed to produce it. Each additional pound of dry matter you can get into the cow should produce about 2.5 pounds of additional milk. If the milk price is $13 ($0.13 per pound), that should generate $0.32 of income, and if the pound of dry matter costs $0.08, that's a 4-to-1 return — not bad!

This emphasizes the importance of dry matter intake (DMI) to dairy profits, to the importance of knowing what cows are actually consuming, and to the importance of making ration adjustments to compensate for changes in moisture content of feeds. The potential impact of moisture changes is greater on higher moisture feeds than on drier feeds, and if ration adjustments are not made, it can affect milk production by 5-10 pounds per day, as indicated in the following.

First of all, let's look at what appears to be a rather insignificant, 5 percent change in moisture content of a wet feed such as corn silage, and compare it to a dry feed such as hay. If the moisture content of a silage increases from 60 percent up to 65 percent, that drops the DM level from 40 percent down to 35 percent. That's a 12.5 percent decrease in DM content (5 / 40 = 0.125).

Now, let's look at this same 5 percentage unit change in moisture of hay, switching from a 10 percent moist hay to a 15 percent moist hay. That changed the DM levels of the hay being fed from 90 percent to 85 percent, and represents an 5.5 percent change in the DM level of the hay being fed (5 / 90 = 0.055).

Let's carry both of these moisture changes over to the ration and assume that feeding rates were not changed from the 40 pounds of corn silage and the 20 pounds of hay that had being fed originally. That means corn silage DMI dropped 2 pounds and hay DMI by 1 pound. The calculations are (40 pounds of silage × 0.05 drop in percent DM = 2) and (20 pounds hay × 0.05 drop in percent DM = 1). This combined 3 pounds drop in silage and hay DMI could result in a 7.5-pound drop in milk. With milk at $13 per CWT, that amounts to a $0.98 drop in income per cow per day!

This change in moisture affected the forage component of the ration, which means fiber levels may now be inadequate, and we could be headed for some real costly metabolic problems. So is that "insignificant" 5 percent change in moisture worth getting excited about? You be the judge. But, if I were the judge, I would say "you bet!"

Adjusting Feed Prices For Variations In Moisture Content

Generally speaking, feeds are valuable for the DM they contain, not for their moisture. So, how do you adjust feed prices to compensate for variations in moisture content? It becomes rather simple if you focus on the DM content of the feeds in question.

Let's use corn silage as an example. If 60 percent moist silage is priced at $25 per ton, and I have a chance to buy some 70 percent moist silage, how much is the 70 percent silage worth? Remember, you're actually buying dry matter, and in this case it is 30 percent DM silage. So, let's compare the dry matters of the two silages and price them accordingly.

The formula is the DM of what you want to buy, divided by the DM of the reference feed, times the price of the reference feed, equals the adjusted price. Or, in this case it is: 30 / 40 × $25 = $18.75. The wetter silage has only ¾ as much DM as the 60 percent moist silage, so it is worth only ¾ as much, or $18.75 per ton.

In addition to moisture, you also need to consider the feed's other traits and qualities. In the above example, if I were looking at 50 percent moist silage, it would have more dry matter, but would it be worth more? Maybe not, because it may be too dry to have good digestibility and energy values and to store well.

Pennsylvania Horse Expo To Take Place At Fort Washington

FORT WASHINGTON (Montgomery Co.) — The second annual Pennsylvania Horse Expo is coming March 8-10 to the Fort Washington Expo Center (Hall "B") in Fort Washington.

As one of the northeast's premier horse expositions the three-day show will offer an all-star cast of nationally-recognized trainers, competitors and other horse-related professionals. The event will have something for everyone — with three venues — Equiposium (demonstrations, seminars and interactive opportunities); Equitasia (entertaining evening performances); and Equiporium (marketplace of quality vendors).

A full schedule of demonstrations, seminars, riding clinics, entertaining shows and educational discussions will take place throughout this eagerly anticipated horse extravaganza. During each session visitors will have the opportunity to meet and talk with numerous equine experts who will share with visitors a lifetime of riding and training knowledge, new techniques for understanding your horse, riding tips and horsemanship skills.

The Pennsylvania Horse Expo will offer horse people the opportunity to learn from the best in their field. Headlining clinicians who will share their knowledge include Clinton Anderson, Richard Shrake, Curt Pate, Cleve Wells, Chris Irwin, Vitor Silva, Joan Palmer, Garth and Kathy Rumsmoke, KC La Pierre, Jock and Ivana Ruddock among others.

Topics covered will include western and English horsemanship, breaking and training your horse, dressage, reining, trail riding, cutting, horseshoeing, and massage therapy.

The expo hours will be Friday, March 8, 4-9 p.m.; Saturday, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.; and Sunday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Admission is $8 per day for adults and $5 per day for children ages 7-12. Parking is free.

As an added bonus, "Hall A" will feature the eighth annual Greater Philadelphia Pet Expo for pet lovers. Combination tickets for both shows will be available at the ticket booths for an additional $2.

Trucker Quality Assurance (TQA) Program Set To Begin

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Although many livestock haulers are already aware of the upcoming program, it is now official: the Trucker Quality Assurance Program (TQA) is about to be formally put into action.

A program designed specifically for transporters of pigs, the two-hour TQA course educates truckers on how to properly haul, load, and transport pigs.

"The pork industry is trying to send a message that they are proactive with animal handling issues," said Tom Moyer, supervisor of procurement operations for Hatfield Quality Meats.

The program is an effort to "close the link between the producer and the packer that has not been addressed as well as other links," said Lancaster County livestock extension agent Chet Hughes.

After a year and a half in development by a committee comprised of National Pork Board, livestock industry, and packing industry representatives, the program began with two training courses in Baltimore, Md., and Des Moines, Iowa, last December. At the two venues instructors learned how to conduct the certification course.

Approximately 200 participants, including representatives from Penn State, Ohio Pork Board, packing companies, and PIC International, attended the one-day event. Additionally another course will be offered in Des Moines.

In January, as databases were completed, the National Pork Board gave the go-ahead to certifiers to begin training truckers. Besides putting more money in the pockets of producers, it will optimize pork products for consumers.

According to National Pork Board information, each year bruising alone results in $48 million in trim loss. In addition processing plants lose 40 cents to one dollar per pig due to shrinkage caused by mishandling and stress.

"I always tell producers, 'you do such a good job getting pigs ready for market. If you don't do a good job sorting and loading, that effort can be lost,'" said Hughes. "Also the trucker has a responsibility to get the hogs there safely and humanely as possible."

Said Moyer, "Producers can save by good animal handling practices, since they are responsible for animals which arrive dead on the truck — they retain ownership until the animal goes through processing." Additionally, with less stress on the animals or bruising resulting from poor animal handling, farmers will receive more money for a better, less-damaged product.

TQA "hits the mental aspect of transporting animals," said Moyer. "That's where responsible handling practices start. Drivers spend a lot of time on the road with other people who may not be driving as they should, and pigs may not want to cooperate. This works on helping them keep control of their emotions and attitude."

Although "truck drivers in this area are some of the best I've seen, and really do want to do a good job," said Moyer, the program will still provide a valuable learning opportunity.

Part of TQA centers on the animals' point of view, "so drivers can put themselves in the animals' place to understand if the animal is not moving, why it's not, if there's a shadow or a chain clanging overhead."

Besides reducing pig stress, information will also include loading in extreme weather conditions, techniques to handle downer or slow pigs, and cleaning and truck washes.

Hatfield will require every driver that hauls pigs into the plant to be TQA certified by, tentatively, Jan. 1, 2003. Producers who send animals to the plant must be Pork Quality Assurance (PQA) Level Three certified.

The two-hour class, which includes a Power Point presentation and video, will be followed by a multiple-choice exam. The National Pork Board will grade the test (a passing grade is 90 percent or above) and provide the official certification.

The course includes information on loading and unloading, transportation, and biosecurity.

The first three certification classes will be conducted at the Farm and Home Center, Lancaster.

Participants can chose any session.

Dates and times will be as follows:

- April 5 — 6-8 p.m.
- April 6 — 9-11 p.m. and 12-2 p.m.

Call Hatfield at (800) 523-5291 ext. 8448 to register. Class size will be limited to 30 people.

"We've been doing things the same way for so long, we have to change our thought patterns as far as animal handling goes," said Moyer.

Lancaster Conservation District Banquet March 14

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The board of directors of the Lancaster County Conservation District invites the general public to the 51st annual banquet Thursday evening, March 14, at 6:30 p.m. at Yoder's Restaurant, New Holland.

Each year during the annual banquet, the district board recognizes individuals and organizations who have contributed to natural resource conservation within the county. This year's award presentations will recognize outstanding conservation activities in the areas of agriculture, construction, community and public service, and youth education.

Tickets are $14 each and can be purchased from the district office by calling (717) 299-5361, ext. 5.

2001 Good Growth Year For Land O'Lakes, CEO Says

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — Land O'Lakes, Inc., achieved positive business performance, completed significant strategic growth, and developed market momentum in 2001, according to its CEO Jack Gherty,

The national food and agricultural coooperative's focus this year will be on performance as well as growth, Gherty said.

"We've achieved competitive size in and scale in ag services, and our focus for 2002 will be performance," he said.

Land O'Lakes growth initiatives included an Agriliance joint venture in the agronomy division and a Land O'Lakes Farmland Feed joint venture in 2000.

Last October, the corporation acquired Purina Mills, Inc.

Gherty pledged that the corporation would also be expanding its dairy foods categories in an effort to climb out of Land O'Lakes position as the 21st largest food company in the nation.

"You will see us bring the same passion to growing our dairy foods business as we have to agronomy and feed," he said.

Jim Fife, board chairman, said Land O'Lakes dairy foods initiatives in 2001 included the creation of alliances and joint ventures with Alto Dairy Cooperative, Dairy Farmers of America, and Davisco Foods International.

"The board's commitment to growth and seeking markets for the future is necessary in today's rapidly changing business environment, as we respond to market trends and emerging opportunities," Fife said.

Dairy Cow Numbers Drop In 2001

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The 2001 milk production report for the U.S. shows a drop of 91,000 cows from the previous year, according to Ken Bailey, Penn State dairy economist.

States showing cow number losses included:

- Pennsylvania, down 18,000 head
- New York, down 14,000 head
- Vermont, down 3,000 head
- Minnesota, down 24,000 head
- Wisconsin, down 52,000 head.

Bailey called the decline "a major loss for the Northeast."

Store Provides Diversity, Quality Control Opportunity

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

Note: This feature is part of a series that highlights direct marketing operations. The businesses are a part of the Mid Atlantic Direct Marketing Conference tour. The conference was conducted Feb. 20-23 at the Holidome in York.

YORK NEW SALEM (York Co.) — Commuters driving through the York countryside have noticed a new addition to the roadside.

Twin Pine Farm Country Store, with its deli, produce, and lunch offerings, has proven to be an important outlet for Twin Pine Farm's beef and produce.

The Ilyes family farms between 600-700 acres and operates the 6,000-square foot market. In addition to beef, pork, and smoked products, the store has produce, a full bakery, food bar, dairy, and cheeses. The farm's famous bologna is also sold at the store.

The operation takes 30 employees, many of them full-time, to operate the farm and store. Bob Ilyes Sr. works at the store and his sons Bob Ilyes Jr. and Dennis work at the store and on the farm. Bob Ilyes Jr.'s wife Kathy works at the store and Dennis' wife Neta works at the butcher shop.

Merchandising of produce began in 1953, followed shortly thereafter with the butchering business "and it just snowballed from there," said Bob Ilyes Jr.

As with many of the direct marketing operations, diversity is key to the operation.

"We're lucky because we're so diversified that one thing can really fall off — for example, if we have a dry growing season — but we have other things that can carry it," he said.

The Mid Atlantic Direct Marketing Conference, conducted this week in York, allowed participants to tour operations such as Twin Pine Farm, York New Salem. Bob Ilyes, Jr., stands with part of the 450-500-head Piedmontese and Angus, Charolais, and Limousin crossbred beef herd. Beef and the farm's produce combine to draw customers to the family's nearby store. Photo by Michelle Kunjappu

In addition to the cow-calf herd supplying the store, 20 acres of orchards provides fresh produce. Cantaloupes, watermelons, tomatoes, peppers, and sweet corn are some of the produce that grows on 30 acres for the store. In July 2000, the first year the family marketed sweet corn, they quickly found that they could sell 100 dozen a day.

"The next year we planted more but found that it still wasn't enough," he said. Field corn, soybeans, and wheat are also grown on the farm's fields. Another example of the operation's diversity is the butcher shop's service of processing deer.

"We will probably process well over 1,000 deer this season," he said. "This is not a 40-hour-a-week job."

Beef Herd

Ninety percent of the 450-500-head herd are Piedmontese and Angus, Charolais, and Limousin crosses. "We can have meat anywhere from almost no fat to substantial marbling," said Ilyes.

Purebred Piedmontese bulls provide an almost no-fat, fine-grained meat popular with heart patients. Although some of the product raised and processed on the farm is marketed at the nearby Twin Pine Country Store, the meat is also taken to Eastern Market in East York once a week. According to Ilyes they process 4-5 of their own cattle a week.

The cow-calf operation has allowed the family to control the product "from the time they hit the ground until they hit the case," said Ilyes. Four full-time and 15 part-time employees operate the store. The new store has proven to be a successful operation perhaps because of location along a busy road, said Ilyes.

Marketing directly from the farm did not move as much product as the new store, which is located off of a heavily-trafficked road, now does.

The farm's country store provides an outlet for produce and beef grown on the farm.

The Ilyes family was, however, building from their already-established reputation when they introduced the store. "Once you have a good product out there, the customer base will keep growing," said Ilyes.

Bob Ilyes Sr., started the butchering business in the basement of his home. The shop was built in 1965 and has been expanded three times.

Four employees work on the field and livestock areas of the farm. Three employees work in the butcher shop, aided by part-time help during busy season — which is essentially every month but February, said Ilyes. Springtime's planting, summer's produce harvest, and fall's crop harvest plus deer season create a busy schedule for the family.

Bob Ilyes Sr., began with 60 acres and has expanded from there.

The deli is a popular stop for store customers.

Dairy Alliance Schedules Dairy Comp 305 Training

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Industry professionals interested in learning how to use Dairy Comp 305 to evaluate and troubleshoot dairy herd performance can register for a training session to take place at Penn State University Feb. 27 from 9:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m.

This training session is a component of the DHIA Information Analysis Training that has been developed by Penn State Dairy Alliance and faculty members from the Department of Dairy and Animal Science and the Veterinary Science Department.

The goals of this program are to: 1) improve participants' understanding of the key indicators of herd performance; 2) teach participants how to interpret paper DHIA reports using the key performance indicators; and 3) improve participants' skills in analyzing DHIA records through the use of various computer information systems. As a result of participating in this program, industry professionals will be better equipped to assist producers in the use and interpretation of the production information systems on their farms.

Industry professionals interested in learning to use Dairy Comp 305 should have a basic understanding of how to use paper records for interpreting herd performance and a basic knowledge of computers.

By offering this course to the professionals who serve Pennsylvania dairy producers, dairy alliance information management specialist, Brad Hilty, hopes to "enhance the use of information systems and the exchange of ideas for improving herd performance between dairy producers and their advisers." According to Hilty, "If every adviser that visits the farm is equipped with the skills to spot potential problems before they develop further, and is able to show the producer the economic benefits of correcting the situation, Pennsylvania producers will become more competitive. Our dairy industry will get stronger and continue to grow."

The DHIA Information Analysis program consists of five modules. They include:

- DIAT 201. Analysis of DHIA Records/Overview of PCDART and DairyComp 305
- DIAT 301. PCDART Training
- DIAT 401. Herd Analysis Case Study Using PCDART
- DIAT 302. DairyComp 305 Training
- DIAT 402. Herd Analysis Case Study Using Dairy Comp 305

The case study modules have been designed to provide participants the opportunity to work in teams and to use their newly learned skills to trouble shoot performance problems using data from an actual herd.

Future sessions are planned for:

- March 12 — DIAT 401. PCDART Case Study Analysis at Carlisle;
- March 19 — DIAT 201. Analysis of DHIA Records at Carlisle and Overview of PCDART and DC 305; and
- March 27 — Dairy Comp 305 Case Study Analysis at Penn State Campus.

Dates of other sessions planned for the future can be found on the Dairy Alliance Website at www.dairyalliance.org.

Registration is now being accepted for these training sessions. The cost to attend these sessions is $95 per individual per session. A discount of $225 for three sessions is available for individuals wishing to attend multiple sessions. Individuals or companies interested in attending one of these sessions, or agri-businesses interested in training for their field staff, should contact Dairy Alliance at (888) 373-PADA or e-mail Brady Hilty at bhilty@psu.edu.

Deer Management Seminar March 2

ROBESONIA (Berks Co.) — Rep. Sheila Miller (R-129) is hosting a deer management seminar with Dr. Gary Alt at 6 p.m., Saturday, March 2, at the Conrad Weiser High School in Robesonia.

"This is a great opportunity for sportsmen, farmer and others interested in the issue of deer management to learn first-hand about the changes Dr. Alt is suggesting to enhance the Commonwealth's deer herd," Miller said. "They will also have a chance to ask questions and voice their concerns or opinions about the plan."

Miller said Alt has been traveling to areas across the state talking to sportsmen about the state's new direction in deer management.

Among the issues Alt will discuss is a proposed change in antler restrictions that would require hunters in the majority of Pennsylvania counties to follow a three or more points to one antler restriction.

Alt is a world-renowned wildlife biologist and serves as the Game Commission's deer management section supervisor. He is widely regarded in the wildlife management profession for his studies of bear biology around the world.

There is no charge for admission to the seminar, and no registration is required. For additional information, please contact Miller's district offices at 2209 Penn Avenue in West Lawn, (610) 670-0139, or Rte. 419 and Rehrersburg Road in Rehrersburg, (717) 933-4686.

Silage Quality Results Reported At Lancaster Dairy Day

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Dairy producers heard the latest information on forage quality at an update exposition provided by the capital region dairy team here last week.

Results were released from a 2001 corn silage quality project, including corn silage sampled from 35 farms in the seven-county capital region.

A major goal of the project is to help farmers better anticipate the right time to harvest their corn silage, according to Glenn Shirk, Lancaster County dairy agent.

Harvesting at optimum plant moisture is key to quality silage, Shirk said.

"Forage quality starts in the field."

The corn silage quality project monitored the effects of harvesting practices and growing conditions on forage quality and feed value.

Dry-down rates and various heights of cut at harvest were also monitored on corn grown at Penn State's Landisville research farm.

Observations and results gathered from the study include:

- Milk line progression and stalk moisture levels are generally more reliable than percent "firing" of plants to indicate harvest date. In the earlier stages of firing, plants could still be making more top growth.
- When kernels are well developed and milk line begins to regress, whole plant moisture levels drop about 0.65 percentage units per day. If the current moisture level is taken, optimum harvest date can then be calculated.
- Harvesting outside the optimum 61 to 70 percent moisture range can have negative effects on forage quality.
- Sugar levels were too low for optimum fermentation when whole-plant moisture levels dropped too low. Desired minimum plant sugar levels are about four percent for corn silage with 40 percent dry matter. Low moisture levels in the silage also reduced digestibility, lowered energy levels, and reduced dry matter intake. Poorer packing also increased risk of spoilage and mycotoxins.
- In silages that are too wet, fermentation is prolonged and can deplete energy and protein content.

Corn silages cut at 6 inches and 18 inches were compared to evaluate cutting height effects on dry matter yield, nutrient content, and milk yield.

This study found that increasing the harvest height 12 inches decreased dry matter yield per acre by five percent; decreased nitrate levels; increased in-vitro digestibility; increased percent dNDF, DM, starch, and CP; and increased milk yield per ton of dry matter.

Net economic gains could be boosted by higher cutting and risk of nitrate toxicity may be reduced, the study found. Drought-stunted corn or specialty hybrids may behave differently.

The report concluded that chopping at the right moisture level is key to good fermentation and silage quality. Growers were advised to monitor corn dry-down frequently after kernels begin to dent by testing four or five stalks for moisture and calculating harvest date.

Optimum alfalfa moisture levels are about five percent less than that of corn silage, when storing in a conventional upright silo, bunker, or trench, according to Penn State data.

Farmers were urged to monitor silage pH to determine proper fermentation. The only tools needed are litmus paper, a cup, and a little water, the report noted.

If corn silage pH is between 3.5 and 4 percent, the silage likely underwent a good fermentation, according to the report.

Farmers also heard presentations on corn and alfalfa diseases and an update on available pesticides.

While silage additives are available for aiding fermentation and preservation of forages in storage, Shirk said they serve mainly as insurance measures. Good growing, harvesting, and storage practices are the most important, he said.

For more information on forage quality or to see study results, call your extension office.

Tri-County Conewago Creek Association To Meet Feb. 27

MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.) — More than 40 participants attended the kick-off meeting to launch a watershed group dedicated to the protection of the Conewago Creek. The next meeting is scheduled for Wednesday, Feb. 27, at 7 p.m. at the Londonderry Township Building, 783 South Geyers Church Road, Middletown.

"We were extremely pleased at the amount of interest in our first meeting," said Matt Royer, who is heading the initiative to form the group. "Obviously, this is an issue that many local citizens think is important. We had a full house and representation from local government, small business owners, conservation organizations, educational institutions and interested farmers and other landowners. Many individuals provided input as to how they would like to see the group reach goals. This will be an ambitious organization."

The citizens voted on a name for the watershed group — Tri-County Conewago Creek Association — and agreed to organize as a non-profit corporation. They have applied for a Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection "Growing Greener" grant for start-up costs. If awarded, the money will help achieve the group's goal of preserving, protecting and enhancing the water quality of the streams within the watershed.

The Conewago encompasses more than 50 square miles in parts of eight different municipalities in Lancaster, Dauphin, and Lebanon counties. Its headwaters are in Mt. Gretna and it discharges into the Susquehanna near the village of Falmouth. Almost the entire headwaters area is forested, and much of it runs through the State Game Lands surrounding Mt. Gretna. The middle and lower portions of the stream flow through many active farms and rural residential development.

Nearly all of the watershed has been recently assessed by Susquehanna River Basin Commission aquatic biologists on behalf of the commonwealth, and the majority of the watershed is impaired. It is too polluted to sustain the kind of fish and other aquatic life that it could if it was a healthy stream. Increased sediment and nutrients from agricultural runoff have been identified as the major cause of impairment.

Jennifer Hoffman, aquatic biologist from the SRBC, will be speaking at the Feb. 27 meeting about the stream assessment conducted for the Conewago. All are invited to attend.

Phase One of BQA Now In Session

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — A group of producers from Lancaster and surrounding counties participated in the phase one component of the Pennsylvania Beef Quality Assurance (BQA) program Monday evening at the Farm and Home Center.

Beef Quality Assurance is a program to ensure that both beef and dairy cattle are managed on the farm to result in safe, wholesome beef products. BQA also works to enhance carcass quality by preventing residues, injection site blemishes, and bruises.

The seminar was part of the two-part process required for BQA certification. Participants took and then turned in a test at the end of the two-hour class.

Besides attending the seminar and passing the test, they must attend the chute-side segment of the program. Certified producers receive a two-sided farm sign designating them a certified producer, plus a manual and ear tags.

The chute-side session will be conducted April 10 at B&R Cattle Co., Marietta.

Recertification is required every two years.

Certification also includes third-party verification component that will be administered through the commonwealth's veterinary department that includes seven regional veterinarians in Pennsylvania to check on producers.

"It's a good risk assessment from another set of eyes," said Paul Slayton, executive director of BQA and the Pennsylvania Beef Council (PBC). He added that the verification process is not to penalize but to assist certified producers.

Slayton and Bill McCoy, consultant to the program, conducted the meeting.

Since consumers are looking for uniformity and consistency in portion sizes, those same traits will become important in the cattle supplying the beef.

"It's not hard to see why there is trouble with consistency with 80-90 different breeds feeding into the system," said Slayton.

McCoy foresees that producers will find growing pressure from consumers and packers to put out a consistent product. In fact, said McCoy, packers will increasingly begin to "put genetics out in the form of bulls and contract the calves back for uniform, desirable carcass traits."

Tenderness and palatability are also important to consumers, said Slayton, who noted that producers have control over tenderness by ensuring that the animal is injected in front of the point of shoulder only. In addition, producers should administer less than 10 cc's per intramuscular injection site.

Slayton also said that using implants late in an animal's life may also decrease tenderness.

Palatability, another consumer issue, can be controlled by castrating young males as young as possible, by timely marketing — before the animal is too mature. By monitoring fat covering by sorting animals into like groups and custom feeding for the group's needs, a producer can sell a more consistent product.

According to the latest National Beef Quality Audit, the estimated potential loss in value because of defects avoidable with management is $47.10. This includes injection site blemishes, hide damage, bruises, and dark cutters.

Hide damage and bruising can be limited by not commingling horned and polled cattle, not throwing a gate into the side of the animal, making sure facilities do not have protruding objects such as broken boards or nails, and scored concrete for better footing.

Dark cutters may result from being implanted close to harvest, commingling different groups of cattle, and crowding.

To gain consistency and uniformity, producers should avoid extremes in choosing their animals, said Slayton. Also proper nutrition and prevaccination two to three weeks before weaning will help calves be ready to perform in the feedlot at the same rate.

"Basically all the carcass traits are highly heritable, so it's something we can have an impact on," said Slayton. "We can really change things from one generation to the next."

Recording performance and carcass data for your cattle is necessary for improvement, he said.

USDA Announces National Pork Producers Delegate Body Appointments

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture recently announced the appointments of 161 pork producers and six importers to the 2002 National Pork Producers Delegate Body. Appointees will serve a one-year term.

Established under the Pork Promotion, Research, and Consumer Information Act of 1985, the Delegate Body and the National Pork Board have implemented a national program designed to improve the pork industry's position in the marketplace.

The delegates were selected from nominees submitted by state pork producer association and importer groups.

Area appointed members include Robin T. James and John B. Tigner, Jr., Delaware; Charles T. Linthicum, Jr. and Thomas G. Hartsock, Maryland; William A. Mills, New Jersey; Ronald T. Seils and Richard C. Pedersen, New York; Anthony J. Bornhorst, Terry L. Johnson, Jim L. Albaugh, and Mark L. Stoller, Ohio; Herbert K. Schick, Oscar J. Manbeck, and David A. Reinecker, Pennsylvania; and Donald H. Horsley and Edward A. Scharer, Virginia.

Delegates meet annually to recommend the rate of assessment, determine the percentage of assessments that state associations will receive and nominate producers and importers to the 15-member National Pork Board.

Representation on the Delegate Body is based on annual net assessments collected on sales of domestic hogs within individual states with a minimum of two producers from each state. States have the option of not submitting nominees. Massachusetts, Vermont, and West Virginia did not submit any nominees and New Jersey only submitted one nominee this year. Importer representation is based on assessments on imported pork and pork products.

Holstein Club Sponsors Tour

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — The Lancaster County Holstein Club is sponsoring a tour of three of the top Holstein herds in Pennsylvania March 7 from 8 a.m. - 6 p.m.

The club will be leaving the Farm and Home Center in Lancaster. The cost of the tour is $25 per person, which includes a family style lunch in Lebanon.

The first stop will be at Adam and Lisa Sonnens. A strong influence of Browndale blood from Canada and classic American sires help them achieve a herd of uniform type built for longevity. This is the home of the reigning Lebanon County grand champion Holstein.

The second stop will be at Lyncrest, the home of Kirby and Sheryl Horst and family. In 1999 they won the distinguished young breeder award for Pennsylvania and went on to the national contest. They concentrate on breeding for three markets, high index, deep pedigree, and Red and Whites. They have sold 80 bulls to AI in the past 15 years.

Mastitis Management Seminar Set

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — An informative session on mastitis will be conducted Feb. 26, from 9:45 a.m.-1 p.m. at the Franklin County Cooperative Extension Office, Chambersburg. This is an extension sponsored educational meeting for dairy producers.

The speaker will be Dr. Arlen Mills, Capital Region extension veterinarian. Topics to be addressed include using SCC data to plan an approach to mastitis control, prevention, diagnosis, treatment protocols, and vaccines. Ample time will be allowed for discussion. Questions are welcome.

The cost is $5 per person, which includes lunch. Please call the extension office (717) 263-9226 by Feb. 25 indicating how many will be attending. A count is needed in order to make meal arrangements. Payment can be made the day of the meeting.

Agriculture Secretary Announces Chemsweep Deadline

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) —Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes announced the 2002 Chemsweep deadline and the Chemsweep collection counties.

"For nine years, the Department of Agriculture has provided the opportunity for farmers, greenhouse operators, homeowners and others to safely dispose of unwanted pesticides," Hayes said. "Pennsylvania Chemsweep provides a safe and free way to dispose of pesticides, and I encourage all to sign up by March 31."

Hayes noted that 18 counties are set to participate in collections this year. The counties are Bradford, Cameron, Clearfield, Clinton, Columbia, Cumberland, Elk, Fayette, Greene, Huntingdon, Lebanon, Luzerne, McKean, Potter, Schuylkill, Warren, Washington, and York.

Chemsweep is open to all farmers, growers, and agribusinesses with outdated pesticides. Most identifiable pesticides or agriculture-related products will be collected. Chemical disposal is at no cost to participating individuals.

Chemsweep collections will be in August. All participants will receive advance notice on the collection date and location in their area.

Winner of the Feb. 14 Dairy Days contest for a one-year subscription to Lancaster Farming was Arlin Mill, Lebanon.

Congratulations!

New York Beef Producers Association Bull Test Sale

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — The New York Beef Producer's Association is facilitating a Central Bull Testing program as a tool for evaluating and merchandising potential herd sires.

Following a 112-day feeding period, the top indexing bulls will be presented for sale on April 27 at the NYS Fairgrounds in Syracuse. The 56 bulls representing eight breeds are being fed and managed at Erwindale Farm in Waterloo. After 56 days on test, the cumulative average daily gain was 2.95 pounds, and the weight per day of age is 2.50 pounds.

Of the 56 bulls consigned, only 40 will sell. Bulls will not be allowed to sell if they fail exams for reproductive or structural soundness. Those that pass these exams will be indexed by average daily gain (ADG), weight per day of age (WDA), ultrasound measured backfat (BF), intramuscular fat (IMF) and ribeye area (REA). These factors will be weighted to represent their relative importance to the commercial industry: ADG, WDA and REA will make up 90 percent of the index, the remaining 10 percent to be placed on BF and IMF. Bulls that rank 90 or better will be eligible for sale.

Following the bull sale, 20 Empire Heifer Development Program certified heifers, and some select purebred females and club calves will be offered for sale. This will be an excellent opportunity to improve the genetics of an existing herd or begin a herd with some of the best cattle to be offered in the northeast.

To receive a sale catalog, or for more information, contact Bill Miller, Bull Test Manager at (585) 750-4663.

ADADC Officers Elected

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The American Dairy Association & Dairy Council Mid East Board of Trustees recently elected its 2002 officers.

Paul Broering, of St. Henry, Ohio, was re-elected to a fourth term as president. "I am proud to be a part of an organization that is continually seeking new opportunities and implementing cutting edge programs to build markets for milk," Broering said. Since 1984 when the program began, total milk sales have increased by 33 percent, and per capita consumption of all dairy products has increased by 11 percent. "The dairy promotion checkoff program drives demand for milk and cheese on behalf of American's dairy farmers," Broering said.

Others re-elected to office include Rita Kennedy, Valencia, Pa., vice president; Betty Herron, Salem, Ohio, secretary; and Ray Diebold, Altoona, Pa., treasurer. All officers were elected to serve one-year terms.

Passing On Farm Workshops In Carlisle And Lebanon

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — Even though transferring a farm to the next generations seems straightforward, tax traps, family issues, and lack of financing or business planning challenge many families attempting a transition.

To help Pennsylvania farm families, Pennsylvania Farm Link and Penn State Cooperative Extension will host "Passing on the Farm" workshops on March 5 at the Cumberland County Extension Office and on March 12 at the Lebanon County Extension Office.

Both workshops run from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Speakers will address bringing the next generation into the farm business, farm viability, farmland preservation programs, estate planning, legal aspects of transfers, retirement planning, financing for new farmers and crop insurance. In addition, farmers from the region will discuss their families' efforts to transfer their businesses to the next generation.

The Carlisle Passing on the Farm workshop is provided at no charge to farmers; lunch is on your own. Please call Pennsylvania Farm Link at (717) 664-7077 to make reservations for this workshop and for directions by March 4.

The Lebanon Passing on the Farm workshop includes lunch at a cost of $6 per person payable to Extension Special Fund. Please send payment for lunch to Lebanon County Extension Office, 2120 Cornwall Road, Suite 1, Lebanon, PA 17042, by March 8.

For more information on these programs or directions, phone the Farm Link office or e-mail pafarmlink@redrose.net.

Universities Offer Managers' Shortcourse

Horse Pasture Management School Also Upcoming

BETHLEHEM (Montgomery Co.) — Dr. Ann Swinker, Penn State equine specialist, Brian Egan, Penn State horse herdsman, and Eileen Wheeler, assistant professor of agricultural engineering at Penn State, will be among the key speakers at the upcoming equine shortcourse sponsored by the Penn Jersey Extension Partnership.

The program, entitled, "Equine Barn Managers' Shortcourse" will be conducted on Tuesday and Wednesday, March 12 and 13, from 9 a.m.-4 p.m. at the Holiday Inn in Bethlehem. Although the program is geared toward stable managers it is open to all interested horse owners, enthusiasts, and equine professionals.

Dr. Swinker will discuss arena footing and maintenance and share research results regarding dust control and health impacts on horses and riding instructors. She will also cover fencing options, costs and safety factors. Eileen Wheeler, author of several publications regarding horse facility design, will speak about barn design issues, safety features, ventilation needs, and making the most of what facilities you have.

Brian Egan, instructor and horse herdsman at Penn State, will cover horse safety and handling issues especially relating to working with boarders' and clients' horses. Since most stable managers need to deal with handling horses on a daily basis, they need to gain the respect of the horse and help their clients learn to do the same. The shortcourse will also help participants better understand liability concerns, contract issues, employee relations, and insurance needs.

The cost of the program is $80, which includes lunch and materials both days. For a registration form and program, contact Rutgers Cooperative Extension of Warren County, N.J., at (908) 475-6503, or the Penn State Cooperative Extension Office of Montgomery County, Pa., at (610) 489-4315.

Horse owners may also be interested in another offering from Cooperative Extension which will be a Horse Pasture Management School to take place on three consecutive Tuesday nights, March 5, 12 and 19, from 6:30 p.m.-9:30 p.m. at the Montgomery County 4-H Center in the Skippack area. This course is open to all horse owners and will feature everything from controlling poisonous plants and weeds to renovating new pastures.

Instructors will also cover animal needs (grazing versus turnout or exercise lots), the economics and value of good pasture, and understanding plant growth and soil fertility. Learn when to lime and how to take that soil sample. For more information on the pasture school, contact Nancy Kadwill, Penn State extension agent, at (610) 489-4315.

N.Y. Regional Farm And Food Project Offers Workshop

ALBANY (N.Y.) — Dozens of farmers' market vendors, managers, organizers, sponsors, and volunteers will gather here for a one-day peer workshop entitled "Building Stronger Farmers' Markets" Saturday, March 9 from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

The day's program will start with a keynote presentation by Andre Goncarovs, president of the Ithaca Farmers' Market, followed by panels and moderated discussions on key challenges faced by markets.

This gathering will give farmers' market leaders, participants, and supporters the chance to compare notes on many issues related to running a good market and sustaining it over time, as well as to network and form relationships. Another aim of the workshop is to help cultivate a next generation of market leaders.

The workshop will take place at St. John's Lutheran Church, 160 Central Avenue in Albany. The fee is $20 for registrations received by March 1, $25 for later registrations.

To receive a brochure or for more information, please contact the Regional Farm & Food Project, 148 Central Avenue, 2nd Floor, Albany, NY 12206; (518) 427-6537 or farmfood@capital.net.

NASS
Agriculture Counts
By Marc Tosiano
Pa. State Statistician

Editor's Note: This is a monthly column from the Pennsylvania Ag Statistics Service (PASS), a field office of USDA's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS) in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA). The Website is www.usda.gov/nass/.

DOES CROP INSURANCE MEET NORTHEAST NEEDS?

Specialty crop growers are sometimes unable to take advantage of current Crop Insurance programs. USDA's Risk Management Agency has been tasked with improving the risk management options for growers of specialty crops.

Penn State's Ag Economics Department and the National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS) have teamed up to measure the risks faced by specialty producers and how growers deal with those risks. The study is called "Risk Management Survey of Specialty Crop Producers."

Specialty crops include fruits, vegetables, horticultural crops, maple syrup, Christmas trees, turf, aquaculture, honey, mushrooms and others. All known growers of these crops have already received a survey in the mail. This amounts to about 7,500 growers across Pennsylvania. Specialty growers in New York, California and Florida are also be surveyed.

State averages will be summarized and provided to USDA's Risk Management Agency as they review the risk management tools that may be helpful to this segment of growers. If you received a survey, your response will help RMA to understand why crop insurance is used infrequently and how it can be improved to better serve growers of specialty crops in Pennsylvania and across the nation. Your mail return will avoid potential phone calls later. Beginning in March, we will be calling some of the nonrespondents in order have enough responses to make valid conclusions from the survey.

2001 Fruit Summary

then followed up with a set of X-rays. I felt that a very thorough job was done, and I got to know my new dentist.

Next I had the pleasure of a cleaning. Since this is very important to dental health, I knew it had to be done. When this visit was over, I knew that my dentist was going to be important to me. We discussed the removal of my wisdom teeth and also the possibility of needing braces to straighten a few of my bottom teeth. He prioritizes what needs to be done and proceeds in that order. Of course the wishes of the patient are also very important to him.

I always knew what was important to dental health; daily care and visits to the dentist. Now that I am a dairy princess and I have had the chance to learn about milk and milk products, I know nutrition is also very important. This applies not only to your general health, but to dental health as well. Children and adults need three servings of dairy products a day to have strong bones and teeth. Teens and older adults need four servings daily. This will insure that you have the needed calcium for strong bones and teeth, and also give you an additional eight nutrients needed for good health.

The next time you feel like you want a snack, try to eat a healthy one and perhaps use milk or dairy products. Some examples could be cheese and crackers, milk shake, vegetables and dip, bagel and cream cheese, and ice cream. A healthy snack will add to your dental health, and provide a strong future for your teeth and bones.

Big Spring FFA Conducts Degrees Ceremony

On Jan. 23, the Big Spring FFA conducted their Greenhand/Chapter degree ceremony.

To receive the Greenhand degree the member must say the FFA creed or be able to interpret the FFA creed.

In order to receive the Chapter degree the member must have the Greenhand degree. The person must have invested $150, and have 180 hours in their SAE project (record books). The member needed to complete one year of agricultural class.

The following six members received their Greenhand degree; Greg Crum, Ashley Duncan, Tori Fuller, Megan Kutz, Nate Merkle, and Jennifer Zinn.

Line Mountain Chapter Members Earn Keystones

The Pennsylvania FFA Association conducted its 73 Mid-Winter Convention at the Farm Show Complex Monday, Jan. 7. One of the highlights of their convention was presenting 247 members with the states highest degree of membership, the Keystone Degree.

Janette Strohecker and Timothy Lesher, both of the Line Mountain/Mahantango FFA Chapter were two of the recipients to receive the coveted degree.

The Manor FFA sent a four-man team, from left, Andy Grubb, Greg Shreiner, Joe Nadu, and Ling Do, with Coach Ben Mordan, to compete in the Lancaster County FFA Small Gas Engines conducted at Solanco High School. Seven different schools participated in the event and competition was tight. The contest included a written exam, ability to use a service manual to look up specifications and part numbers, tool and part identification, engine troubleshooting and repair, and customer service portions. Manor Team members who competed at the event included Greg Shriener, Joe Nadu, Andy Grubb, and Ling Do. In the team competition Manor members won second-place overall. Individually Andy Grubb took thrid place, while Joe Nadu captured fifth place. The second-place win as a team guarantees Manor members a trip to compete in the state competition scheduled in June at Penn State University.

The Association also presented 28 FFA Chapters with a Superior Award rating, and presented 20 families with Honorary Membership for having three or more children receive their Keystone Degree. Lesher's parents, Marlin and Dawn Lesher were one of the families to receive the Honorary Membership.

Lesher is the president of his FFA Chapter while Strohecker serves as vice president. Their chapter has organized numerous activities throughout the year including: holding a petting zoo at areas events, developing a contest to benefit Heifer International and participating in a bowl-a-thon to benefit the Line Mountain Food Bank.

FFA makes it REAL

The 2001 Pennsylvania 5-Acre Corn Club award-winner highlights are scheduled in the next issue of Corn Talk, March 2. The official publication of the Pennsylvania Corn Growers Association (PCGA) also features an interview with a grain service, highlights of the crops conference, and news from the PCGA and National Corn Growers Association.

Cimarron SR

ALFALFA

Cimarron SR is the latest advancement on the popular Cimarron line of alfalfa varieties. Cimarron SR combines high yield and quality with one of the most advanced pest resistance packages available.

High Yielding
Cimarron SR is the highest yielding Cimarron alfalfa ever released. In university testing this variety is consistently at the top of the trials.

Extra Leafy
Cimarron SR produces large leaves, and it holds its leaves better in the baling process. So you get more leaves in every bale. Break open a bale of Cimarron SR alfalfa and you will see the difference.

Advanced Pest Resistance
Cimarron SR offers one of the most advanced pest resistance packages available. High root rot resistance gives this variety longer stand life in problem soils. Cimarron SR offers several other advances including sclerotinia resistance and weevil tolerance

Sclerotinia Resistant
Sclerotinia crown rot attacks fall planted alfalfa in the early spring, weakening or killing stands. In some areas, farmers quit planting in the fall because of this disease Cimarron SR's sclerotinia resistance provides protection against spring stand loss.

HayGrazer

The High Yield Alfalfa For Hay and Grazing

HayGrazer is an advanced new alfalfa bred for hay and grazing. HayGrazer combines the high yields and forage quality of a top hay variety with excellent persistence under grazing.

Aggressive Branching Root System
HayGrazer was derived from a cross between a creeping-rooted alfalfa used for pasture in Siberia and our highest yielding hay variety. The Siberian creeper contributed winter hardiness, a heavy crown, and an aggressive branching root system, which resists trampling by grazing animals.

High Yield
HayGrazer has been a top yielding variety in university trials. HayGrazer combines high yields with top forage quality.

Advanced Pest Resistance
HayGrazer has a superior pest resistance package including tolerance to the alfalfa weevil. This advanced variety persists well in cold wet soils.

Silage Spreaders with a Heritage of Quality

Lancaster Level-Flo has been the leader in non-motorized silage spreaders for more than 25 years. Each spreader is specifically designed to meet the needs of the individual operator.

Choose the spreader that best matches the equipment you use to fill your silo.

The Model 1030 Multi-Flo® is our standard silage spreader With a 9" gooseneck, it is designed for average capacity blowers and silo sizes

The Model 1200 Multi-Flo' has a 12" wide gooseneck Its larger size all but eliminates plugging problems, even when you blow in haylage It is especially helpful in larger silos

The BlueMax® is built for those who push high-capacity silo filling equipment to the limit All parts of the BlueMax" subject to wear are made 25% heavier - and the stainless steel plate is twice as heavy For strength, there are reinforcements all around Even our well-known non-binding hinge is heavier

Conservation Results In Excessive Wildlife

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Early in the 1900s, when there were few deer and bears left in Pennsylvania, it became apparent that their populations would require protection and management for their survival. Now, 100 years later, according to a Penn State wildlife expert, it appears that these conservation efforts worked well — perhaps too well.

"The situation has changed," says Gary San Julian, professor of wildlife resources in the College of Agricultural Sciences. "We now have too many whitetailed deer in many places and our bear population has tripled in size during the last few decades."

Bear- and deer-damage complaints are significant, according to San Julian. The most important management tool for these species, sport hunting, is becoming less popular in many parts of the nation and fewer young hunters are joining the hunting ranks.

Pennsylvania so far has bucked that trend, actually selling more junior hunting licenses this year than ever before, according to Pennsylvania Game Commission spokesman Jerry Feaser. But even he worries about an apparent decrease in hunting pressure resulting in hunting being less effective as a game management tool.

"The fact that our hunting license sales numbers have stayed consistent and even increased slightly is testimony to Pennsylvania's extremely strong hunting heritage," Feaser says, "but it does seem to be true that perhaps due to our modern lifestyle and demands on their time, hunters don't hunt as hard, as long or as often as they used to. Still, our big game harvests are as high as ever."

"Modern wildlife management has been very successful and through protection and conservative harvest limits we have increased populations of most of our game species," San Julian says. "But before hunting seasons this year there were 1.5 million deer and 15,000 bears in Pennsylvania. As wildlife populations increase and the interest in hunting levels off or decreases, we are going to have to reexamine our regulations."

In the northeastern states, according to San Julian, the increase in the deer and bear populations has caused greater interaction with humans, which too often takes the form of collisions with vehicles and damage to crops and ornamental plants. As the human population has grown — with corresponding increases in road-building and development — big-game habitat has shrunk.

"Deer, bear and resident Canada geese overpopulation are among the top wildlife dilemmas managers face these days," says San Julian. "We are probably going to have to look at how we create our regulations. Actually it's already happening. For the first time this fall here in Pennsylvania we had concurrent buck and antlerless deer-hunting seasons."

Feaser said the growth in the bear population has game commission biologists considering a concurrent deer-bear hunting season in some parts of the state.

Some other states have resorted to liberalized bag limits to control game populations. For example in North Carolina, a hunter can shoot six deer a year, four of which must be does. "If hunting pressure declines, we may have to look at using some sort of incentives to get more people to participate in hunting," San Julian says. "In some states, officials are asking their citizens how big a deer population they want, because the deer herd has an impact on everyone. In Fairmount Park in Philadelphia and in the suburbs of Pittsburgh, they have used sharpshooters and archers to reduce the deer population."

Milking School Day Set For Butler

BUTLER (Butler Co.) — A milking school to give dairy workers a greater understanding of milking topics will be offered on a Butler County dairy farm March 8.

Dan Bowley, Dean Dairy Products field inspector, and Jean Kummer and Gene Schurman, Penn State extension agents, will lead the program.

Topics will include understanding milk quality reports, causes of high somatic cell counts and mastitis, the economics of mastitis, an udder dissection, proper udder preparation, deciding when to treat cows, and using the udder singe method to remove hair.

The milking school will take place on the farm of LeRoy and Mary Bergbigler, 263 Game Reserve Road, Butler.

Registration deadline is March 5. Call Jean Kummer at (724) 287-4761.

Beekeeping Seminar Set For Western Pa.

MONACA (Beaver Co.) — A western Pennsylvania beekeeping seminar here March 8 and 9 will offer the expertise of two nationally know bee researchers.

Dr. Medhat Nasr, Rutgers, and Dr. Nancy Ostiguy, Penn State, will join other bee experts in bringing recent research data and practical ideas to improve beekeeping techniques.

A National Honey Board representative will also be on hand.

Topic offerings at the seminar include beekeeping pest management, honey marketing, basic bee management, brood diseases, and electrically heated beehives.

The seminar will take place at the Penn State Beaver Campus, Monaca. Registration deadline is March 1. Call Beaver County extension office for more details.

Three OSU Farm Fields Certified Organic

WOOSTER, Ohio — Three Ohio State University farm fields recently earned organic certification, a milestone placing the university in select company.

Only a few other U.S. land-grant universities, Iowa State and North Carolina State among them, have certified organic research land.

The fields, near the Wooster campus of Ohio State's Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center (OARDC), comprise about 14 acres.

OARDC's Organic Food and Farm Education and Research (OFFER) program — established in 1998 to study organic farming, one of the fastest-growing segments of U.S. agriculture — conducts experiments on and manages the land.

"For organic farmers, our certification means we're playing by the same rules they have to, which makes our research much more relevant to them," said Debbie Stinner, OFFER coordinator.

"From a research perspective, it means that we're forced to learn the full production context that our stakeholders are contending with and that we can ethically and legally report our research as being 'organic', " she said.

"For Ohio citizens, it means that the scientists involved in this research are becoming much more informed about the new organic standards and what producing organic foods really entails."

According to the USDA, the number of organic farmers is increasing by about 12 percent a year and now stands at about 12,200 nationwide, most of them small-scale producers.

The U.S. Organic Food Market Report said organic-food sales reached $7.8 billion in 2000, a 20-percent increase over 1999.

Farmers who wish to sell crops or livestock and label them as organic must be certified. In Ohio, the Ohio Ecological Food and Farm Association (OEFFA) and the Organic Crop Improvement Association (OCIA) handle the process.

Among other things, certification requires that prohibited pesticides and fertilizers not be used for at least three years prior to applying for certification.

Also required are various soil-improvement, pest-management and crop-handling practices, an inspection, and extensive recordkeeping by the farmer — or in this case the researchers.

Until now, all of OFFER's fields have been classified as transitional organic, meaning organic methods are used but the fields aren't yet eligible for certification.

Experiments in the certified fields, located at OARDC's West Badger Farm, employ a basic organic field-crop rotation of corn, soybeans, small grains and hay.

Management issues, including weed control, tillage and fertility, are a focus.

New niche markets are being looked at as well, including for Ohio-grown organic hard winter wheat for baking specialty breads. Most Ohio wheat is soft winter wheat — not as good as hard for bread.

Stinner said most of the rest of the West Badger fields, comprising another 14 acres, will be eligible for certification later this year. Five to six acres of research land elsewhere in Ohio may be certified by 2004.

Besides field and cover crops, potatoes, strawberries, and processing cabbage and tomatoes are being studied.

"Weed pressure in the West Badger fields is extremely high," Stinner said. "Putting this land through organic transition hasn't been easy or pretty. We've gained a real understanding of the psychological stress many farmers report as they go through transition.

"A long-term goal of our research is to find ways to ease the typically painful transition process," she said. "We haven't reached that goal yet, and our own transition has been no less painful than anyone else's. But we're learning a lot about the process along the way that we'll be able to share."

Stinner will discuss the program's findings at OEFFA's annual conference, March 9-10 in Johnstown, Ohio.

For more information, contact (614) 421-2022 or oeffa@iwaynet.net or go to http://www.oeffa.com/conference.html.

Northwest Offers Dairy Nutrition Workshops

MERCER (Mercer Co.) — A series of dairy nutrition workshops will be conducted in three northwest Pennsylvania locations through March.

"Good Nutritional Practices in Controlling Periparturient Disease" and "Bunker Silage Quality and Animal Health" featuring Dr. Robert Van Saun, Penn State Department of Veterinary Science, will take place at the Leslie N. Firth Learning Center, Mercer County cooperative extension, on Thursday, March 7.

Cost is $5.50 per person for lunch. Register by March 4 by calling (724) 662-3141.

"Basic Dairy Cattle Nutrition" will be the focus of a workshop led by Dave Baver and George Wilcox, northwest region extension agents. They will teach participants how to evaluate their feeding program through interpreting forage tests and knowing required fiber and protein levels. The workshop will take place at the Warren County cooperative extension on Thursday March 14.

Cost is $5.50 per person for lunch. Register by March 11 by calling (814) 563-9388.

"Don't Wait 'Til It's Too Late! Catch Those Nutritional Problems Early" is the final workshop offering. Brad Hilty of the Penn State Dairy Alliance will lead the course at the William Bainbridge Technology Center, Thursday, March 28.

Cost is $5.00 for lunch. The course is limited to 20 participants. register early by calling Dave Dowler at (800) 982-9019 ext. 460.

OUR COWS ARE HAPPY

On BG 23+ Pasture Blend

BG 23+ is a blend of Barenbrug's best diploid and tetraploid perennial ryegrass, their Barliza Timothy, Alice white clover and our Cylone Red clover. It is late maturing and loves (and needs) moisture thus making it suited for those wet bottom lands. Cows will be very contented on BG 23+ pasture and very likely pick up in milk production. Very high in protein and digestibility. Makes great balage too.

5% Discount to Feb. 25

We use only the best clean High Quality seed in our mixtures. Varieties are chosen which are adapted to the Mid-Atlantic region, and which complement each other in the mix. We look for palatability, drought tolerance, yield, heading date, persistence, disease resistance, and more. High quality forages are the key to profitable milk production.

MAKE HAY WHEN THE SUN SHINES!

With our late maturing BARLIZA TIMOTHY

Barliza Timothy from Barenbrug matures later than other Timothies allowing you more time to make hay while the sunshines! Barliza has a better leaf-to-stem ratio and makes very high quality hay. Barliza Timothy can withstand intensive grazing and cutting better than most Timothies, thus it is also good in pasture mixtures! (Ask for our BG 23 plus – blend of BG34 Ryegrass, Barliza and Clovers)

"I didn't like seeing my husband hauling manure every day!"

Gloria Kaufman
Friedens, PA

Allen shares a few of the reasons he chose a Slurrystore System to manage his livestock waste:

"NRCS wasn't sure any other system would work. With a Slurrystore System, we were able to put up a smaller diameter tank and locate it close to the stream. Penn Jersey was the only contractor involved and I felt they knew what they were doing. With any other system, I would have had to use several subcontractors. Penn Jersey did an excellent job building my Slurrystore. Everything was done exactly the way I wanted it."

Allen and Gloria Kaufman had a new 48 x 23 Slurrystore® System installed last November.

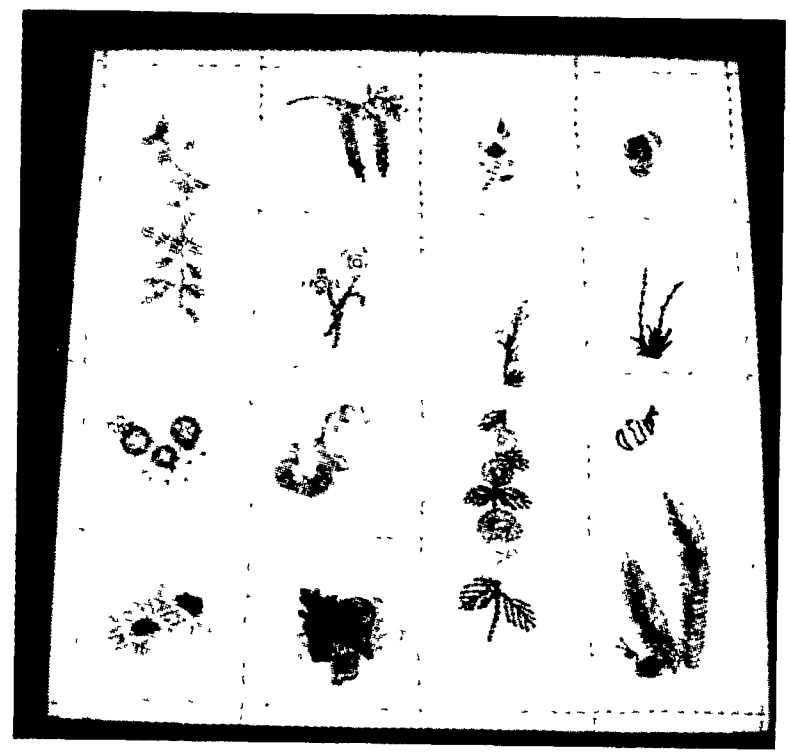
Skilled with needle, specialty threads, and fine materials, Kristi Elkner said the reward is the satisfaction of seeing projects come to life under her hands.



Participants in the class Kristi will teach on floral embroidery sampler will have this finished project to hang on the wall.

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

MARIETTA (Lancaster Co.) — Kristi Elkner is never without a "baggie."

In fact she has several baggies filled with needles, threads, and fabric for designated projects that allow her to grab and run.

Like many people, Kristi is often rushing to or from work and off to meetings, visits with friends, and scheduled events. Unlike many people, Kristi doesn't allow her busy schedule to prevent her from doing the things she loves — dainty needlecraft projects such as silk ribbon, shadow embroidery, and English smocking.

"I can listen just as well while stitching," she said of her perchance for working on projects during committee meetings and programs. If I could get a way with it, I'd even stitch in church," she added laughing.

Seeing thread and fabric "come to life" beneath her fingers brings Kristi great satisfaction and relaxation. She said, "One must sit and experience it."

People who share her passion for needlework will continue to find time despite hectic schedules, Kristi believes.

"Passing on these skills is so important," Kristi said.

With embroidery, one can make the complete project or purchase an item and embellish it. Kristi has many articles that she made from the beginning, but she also has several that she embellished so that the pieces do not look at all like the orginal. For example, a white sweat shirt has been transformed into a cardigan jacket with a floral print used for the collar and coordinating colored threads embroidered a design around the bottom.

Kristi grew up in a Texas household where both her mother and grandmother passed on the skills of sewing. Kristi machine sewed Barbie doll clothes but was notorious for pinning things shut because she hated hand sewing snaps and buttons. It wasn't until she was in college that she took a class in smocking.

Shadow embroidery is the art of stitching on the reverse side of a sheer or semi-sheer fabric to produce a design that shows through to the front.

"I was hooked," Kristi said. "And, it was so surprising since I had never liked hand sewing before."

It was at Texas Tech where Kristi met "a Yankee from New Jersey" — Tim Elkner. They married and moved eight years ago to Pennsylvania, where Tim works as horticulture extension agent for Penn State.

Of the move to the East, Kristi said, "I love the hills, the trees, the changing seasons...."

She thought that she would not like being so far away from members of the SAGA (Smocking Arts Guild of America), where she received inspiration and instructions for new projects. SAGA's purpose is to preserve and foster the art of smocking and related needlework through education, communication, and workmanship.

It wasn't long before Kristi found some likeminded friends. They traveled to Wilmington, Delaware, to the closest SAGA chapter and attended SAGA's annual five-day national convention, for intensive instruction and to hear nationally known teachers.

Last year Kristi started a local Saga chapter.

"Twenty people showed up for the first meeting," Kristi said. Called the Conestoga Stitches, it meets at 7 p.m. the third Tuesday of every month at Chiques United Methodist Church. Participants receive instructions to make a small project at each class.

Readers interested in attending, may call Kristi at (717) 426-1594.

Kristi, who works for a large retail sewing center, also started a side business called "hoity toity hare." She sells heirloom children's clothing, specialty accessories, and custom-made requests.

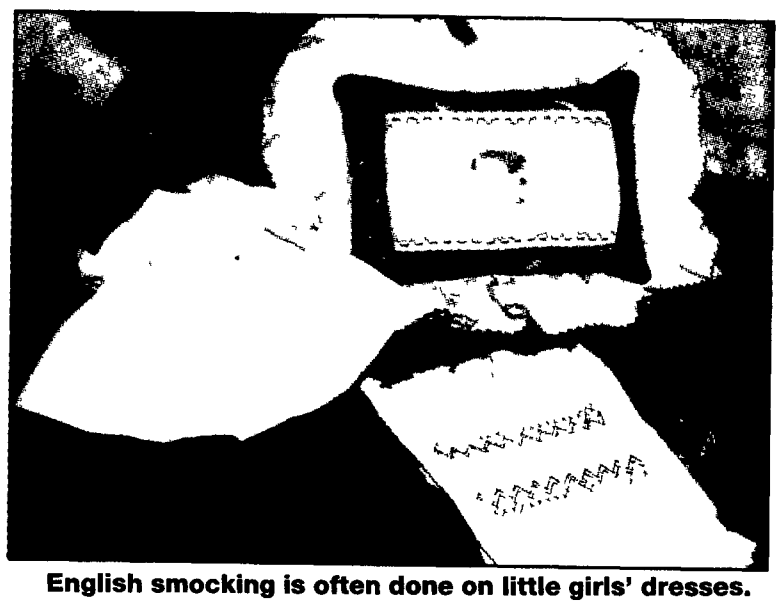
Instead of the old-time method of picking up dots for smocking designs, Kristi uses a pleater with 24 needles that pleats fabrics in minutes.

"Once you do this, you never want to count by hand," she said. There are several different smocking methods such as Italian smocking, which is stitched through pleats rather than on top, and English smocking, in which the embroidery stitches appear on top of the pleats.

One of Kristi's projects has been published in a four-color, four-page spread in a national needlework magazine. She'd like to do more magazine work in the future.

Kristi has often taught classes at guilds, but next month, she is trying someting new. For the first time she will teach specialty embroidery classes at the Lancaster Extension, Farm and Home Center, 1383 Arcadia Dr., Lancaster.

Kristi shows off the bottom of a shirt that she embellished with a variety of embroidery techniques.



English smocking is often done on little girls' dresses.

Workshop registration must be made by Feb. 27. Classes are limited in size. Send your check made payable to Lancaster County Extension with your name, address, day telephone number, and specify the workshop you want to attend. Send to Farm & Home Center, 1383 Arcadia Rd., Lancaster, PA 17601.

Classes include the following:

• Beginning Silk Ribbon Embroidery — Learn the basic stitches and how to handle the ribbon to embellish garments, pillows, and accessories. No experience necessary but some knowledge of embroidery stitches is helpful. Supply list will be sent.

Class is March 6, 1:30-4:30 p.m. $25 fee includes kit of fabric, needle, and silk ribbon.

• Basic Shadow Embroidery Classes — Learn the art of stitching on the reverse side of a sheer or semi-sheer fabric to produce a design that shows through to the front. This is a beautiful way to embellish baby clothers, collars,

Pennsylvania Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program

A Partnership That Benefits Both Landowner and Tenant

- CREP offers a unique opportunity for both the Landowner and tenant to mutually agree to participate in a joint effort to improve water quality and wildlife habitat in Pennsylvania.
- Landowners who enroll in CREP must have the means to establish the conservation practices and the means to maintain these practices for the contract life.
- Tenants have the knowledge and means necessary to establish and maintain the practices for the landowner. The tenant may and in most cases should share in the financial rewards of CREP.
- Landowners and tenants should agree on what sensitive lands will be enrolled and how the practices will be established and maintained. No land can be enrolled unless the tenant agrees to release his rights to farm the acreage offered for enrollment.
- It is in the best interest of both the tenant and landlord to sit down and discuss enrollment of the land in CREP.

What is CREP?

The Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program (CREP) is a federal/state partnership with a goal of enrolling 100,000 acres of highly erodible cropland and pasture in conservation plantings to improve water quality and provide improved wildlife and fisheries habitat.

Benefits of CREP

- Reduced soil erosion
- Improved water quality
- Increase in farm income on marginal land
- Improved wildlife and fisheries habitat
- Improved herd health

What Land Is Eligible?

All cropland or marginal pasture within 180 feet of a stream is eligible. Highly erodible cropland farther than 180 feet from a stream may also be eligible.

What are my costs?

Just a willingness to get involved in conservation. In addition to your annual rental payment, USDA, the Commonwealth of PA and Chesapeake Bay Foundation/Ducks Unlimited will reimburse up to 100% for a variety of Conservation Practices (CPs).

What Are My Obligations?

Farmers and landowners must agree to establish and maintain grass, shrubs or trees for the life of the contract (10-15 years). No harvesting is allowed except for emergency purposes as declared by the Secretary of Agriculture. Once cover is established, no maintenance mowing is permitted during the primary nesting season of April 1 - July 15.

Will My Land Be Open To Public Access?

You maintain control of your land except for USDA access to inspect for contract compliance.

Vet Studies, Animal Care Goal For Pa. Lamb And Wool Queen

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

HOME (Indiana Co.) — For Lauren Ferringer, serving as the Pennsylvania Lamb and Wool Queen brings her one step closer to her dream of becoming a veterinarian.

"It's an opportunity to teach animal care and hold clinics for kids on raising animals," she said.

"I've always loved doing anything animal related and this (position is). Ever since I was six years old, I've wanted to be a veterinarian," the 19-year-old said.

Unlike many contestants for the queen title, Lauren had never heard of the position of lamb and wool queen until she was asked to represent the county last year. She had been Indiana County's fair queen in 2000.

Although raising sheep is a fairly recent encounter for her, she has lots experience in raising and showing horses. She said that she was born working with horses under the tutelage of her parents Robert and Sandra Ferringer.

After she joined 4-H and FFA, Lauren's exposure to livestock broadened. She was soon raising hogs for projects. A few years ago, it seemed a natural progression to include lambs.

Birthing, shots, and learning about animal diseases fascinates Lauren. She sees her position as lamb and wool queen as one in which she can promote proper care and hold clinics on raising animals.

As a sophomore at the Indiana University of Pennsylvania, Lauren said that her studies in pre-vet medicine have been made much easier by her experience working with livestock during 11 years in 4-H and participating in FFA since seventh grade. She believes she is at a great advantage through the knowledge she has gained in caring and treating animal complications, and with talking with many people associated in animal industries.

During her senior year at Marion Center Area High School, Lauren also attended college half time. In 2001, Lauren was named Pennsylvania's outstanding 4-H member for the southwestern region and received a scholarship from Penn State. She plans to transfer to Penn State School of Agriculture in the fall, and later to Ohio State for her doctorate.

This summer, Lauren will serve an internship with a vet.

Although high school is behind her, Lauren said that she was involved in everything ag related, and serves as FFA chapter president for two years and earned the Keystone Degree. In high school, Lauren was also active in the horticulture club, and played softball and basketball. In 1999, Lauren was named Pennsylvania's outstanding horse member.

At IUP, Lauren is a member of the pre-med club.

At home, Lauren still finds time to raise four horses, hogs and lambs.

Pennsylvania Lamb and Wool Queen Lauren Ferringer loves everything ag-related and is a pre-vet sophomore at Indiana University of Pennsylvania.

In addition to promoting lambs, Lauren also promotes meat and fiber and looks forward to attending many fairs to promote the industry.

"Participation in all these ag-related activities only confirms my dream to become a large animal vet on the farm," Lauren said.

What's For Lunch?

It's Monday morning, and time to start the week off with a ritual shared by millions of parents across the country, packing your child's school lunch.

At our house we have those that prefer to pack and those that like to buy the school lunch.

Food choices are not always the determining factor, but issues such as getting out to recess quickly and avoiding long lunch lines rank high for the "packers." Our "buyer" finds it more convenient to buy rather than heading back to his locker to grab his lunch. To each his own!

As the parents of "packers" we want to do a good job, and create a nutritious, well-balanced meal that will not be traded or end up in the garbage pail. We must also take into consideration the competition from many other foods available at school. A lot of competition comes from "a la carte" items as well as food and beverages purchased from vending machines, school stores and snack sales being held at school. Secondary schools find more of these add on sales than at the elementary level.

Keep in mind that what kids eat for lunch matters to their health. Federal surveys show that children get about one third of their daily calories at lunch. Only about two percent of school-age children consume the recommended servings of all five food groups in the Food Guide Pyramid.

Teenage girls don't eat enough fruits and vegetables or enough dairy products but they consume greater percentages of fat than they need. Teenage boys especially consume high numbers of sodas.

With a little planning, some imagination, and feedback from your child, packing a nutritional lunch can be easily obtained. To make the process go smoothly, parent and child can together plan a weekly school lunch menu. This also avoids the morning panic of "What do I pack today?" and ensures you have supplies on hand.

Healthy lunch suggestions include the following: Bagels, rolls, pita pockets, English muffins, raisin or multigrain bread are healthy bases for a nutritious lunch. You can vary the type of bread to keep sandwiches interesting. Cut bread into fun shapes with cookie cutters for a change of pace. Young children often don't eat the crust anyway.

Use "filler vegetables" such as lettuce, cabbage, and tomatoes on sandwiches to help your kids get the necessary amount of vegetable servings every day.

Serve raw vegetables in an appealing way to encourage better eating. Serve celery sticks cut into small pieces and filled with peanut butter. Cut carrots into coin size pieces to be more inviting to eat. Make a radish rose and soak in cold water the night before.

Apple slices can be dipped in lemon juice to prevent browning and are easier to eat than a whole apple. Sectioning an orange and wrapping it in a damp paper towel keeps it moist until lunch time.

Encourage milk to be the beverage of choice at lunchtime. Fruit juices are OK for an occasional substitution, but make sure you are serving 100 percent juice and not one of those less expensive, high-sugar fruit drinks on the market.

Graham crackers, pretzel sticks, whole-wheat crackers, sesame breadsticks, mini rice cakes, air-popped popcorn, yogurt, and puddings all make good choices.

Love goes a long way in making lunch yummy. Hide a special note or card in your child's lunchbox, telling them how much you love him/her and how special he/she is to you.

Join them for lunch some day, if you can.

Avoid pre-packaged lunch boxes as they are often high in fat, salt and sugar. Besides that, they are more expensive than packing your own lunch. Remember that before sending your youngster to school with a nutritious lunch you need to teach your children how to make choices for healthy eating and why it is important.

Help your child develop good attitudes about eating. Guide the family choices rather than dictating food by making a wide variety of healthful foods available in the home. Eat meals together as a family. Involve children in food shopping and preparing the food and discourage eating meals or snacks while watching television.

pockets, etc. This 3-hour class will teach the basic stitch techniques of shadow embroidery and the various materials used to achieve the shadow. No experience necessary although some embroidery knowledge is necessary.

This workshop will be taught Wed., March 6, 9 a.m. - noon, and repeated Wed., April 1, 6 p.m.-9 p.m. $20 workshop fee includes kit of fabric, hand needles, threads.

• Beginning English Smocking — Learn basics of English smocking, preparation, stem/outline stitch, cable stitch, wave, and trellis stitches, starting and stopping. The basic mechanics of pleating will be demonstrated. Student will practice on a prepleated sampler and examples of smocking will be displayed in class. During the second class, learn how to turn smocking into "something."

Supplies needed are embroidery scissors, task lighting, extension cord.

Classes are Wed., March 13 and 20, 9 a.m.-1 p.m. $45 workshop fee includes prepleated fabric, needles, thread, and tie-off board.

• Floral Embroidery Sampler — using garden flowers as subjects, this sampler combines several decorative stitches and the opportunity for participants to try different and unusual threads and ribbons to produce a beautiful piece to hang on the wall. In the six-hour class, watch wisteria, daisies, and other flora come to life under your hands. This intermediate class requires some knowledge of basic embroidery stitches. A supply list will be sent. Class is Wed., April 3, 9 a.m.-4 p.m. Bring a bag lunch). $40 workshop fee includes kit of linen fabric, all needles and threads, colored stitch guide, handout, and doodle cloth.

In minutes, this pleater with 24 needles can pleat fabric for ease in smocking.

Oats Is Good Choice For Nutrition, Taste

GOLDEN APPLE OATMEAL CAKE

1 cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup oil
1 egg
1 cup rolled oats
1 cup finely chopped walnuts
¾ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon ground allspice
1 cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup finely chopped, peeled apples

Sift together flour, soda, salt, and allspice. Combine oil, sugar, egg, and vanilla; mix well. Add flour mixture and oats. Stir in apple and nuts; spread in greased and floured 8-inch square baking pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 35-40 minutes or until cake tests done when wooden pick inserted near center comes out clean. Serve warm. Makes 6-8 servings. Great with ice cream.

WHOPPER COOKIES

1¼ cups brown sugar
¼ cup granulated sugar
3 eggs
1½ cups chunky peanut butter
6 cups old-fashioned rolled oats
2 teaspoons baking soda
1½ cups raisins
12-ounces chocolate chips

Melt butter, blend in sugars, egg, and peanut butter until smooth. Add oats, soda, raisins, and chocolate chips. Dough will be sticky. Use ice cream scoop or large spoon. Drop on baking sheets and flatten slightly. Bake at 350 degrees for 15 minutes. Makes 2 dozen large cookies.

This recipes does not require flour. Cookies are chewy and delicious.

OATMEAL PANCAKES

2 cups old-fashioned rolled oats
2 cups buttermilk
½ cup all-purpose flour
½ cup whole wheat flour
2 teaspoons sugar
1½ teaspoon baking powder
1½ teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
2 eggs
2 tablespoons butter, melted

In a small dish, mix the oats and buttermilk. Cover and refrigerate overnight. Stir together flours, sugar, baking soda, baking powder, and salt. Cover and let set. (These two steps can be done the night before baking).

In the morning, beat eggs until frothy in large mixing bowl. Add butter and blend, add oatmeal mixture. Quickly blend in flour mixture. The batter will be very thick, so you may need to add 2-4 tablespoons more buttermilk.

Use heaping tablespoons of batter for each pancake and pat it out a bit. Fry in oil in skillet. Pancakes will be thick and filling.

These are a favorite of our family.

HONEY OATMEAL BREAD

1½ cups water
½ cup honey
⅓ cup butter
5½-6½ cups all-purpose flour
1 cup quick-cooking oats
2 teaspoons salt
2 packages active dry yeast
2 eggs
1 tablespoon water
1 egg white
oatmeal

Combine water, honey, and butter in small saucepan. Heat over low heat until liquids are very warm.

Place 5 cups flour, oat, salt, and yeast in bowl. Attach bowl and dough hook and mix 30 seconds on speed two for bread mixing. Gradually add warm liquids to flour mixture, about one minute. Add eggs and mix additional minute.

Continuing on mixer speed, add remaining flour, ½ cup at a time, until dough clings to hook and cleans sides of bowl. Knead by machine 3-5 minutes longer.

Place in greased bowl, turning to grease top. Cover; let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about one hour.

Punch dough down and divide in half. Shape each half into a loaf and place in a greased loaf pan. Cover; let rise in warm place, free from draft, until doubled in bulk, about one hour.

Combine water and egg white. Brush tops of loaves with mixture. Sprinkle with oatmeal. Bake at 375 degrees for 40 minutes. Remove from pans immediately and cool on wire racks. Yield: 2 loaves.

HONEY LEMON TEA LOAF

8-ounces low-fat lemon yogurt
⅔ cup double-strength brewed tea, room temperature
½ cup honey
3 tablespoons canola oil
1 egg
1½ cups quick or old-fashioned oats, uncooked
1½ cups whole wheat flour
1 tablespoon grated lemon peel
1 tablespoon baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Lightly spray with cooking spray two disposable loaf pans. In large bowl, combine yogurt, tea, honey, oil, and egg with fork; mix well. Stir in oats; let stand 10 minutes. In medium bowl, combine remaining ingredients. Add to oat mixture; stir just until dry ingredients are moistened. Divide evenly between pans. Bake 30-35 minutes or until wooden pick inserted in center of loaf comes out with a few moist crumbs clinging to it. Cool completely on wire rack. Store tightly wrapped.

Marbled Chocolate Chip Oatmeal Cookies, which took first prize in a contest, will bring raves from family and friends.

Featured Recipe

Oatmeal is a fine choice to start your day. For one thing, it means you're actually eating breakfast. Despite the adage that "breakfast is the most important meal of the day," it's estimated that 35 percent to 40 percent of American adults habitually skip breakfast.

Breakfast is important because the body needs energy. It gets that energy from glucose, and excess glucose from a meal or snack is stored by the liver as glycogen. If you skip breakfast, your glycogen stores from the day before will be virtually depleted by mid-morning. That can make you tired and make it hard for you to concentrate.

Oatmeal is a particularly good choice because it's high in fiber. If your serving of oatmeal gives you three or four grams of fiber, you're well on your way to getting the 20 to 30 grams of fiber recommended in a daily diet.

In addition, oats are a good source of soluble fiber, much less common than its insoluble partner. In fact, along with barley, oats are the best source of a particular kind of soluble fiber called beta-glucan, which helps you feel full for a longer period of time.

That's very helpful if you're trying to cut calories. In fact, one recent study conducted at the New York Obesity Research Center at St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital found that participants who ate oatmeal for breakfast consumed 30 percent fewer calories at lunch compared to those who ate sugared corn flakes for breakfast.

Like other plant-based foods, oatmeal also contains phytochemicals, many of which have not yet been identified. Nutritionists say phytochemicals may play a much larger role in our health than we know today.

But you don't need to confine oatmeal to breakfast. Many wonderful recipes for cakes, cookies, and other desserts incorporate quick or old-fashioned oats in the recipes.

Here is a cookie recipes that won a $2,000 first prize in the Just for Kids category of the seventh annual Quaker Oatmeal recipe contest. Emily Singer, 14, of Kenosha, Wis., developed this scrumptious cookie recipe with her mother Susan.

MARBLED CHOCOLATE CHIP OATMEAL COOKIES

2 cups butter
2 cups granulated sugar
1 cup firmly packed brown sugar
4 eggs
1 tablespoon vanilla
4¼ cups all-purpose flour, divided
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt (optional)
½ cup unsweetened cocoa powder
2 cups quick or old-fashioned oats, uncooked, divided
2 cups semisweet chocolate pieces, divided

In a large bowl, beat butter and sugars until creamy. Add eggs and vanilla; beat well. Add combined 4 cups flour, baking soda, and salt; mix well.

Divide dough evenly between two bowls. Add cocoa to one bowl and the remaining ¼ cup flour to second bowl; mix well. Add 1 cup chocolate pieces and 1 cup oats to each bowl; mix well. Cover with plastic wrap. Refrigerate both doughs at least 2 hours.

Heat oven to 375 degrees. Remove small portion of each dough; keep remainder refrigerated.

To shape cookies, combine 1 tablespoon each dough, twisting doughs together to form a single cookie. Place 2 inches apart on ungreased cookie sheets.

Bake 10-11 minutes or until light-colored dough is golden brown (centers of cookies will be soft). Cool 2 minutes on cookie sheets; remove to wire rack. Cool completely. Store tightly covered. About 4 dozen.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

The end of February is near. I've always enjoyed winter, except for icy roads, as it gave me a respite from outside work.

I've always had a big garden and in earlier years, I sold sugar peas, sweet corn, and strawberries. My customers were people who live in a nearby development. I'd take orders on the telephone and then deliver them.

As we lived at the end of a dead end road, we did not have traffic going by. So, I put baskets of tomatoes along the road at my parent's house. One day a little neighbor girl was sent to buy a small box of cherry tomatoes. She returned them as her mother thought they were cherries — I guess they looked like that from a distance.

I've always grown two kinds of sugar peas. The seed came from my mother-in-law and is now available from the Heirloom Seed Project at the Landis Valley Museum. Risser's Sickle Peas will grow to a height of six-feet if there are good weather conditions. So, they definitely need a fence. The Risser Early Sugar Peas are a bit shorter and will bear peas in May. Four or five hundred-foot rows of peas gave me more than I needed for our family.

My girls never enjoyed picking them as much as I did. Thus, they would ask to go to the house and prepare meals. At 8- or 10-years-old, they learned to put the meat on the stove first, peel potatoes, and then cook the vegetables. Baking they really enjoyed, and they begged to do it everyday. Even our boys baked pies, cookies, and cakes.

So, while it is still winter, I'll try to finish the braided rug that I'm making and maybe embroider another pair of pillow cases.

Learn Joys Of Quilting

YORK (York Co.) — "Common Thread," the newsletter of the York Quilter's Guild has announced plans for a National Quilting Day Workshop scheduled for Saturday, March 16 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The guild will gather at St. Paul's Lutheran Church on Trinity Road (Route 616) off Route 30 in West York. The public is invited to learn about the joys of quilting.

National Quilting Day is officially designated for quilter's around the nation to celebrate their passion for quilting by coming together to spend the day working on quilts or quilt-related projects. In the past, the guild has worked on baby blankets that were donated to a local charity. This year, it is anticipated that the members will work on "UFOs" (unfinished objects), a special personal project as well as items that will be sold at "A Celebration of Quilts 2002," the guild's quilt show, scheduled for June 29-30.

ANSWER — William Dennies, Hamburg, N.Y., sends in this recipe that he writes is one that his wife makes and is delicious. The recipe is in answer to the request by Elizabeth, Schuylkill County.

Cookies From Cake Mix

1 box cake mix
½ cup oil
2 eggs

Mix eggs and oil. Add cake mix and mix well. Add chopped nuts, raisins, or mini M&M's.

Drop by teaspoonful about one-inch apart on cookie sheets. Bake at 325 degrees, 12-15 minutes or until done. Test with toothpick.

ANSWER — Faye Hopkins, West Grove, wanted a recipe for making chocolate-covered cherries with the liquid inside. Thanks to Joan Hollinger, Ocala, Fl., for writing that to make chocolate-covered cherries with the liquid inside, use dry fondant. Roll the cherries in dry fondant spraying occasionally with cherry juice. Roll the cherries until nice and firm. Coat in chocolate. Put in candy cups and set in a cool place for two weeks before serving. If preferred, rum extract may be added to the juice.

Thanks to Doris Horton, Randolph, N.Y., for sending this more detailed recipe for the chocolate-covered cherries and for peppermint patties.

Fondant-Filled Candies

⅔ cup sweetened condensed milk
1 tablespoon light corn syrup
4½-5 cups confectioners' sugar
2-4 drops peppermint oil
2½ pounds dark chocolate candy coating
16-ounce jar maraschino cherries

In a mixing bowl, combine milk and corn syrup. Gradually beat in confectioners' sugar (mixture will be stiff). Divide into two portions. For peppermint patties, add peppermint oil to one portion. Shape ½ teaspoonfuls into balls and flatten. In a microwave or heavy saucepan, melt one pound candy coating, stirring often. With a slotted spoon; dip peppermint disks in coating; place on waxed paper to harden. Refrigerate in airtight container.

For chocolate-covered cherries, drain cherries, reserving 3 tablespoons juice; set cherries aside. Combine juice with remaining fondant. Add additional confectioners' if necessary to form a stiff mixture. Roll into one-inch balls; flatten into 2-inch circles. Wrap each circle around a cherry and carefully shape into a ball. Place on waxed-paper lined baking sheets. Cover loosely. Melt remaining coating; dip cherries in coating.

Refrigerate in airtight container for 1-2 weeks for candy to ripen and center to soften. Yield 4½ dozen.

ANSWER — Thanks to K.A. Burdek, Bath, for sending this recipe in request to Jane Zimmerman, Spring Mills.

Chocolate Sour Cream Pound Cake

1½ cups butter, softened
3 cups sugar
5 eggs
3 cups all-purpose flour
½ cup cocoa
1 teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
8-ounces sour cream
1 cup boiling water
2 teaspoons vanilla

Preheat oven to 325 degrees. Cream butter, gradually add sugar, beating well. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. In a bowl, combine flour, cocoa, baking soda, and salt. Add to creamed mixture alternately with sour cream, beginning and ending with flour mixture. Mix well after each addition. Add boiling water. Mix well. Stir in vanilla. Pour batter into a well-greased floured 10-inch tube pan. Bake 1 hour and 20 minutes or until cake is done.

Cool in pan 10-15 minutes. Remove from cake pan. Cool completely. Makes one cake.

Chocolate Pound Cake

3 tablespoons plus 1½ teaspoon unsweetened Dutch process cocoa
3 tablespoons boiling water
1½ teaspoon vanilla
3 large eggs
1¼ cups sifted cake flour
¾ cup plus 2 tablespoons sugar
¾ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
13 tablespoons softened, unsalted butter

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Mix together cocoa and boiling water. Cool. Lightly whisk in vanilla and eggs.

In large bowl, mix remaining dry ingredients to blend. Add ½ chocolate mixture and the butter. Mix one minute to aerate. Gradually add remaining chocolate in two additions. Mix each 20 seconds.

Bake approximately 50 minutes or until toothpick comes out clean. You can tent with buttered foil after baking 25 minutes to prevent excess browning.

Cake will spring back when touched but won't necessarily be done. Use toothpick test.

ANSWER — Sherry Burkett, Harrisonville, wanted an easy recipe to make peanut butter frosting. Thanks to Bonnie Koons, Harrisburg, for sending a recipe.

Peanut Butter Icing

8-ounces cream cheese, softened
14-ounce can sweetened condensed milk
1 cup peanut butter

Whip cream cheese until soft. Add sweetened milk, whip until well mixed. Add peanut butter, mix well.

ANSWER — For the reader looking for a low-calorie dessert, here is a tasty one that Bonnie Koons, Harrisburg, promises you'll be licking your fingers.

Chocolate Cupcake (Brownies)

1 package chocolate cake mix (do not add eggs or oil)
15-ounce can pumpkin
1 cup water

Mix well, place between 18 papered or sprayed cupcake pans. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes.

ANSWER — Elinor Klotz, Lehighton, requested a recipe for carrot raisin salad. Thanks to Tina Gojeski, Loysburg, for sending this recipe.

Carrot Slaw With Raisins

3 large carrots
⅓ cup raisins
Dash pepper
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
½ lemon

Scrape carrots with a vegetable scrapper.
Grate carrots against a grater in a medium-sized bowl.
Add raisins.
Slowly add in mayonnaise enough to cover the carrots and raisins. Finally squeeze in lemon juice from the half lemon, shake on a dash of pepper. Chill.

4-H Leaders Recognized At AYHC National Horse Leaders Symposium

ROCK HILL, S.C. — The Pennsylvania 4-H Horse Program received recognition at the National Youth Horse Leaders Symposium, sponsored recently by the American Youth Horse Council (AYHC) in Rock Hill, South Carolina. Volunteer leaders and Penn State extension educators received national awards, in addition to presenting seminars and helping plan and coordinate the symposium.

Patty Kelly, volunteer 4-H leader from Latrobe, received the Youth Horse Leader of the Year award for her outstanding leadership to young people in the horse industry. Patty received the award based on her horse industry involvement, contributions to the youth horse industry, innovative approaches to working with youth, and her willingness to mentor young horsemen and women.

Patty has been a volunteer for 28 years with the Harrold Alwine 4-H Horse Club in Westmoreland County. She has been instrumental in the development of several innovative youth horse programs at local, district and state levels, including therapeutic riding, horse camps, safety education, leadership development and motivational tools for youth. Most recently, Patty initiated and piloted the 4-H horsemanship skills program in Westmoreland County, and is a key leader in the introduction of the program throughout the state of Pennsylvania.

Ethel Miller, volunteer 4-H leader from Green Lane, was also recognized as a finalist for the Youth Leader of the Year Award. Ethel has been a volunteer for more than 20 years and a leader of the Timbertalk Trotters 4-H Horse Club in Montgomery County. She has been an enthusiastic and creative teacher who makes learning fun for youth and involves both youth who own horses as well as youth who do not have a horse of their own. Ethel has been instrumental in the development of county and regional communication and hippology contests and the Montgomery County Winter Horse Science Camp. She was the coach and leader of two national 4-H winners in communication contests, and one winner and five finalists of the PA 4-H Horse Program Outstanding Member Award.

Pat Comerford, Penn State Extension horse specialist, was recognized by the American Association of Horsemanship Safety as the Equine Educator of the Year. She received the Paul Travis Memorial Award for her leadership and innovative endeavors resulting in superior youth horse safety materials. Pat provides leadership for the Pennsylvania 4-H Horse Program and coordinated the development of the Pennsylvania 4-H Horse Safety Program. The 4-H Horse Program promotes safety of youth by providing educational resources, recognition of members and leaders for safety achievements, and opportunities for collaboration in safety programming. Pat was also recognized for her leadership as the outgoing President of the American Youth Horse Council and her active involvement with AYHC for many years. She also presented a seminar on competitive trail riding in youth programs.

Ann Swinker, Penn State Extension horse specialist and past president of AYHC, introduced and recognized Ed Roberts, the recipient of the AYHC Distinguished Service Award. Dr. Swinker also presented a seminar on respiratory disorders in equestrian instructors.

Nancy Kadwill, extension agent, and volunteers from Montgomery County presented a seminar on the youth winter horse science camps. The volunteers participating in the presentation were Barb Sly, Joan Polk, Judy Ann Larsen, Gwen Semmens, and Glynn Schauder.

On Being a Farm Wife

Joyce Bupp

What do you get when you plunk four small children, two parents, two grandparents and a large dog together in a small hunting cabin over a chilly February weekend?

Chaos.

But way more importantly, you get memories.

As kids, those of us fortunate enough to have had parents who hauled us around on periodic vacations don't at all recall the chaos that adults inevitably deal with on such outings. We have only the memories.

And so the kids will have no recollection of the inevitable squabbling of youngsters seatbelted close together in family vehicles, interspersed with frequent "are we there yet?" queries.

They won't recall the floor covered with newspapers after rounds of cutting out farm equipment pictures, or crayons escaped in all directions hiding under pieces of furniture. Nor will they remember handfuls of Froot Loops scattered in distant corners, or of tripping over boots and mittens and heavy winter coats shed onto the floor as one hurries to beat siblings to a box of toys.

What we hope they'll remember is a cozy mountain cabin nestled among pines where the wind stirs branches overhead while you race tricycles around a pine needle-paved track. Of a place where kids are allowed to blow ear-splitting, high-pitched whistles hung around their necks so they can be easily "tracked" outside, a racket which would be forbidden inside walls.

We trust their memories will be etched with the gurgling of the mountain stream tumbling over rocks just feet away from the cabin. Grandpa engraved this memory on a balmy February afternoon by demonstrating how a collection of small (and one large) heads hanging out an open window could best soak up the melody of stream song.

Among their memories will be journeys across a wooden-planked narrow footbridge stretched high above the stream, crossed tentatively at first and then more surefootedly each time. Even 2-year-old Rachel, hand-in-hand with grandma, bravely tip-toed across the scary bridge.

Etched in their memories will be the vision of Derra, the collective-family yellow lab, splashing into the icy cold waters to swim and retrieve sticks. Enforcing that memory was the chilliness of the showers she splattered everyone with as she shook off her mountain stream baths.

With teachers for parents, many of their memories will be laced with learning, though they may not realize it. An impromptu, hands-on, environmental lesson came about when our collective crew hiked to a beaver lodge and surrounding "lumbering" area. One foot-diameter tree that had been chewed nearly through, then hung up in an even larger tree when it began to topple, offered a visual lesson in nature's perplexing ways. It was also a great opportunity to pretend one was a beaver chomping on a tree trunk.

Such natural settings offer lifetime memories of collecting pinecones and turning over rocks to see what's underneath. Of watching squirrels squabble over corn and sunflower seeds that little hands helped to set out for the wildlife. Of learning bird names like "chickadee" and "nuthatch." Of counting sets of glowing deer eyes spotted in mountain fields on after-dark deer drives and a raccoon loping across a back road in front of the truck.

Some memories may be denied later, like the intimidation of bedtime in a strange sleeping area, where even comforting nightlights cast eerie shadows above long, open rafters. Parents and grandparents snuggling in beside little folks helped calm qualms of everything from mice to monsters under the beds.

Add memories of meals around the long camp kitchen table, of reading storybooks which once belonged to one's mommy when she was a little girl. Of building card houses, fragile structures which collapse when your brother gleefully pokes his finger into them. Of hand-crayoned farming layouts sketched on long pieces of freezer paper and stretched across the floor to drive toy tractors over in the warmth of a crackling woodstove, the wind blustering outside.

We doubt we will ever be positioned to leave any great sum of wealth or inheritance to these little ones.

But if we can help bequeath them a treasure of happy childhood memories, we will consider our efforts successful.

Kids Korner

Kids, Join Pest Patrol

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Now kids can join the "Tree Hole Mosquito Patrol" while "Wising up to Worms" with the Pennsylvania IPM Program's new publication, "Join Our Pest Patrol."

"Join Our Pest Patrol" is a fun, educational resource for Pennsylvania teachers of students in grades 3 and 4. The workbook addresses newly adopted state academic standards in environment and ecology focusing on integrated pest management.

Integrated pest management, or IPM, aims to manage pests — such as insects, diseases, weeds and animals — by combining physical, biological and chemical tactics that are safe and environmentally compatible.

Through fun and educational activities such as crossword puzzles, fill-in-the-blanks, mazes and picture drawing, students using the workbook can determine whether an insect is a "pest or guest," find out about weeds such as dandelions and purple loosestrife, and learn pesticide safety.

Also available is the accompanying teacher guide that includes facts, investigations, activities and resources to support children's curiosity and extended learning. Concepts include distinguishing weed and insect pests from beneficial plants and insects; understanding why humans want to manage pests; recognizing common pests in our homes, gardens and neighborhoods; choosing the least toxic ways to manage pests; and safeguarding against pesticide risks. The guide will help teachers better explain IPM to students.

The publications can be obtained by contacting the Pennsylvania IPM Program at (814) 865-2839.

Spring Museum Classes Open For Registration

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — The Hershey Museum has a full complement of fun classes for spring. Preregistration is required for all classes. For information call (717) 534-3439 or visit www.hersheymuseum.org.

• Helping Hands Bunny Cottages, March 2, 10-11 a.m.

Form a team with your child to build and decorate a cookie house with the most wonderful decorations ever. Jewel-tone jelly beans, a myriad assortment of candies, bunnies and other goodies are used in the construction and decoration. This class is designed for adult/child teams for children ages 4-6. Cost is $19 per team, $16 for members.

• Mixing It Up, March 16, 10-11 a.m.

What happens when you mix oil and water? Find out in this class that tackles this age-old problem from the chocolate-making angle. Kids will experiment with a variety of mixtures, and check out how the chocolate company mixes things by watching an original piece of mixing equipment from the factory. Taste the outcome when the problem of mixing an oil and a liquid is solved. Ages 9-12. Cost is $9 per child and $7 for members.

• Soap, Wind And Water, April 6, 10-11 a.m.

Combine the fun of making and using old-fashioned toys with the science behind what makes them work. Conduct surface tension tests, custom-make bubble wands and blow bubbles, create soap boats and sail them along with other soap, wind and water projects. Ages 6-8. Cost is $9 per child and $7 for members.

• Science And Soap, April 13, 10-11:30 a.m.

Discover how much fun it is to play with two very simple ingredients — soap and water. Along the way, youngsters will learn some basic science. Bubble blowing and many other fun games will be played in this class. Take home a custom-made bubble wand. Ages 4-6. Cost is $9 per child and $7 for members.

• Rainbow Colors, April 27, 10-11:30 a.m.

Experiment with making dye from many natural materials — then tie-dye a piece of material. Learn to separate colors the fun way and create a colorful spinner that mixes colors for you. Check out some of the Museum's Native American and Pa. German galleries for a look at colors that folks created over 100 years ago. Ages 8-12. Cost is $9 per youth and $7 for members.

• Mostly Watercolor, eight sessions, Wednesdays, March 13-May 1, 10 a.m.-1 p.m.

Join artist Eva Bender for a class in which you can explore and extend your visual and technical expertise. Watercolor will be the main focus for the class with "excursions" into other media. Eva Bender has been exhibited widely and may be seen in area galleries. She has most recently been at the juried Mt. Gretna Art Show. A materials list will be available upon registration. Cost is $85 per person and $80 for members.

• Pique Assiette: Bits and Pieces, The Ultimate In Recycling, three sessions, Mondays, April 1, 8 and 15, 10 a.m.-1 p.m.

From a collection of shards comes an art of mosaic beauty. Create a memory jar or pot using found objects, broken china, the 'bits and pieces' of everyday life. Design a piece for a specific person using objects that represent his/her life. No particular artistic talents are necessary to create a wonderful and unique piece. Students will collect and bring their own shards prior to class. A materials list of basic tools will be provided upon registration. Cost is $85 per person and $80 for members.

Hershey Museum is open daily 10 a.m.-5 p.m., through Memorial Day, and is located adjacent to Hersheypark Arena. Admission is $6 adults, $5.50 seniors 62+, $3 youths 3-15, children under 3 are free. For more information, call (717) 534-3439, or visit our Website at www.hersheymuseum.org.

Grandparents Go To School

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — For weeks, students at Sporting Hill Elementary School prepared for the day their grandparents came to school.

On Feb. 14, grandparents filled the halls and classrooms.

In the first-grade classroom, the students were instructed not to smile or talk to their grandparents when they entered the room. This was not to be rude, but in preparation for a game in which students were to guess the grandparents that belonged to each student.

Matching grandparents to students brought a lot of giggles because some of the matches had never seen each other before.

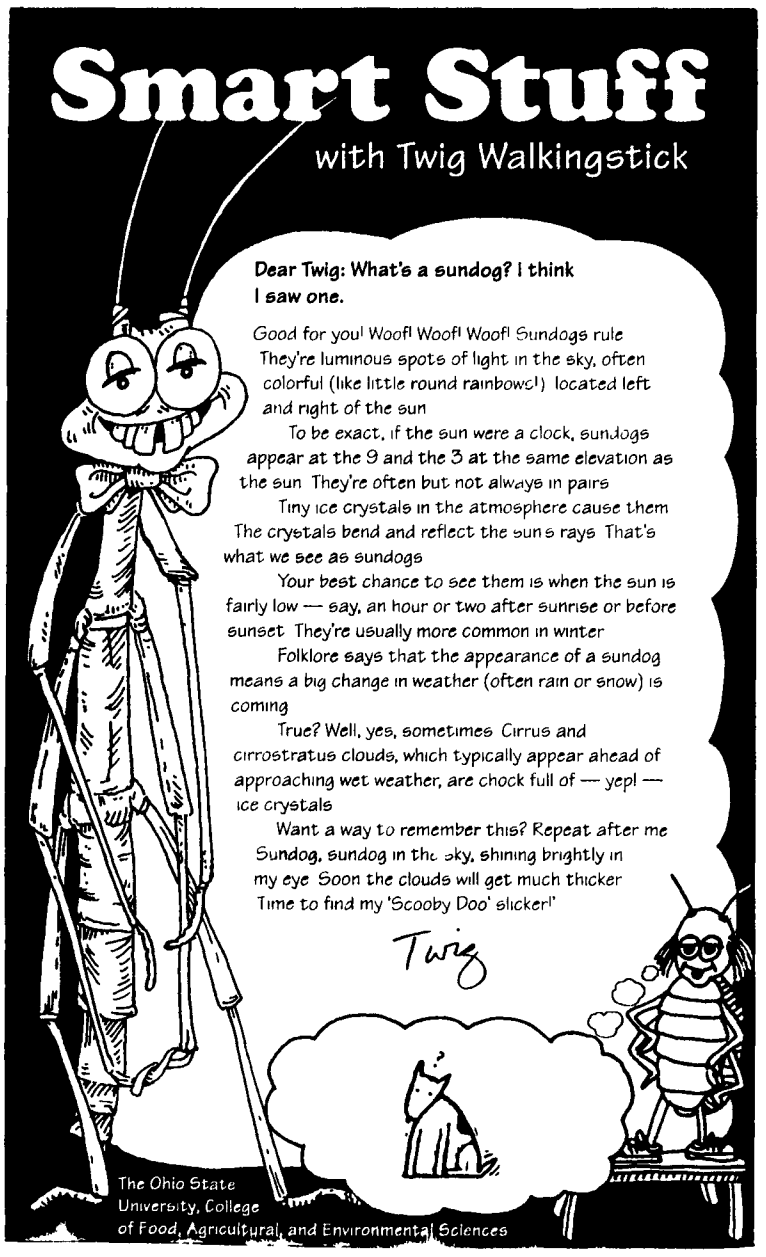
Grandparents told stories about what it was like to go to school when they were little. In those days, many of the grandparents attended one-room schoolhouses and walked long distances to the bus or school.

Students played Grandparent Bingo. The first graders wrote words in squares from a list of words that described grandparents. Descriptions included such words as fun, happy, bald, wrinkled, and old. Prizes were awarded to students who won the Bingo contests.

First-graders had drawn cut-out pictures of their grandparents and wrote a few sentences about their grandparents before they arrived. Grandparents needed to guess which pictures and which descriptions were about themselves. Many students talked about their grandmothers being good cooks or buying them presents. Some mentioned grandparents who were good at playing baseball, golf, and other sports.

Snacks included decorated cookies, candies, and drink.

Grandparents thought school was a lot more fun today—at least that day-than it was when they were little.



Smart Stuff
with Twig Walkingstick
Dear Twig: What's a sundog? I think I saw one.
Good for you! Woof! Woof! Woof! Sundogs rule They're luminous spots of light in the sky, often colorful (like little round rainbows!) located left and right of the sun
To be exact, if the sun were a clock, sundogs appear at the 9 and the 3 at the same elevation as the sun They're often but not always in pairs
Tiny ice crystals in the atmosphere cause them The crystals bend and reflect the sun's rays That's what we see as sundogs
Your best chance to see them is when the sun is fairly low — say, an hour or two after sunrise or before sunset They're usually more common in winter
Folklore says that the appearance of a sundog means a big change in weather (often rain or snow) is coming
True? Well, yes, sometimes Cirrus and cirrostratus clouds, which typically appear ahead of approaching wet weather, are chock full of — yep! — ice crystals
Want a way to remember this? Repeat after me Sundog, sundog in the sky, shining brightly in my eye Soon the clouds will get much thicker Time to find my 'Scooby Doo' slicker!'

Mountain Of Mums' Draws Customers To Ott's

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

SCHWENKSVILLE (Montgomery Co.) — What do you do with a mountain of soil?

Create the Mountain of Mums of course

That's what happened be ginning back in 1961 when earth was moved into a pile to build some greenhouses for Ott's Exotic Plants on Rt 29 near Schwenksville

The story goes Godfrey Ott told his children Godfrey H and Clarke to go pull some weeds out of a pile that had gone unsightly said Godfrey H Ott Ott said that the weeds being an eyesore were replaced by some mums and then pansies in the spring for customers to appreciate

So why not make a hill f yellows the color of lemon ade from an unsightly lemon?

We made the dirt pile with plants said Ott And

A Garden Grows In Philadelphia

Urban Farm Connects With Community, Rural Producers

DAVE LEFEVER

PHILADELPHIA — Farmers wanted

That's the rallying call of The Food Trust a farmer's market association operating in the Philadelphia area.

The Farmer's Market Trust — as the organization was known until recently — was started 10 years ago at Philadelphia's Reading Terminal Market according to Duane Perry founder and executive director

The goal was to create farmer's markets operating in community settings Perry said

During the 2001 growing season the nonprofit organization operated 10 markets in eight locations within Philadelphia and its suburbs

Set up in a variety of settings such as sidewalks and parks, the markets are attracting a growing number of urban people who care about the sources of their food said Perry

There's a really solid group of consumers interested in connecting with farmers he said

Twenty seven farmers in 2001 supplied a wide array of agricultural products to the markets, from baked goods and cut flowers to conventionally grown fruits and vegetables to organic produce and specialty items such as high end salad greens

PHILADELPHIA — Mary Corbey lives in downtown Philadelphia and bikes regularly to the farm she manages.

From her home the farm is a few dozen blocks away on an abandoned industrial or brownfield site in a residential neighborhood on the east side of the city near Route 95

It was just a trash dump Corbey said of the 1½-acre site before she took it over in 1998 and established the Greensgrow Philadelphia Project

Made possible through a lease agreement with the local community development corporation the project was started from scratch No plumbing electricity or useful structures existed on the site — except for a metal wire fence around the perimeter of the property

Originally started as a hydroponic operation to grow leaf lettuce Greensgrow has since expanded to include methods for cultivating a wide variety of crops including tomatoes specialty vegetables and flowers

COLLEGEVILLE (Montgomery Co.) — Nestled among eastern Pennsylvania towns and edged by housing developments are the 90 rolling acres that comprise Warner Family Farm

The farm which is in the Montgomery County Farmland Preservation Program stands in contrast to an increasingly urbanized area.

Most of the farmland around here is growing houses said Warner Besides homes also located nearby are large pharmaceutical companies

The farmers however have been able to take advantage of the marketing opportunities that has presented itself

The flowers produce and pick your-own option for the small orchard pumpkin patches and Christmas trees make the farm a favorite stop for customers

The reason we're going to pick your own products is because that's what our market wants and Warner We've realized that we're in the entertainment farm business

Part of our marketing strategy has always been the farm That's our niche

Starting With Trees

A graduate of Delaware Valley College Warner got his bachelor's degree in horticulture before coming back to apply his knowledge to the farm

The land that he grew up on and is now farming dates back to his grandfather in 1820 Warner's father Bob sold the dairy operation when Rob was a child and rented out the acreage

A trip to Carbon County as a Boy Scout planted the idea of growing Christmas

The Farmstand: Direct Marketing Tips

SELLING, MABEL PEACHES BEFORE THE GUY NEXT DOOR DOES?

Selling at growers markets is always a challenge and is probably as much an art form as it is a business for those who are successful in the venture

Customers can range from rude and cheap to those willing to try any of your new products at whatever the price you set

Your best supporters are asking the other vendors where you are when you don't show up at the market one week Customers are your lifeblood and appealing to their needs and wants is what makes you successful or not (with success being defined here as profitable)

So how about a few marketing tips before you get up for a new marketing season? Sell yourself first a good marketer knows it's not always what you sell but instead how you sell it Think back to the image you had at the market last year Were you seen as a seller of quality and freshness or a wholesaler of quantity? And what is the first impression to people as they walked up (or right by) you? Did they see something that enticed them to stop and take notice?

IPM For Cut Flowers

Lately I've started to receive questions and phone calls regarding production of cut flowers This interest in trend for producers of all types looking for new items to help increase re- out in their operations

Unfortunately like many of the other specialty crops I'm asked about there is no one complete resource I can refer a potential producer to regarding cut flower p duction There is some information available regarding cut flower production but it must be collected from a variety of sources

One particularly difficult area to find information on is pest control This is most likely a result of two factors first the great variety of flowers that can be grown (and thus a wide range of pest problems) and second the lack of chemical controls available for some of these crops

The small total acreage of any one type of flower pr

MANCHESTER (York Co.) — Many orchardists have sold off a few acres here and there during the past 25 years. But Ed and Barb Ahrens did the opposite.

They started with only five acres and a dream. As neighboring land became available in two- to five-acre plots, Ahrens purchased it. Accumulation of land is slow when you're buying only a couple of acres at a time, but today the Ahrens own 52 acres. On that land they have established an orchard, a produce farm, a workshop, sawmill, greenhouse, an A-frame house filled with his handcrafted cabinets and furniture.

But the Ahrens are probably most proud that their two married children and five grandchildren have established homes on the land in order to work with them in the orchard.

Living off the land was a popular concept in the 1960s—until the majority of people who tried it discovered how difficult and labor intensive the reality was.

But the dream to be independent and self-sufficient has only grown brighter for Ed and Barb Ahrens Although Ahrens has worked full-time for PP&L for more than 20 years, and his wife as a school cafeteria manager, they have become proficient in becoming self-sufficent, and see living off the land within the next two years

"He hates to buy anything," Barb said of her husband.

So he makes it himself

It doesn't matter that Ahrens had no formal training or former experience, if he wants something, Ahrens builds it himself That's what he did when he built their modified A-frame house 25 years ago. It was the first time he ever built a house.

He said, "I read some books about building houses and used my imagination."

His ability has helped him in the orchard business Ahrens forms crates from timber he has harvested and prepared in his sawmill

"I look at a photo about half the time and the other half use my imagination," Ahrens said of his woodworking projects. He also heats their home, the woodshop, and greenhouse with an outside stove.

"It takes about 15 cords a year, but all the wood comes from my property," Ahrens said of the economical savings.

Ahrens and his wife combine their talents in the orchard business He builds small crates and boxes, and she fills them with fruit he has harvested and baked goods that she and her daughter have made The filled gift boxes are extremely popular at their roadside stand. The Ahrens' daughter's kitchen has been certified by PDA. At Christmas, the mother and daughter team also make chocolate-covered apples that are a big success in sales.

Because the Ahrens live in a secluded spot, they rent a roadside location to market their products.

Ahrens plans to retire from PP&L within the next year and sees the orchard as offsetting his retirement fund.

He said that he had worked in his uncle's orchard starting at 10 years old until he became an adult, and missed it. So five years ago, he planted a variety of fruit trees on his acreage.

The family grows 11 varieties of apples for which they built a walk-in cold storage in the former two-car garage They also built a conveyor system to sort the apples Peaches, nectarines, and apricots are also grown

Maintaining an orchard is a lot different today than it was when Ahrens was a kid, he said. Each of the dwarf trees has its own post and trellis wire to enable it to grow quickly and bear fruit. The trees are planted 5½ feet apart with 14 feet between each row. The trees are planted north to south for more uniform sun distribution. The trees are expected to last 20-25 years.

Ahrens does annual pruning and training on the branches. Limbs normally grow upright, but the branches can be trained to grow outward to produce sweeter fruit and for easier harvesting. Ahrens uses rubber bands to pull out branches. If the central leader is too high, he will tie it down and another branch will take over as the central leader.

"The first couple of years, I use lots of rubber bands to pull limbs in position. The bands rot and fall off, so no labor is required to remove the bands.

"Penn State does really terrific experiments in their labs that really help us (growers)," Ahrens said.

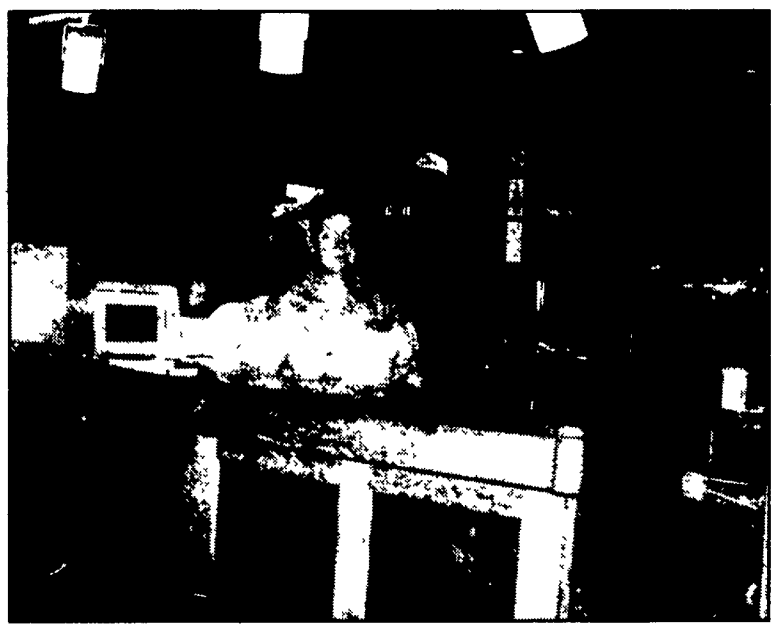
When the work in the orchard slows down, Ahrens quickly turns his attention to his woodworking business and more projects in his own home.

When he built the A-frame house, he had torn down an old barn and used the barn siding for walls in the home and the beams for the ceiling.

Unusual designs and features are a trademark of Ahrens' work. For example, for years he saved cuts of burled wood from the walnut trees on his property. When he decided to put in a new kitchen, he used the burled walnut as raised panel inserts framed with white oak also harvested from his acreage.

Ahrens has more than 50 different cast iron implement seats that he has collected for many years. He used a few of these to make swivel bar stools at the kitchen island.

Unlike many kitchens using stock cabinets, the Ahrens kitchen uses every bit of space in unique ways. For example, hand-painted tiles camouflage pull-out spice racks on either side of the oven. The racks are just wide enough to hold spices.



The Ahrens' kitchen demonstrates Ahrens custom woodworking from timbers he has cut on his property and prepared in his sawmill. Ahrens thought up the unique style of using burled walnut raised panel inserts framed with white oak. Notice the bar stool seats fashioned with some of his collection of tractor seats.

Triple Dwarf Acres is named for the three families involved in the orchard operation: Ahrens and his wife with their two children and their families. The orchard sets on one of the highest parts of York County and seldom gets frost. The location also offer a view of surrounding industries, including Three Mile Island.

Another unique idea is electrifying several metal food graters to serve as above-the-sink lights.

Ahrens built a sunroom-greenhouse for Barb, who likes to pamper plants, such as the Christmas cactus that has bloomed the past 50 Christmases. The greenhouse and the yard have an abundance of birdhouses fashioned by Ahrens. Barb also collects Noah's arks and her husband has made several different styles for her. The Ahrens also collect cast iron figurines and miniature cars and trucks.

Although their home overflows with Ahrens' woodworking projects, his wife admits that occasionally she isn't happy with the finished project. One of these is a handmade hickory table.

"It's too big for my space, so we're giving it to one of the kids and he will make me a round table," Barb said.

The Ahrens are proud of their five grandchildren and love having them help in the orchard. Ahrens restored old garden tractors for each grandchild, ages 6-15, so that they have something to transport them around the orchard.

Of working full-time jobs and maintaining two home businesses, Ahrens said, "Other guys are running around, going on vacations. My vacation is to stay home and work. If I'm not in the shop, I'm in the orchard."

Asked which he enjoys most, the workshop or the orchard, Ahrens replies, "It's a toss-up. I like being outside and I like working with my hands. When you start with a tree and turn out a finished project, it keeps you going."

In the sawmill, Ahrens cuts trees and processes them through the kiln for a month until the moisture content is reduced to 6 percent. He can dry 500 boards at a time.

His next project is building a high tunnel greenhouse. It's an idea he saw at the recent Fruit and Vegetable Growers Convention.

Typical of the many do-it-yourself-projects is this fireplace. The Ahrens collected fieldstones from their property and built this massive fireplace with a rounded hearth and a beam from a barn they dismantled. "I get an idea in my head and I do it," Ahrens said of designing things without plans.

Ahrens handicrafts these boxjointed pieces of maple, cherry, oak, and walnut timbers that he has harvested and kiln dried. Barb fills them with fruit and baked goods to sell at roadside outlets.

ANSWER — Mrs. Paul Brubaker, Mt. Joy, wanted to know how to get rid of lady bugs in the house. Thanks to hazel Hann, Needmore, for sending the remedy: Purchase blocks of camphor at a drug store. Break the blocks into squares and put one on each window where the bugs seem to enter. Hazel that she tried it and after a week and a half, the lady bugs were gone.

ANSWER — Harold Stoudt, Hamburg, wanted a lightweight, 3-point, pitmanless sickle bar mower preferably with a six-foot cut to use occasionally for trimming fence rows and ditches. Thanks to Martin Petroski Jr., Jackson, who writes that he has a seven-foot 3-point hitch class one sickle bar mover. It is belt-driven model 100 Balanced head International. It could be cut down to a six foot. The listed price for new is $2,500-$3,500, but he will sell for $400. He used it on an IMT 542-42 horsepower. It's simple and modern and has a safety release. Petroski used it for timming pastures and around buildings. It is garage-kept, but should have a new belt or adjust the tension on the old belt. Perhaps new blades or ledger plates will be needed to cut fine grass. Petroski has not used it for three seasons. Petroski said that he lives in Susquehanna County, north of Scranton, south of Binghampton, N.Y., near Elk Mountain Ski Area. If interested, call (570) 756-2764.

ANSWER — Naomi Lapp, 1202 Holtwood Rd., Holtwood, PA 17527, wants information or patterns for Raggedy Ann dolls. Thanks to Tina Gojeski for writing that the patterns are available in the sewing department of Wal-mart and other places where they sell McCalls' patterns.

Preventing Salt Damage

YORK (York Co.) — Some of the heaviest snow falls can come in February and March.

Before you reach for that bag of salt to deice your walks and driveways, consider what effect it may have on your trees and shrubs, especially if you have salt sensitive plants such as red maple, tulip tree, white pine, pin oak or linden.

Salt can damage plants via the salt spray landing on the plant and through salt in the soil. Salt spray can enter twigs through a leaf scar and kill the dormant bud. In the soil, salt separates into its sodium and chloride ions. In spring, the chloride ions are taken up by the roots, enter the sap, and can prevent buds from opening. The sodium ions enter the plant's system the same way that soil nutrients do and can restrict uptake of magnesium and potassium.

Salt can also prevent roots from taking in water, creating a drought condition that can kill plants.

Salt damage symptoms often do not appear until plants begin growing again in spring. Some of the symptoms include: yellowing or browning of needle tips on conifers, scorching of leaf margins on deciduous trees in spring, sparse or stunted foliage, twig die back, or flower buds that don't open.

Choosing deicing products wisely can help prevent costly salt damage. Here are some of the products available and their effects on plants:

Rock salt (98.5 percent sodium chloride). Cheap, but very corrosive and damaging to plants.

Calcium chloride. More expensive than rock salt. Supposedly doesn't damage plants, but still contains chloride which could harm trees.

Potassium chloride. Natural product that is a fertilizer and food salt substitute. Can harm plants.

Calcium magnesium acetate (CMA). Made from dolomitic limestone and acetic acid (the acid in vinegar). Not harmful to plants, but expensive.

Mifflinburg Home Gardeners' School Is March 9

TURBOTVILLE (Northumberland Co.) — Penn State Cooperative Extension in cooperation with county garden clubs will present the fifth annual home gardeners' school on Saturday, March 9, from 8:30 a.m. until 4 p.m. at Mifflinburg Area High School, First and Market Sts., Mifflinburg.

Subjects and instructors include the following: "Houseplants," Dennis Wolnick, Penn State University; "Perennials — New Varieties," Erica Beadle, Highland Gardens; "Outdoor Plants, Including Vines," Richard Weilminster, Penn College of Technology; "Photography in the Garden," Jerry Zeidler, Images of Nature; "Floral Design," Susan Miller, Hometown Florists; "Prune to Bloom," Linda Day, Master Gardener; "Growing and Using Herbs," Madeline Wajda, Willow Pond Farm, and "Square Foot Gardening," Elizabeth Finaly, Berks County Agricultural Center. Richard Weilminster of Penn College of Technology will present the keynote address, "Landscaping the Home."

Registration fee of $25 includes a box lunch and refreshments. Deadline for registration is Feb. 28. Registration forms are available at area garden centers, garden club members or by contacting Gloria Dobson, 86 School House Lane, Turbotville, PA 17772, phone: (570) 437-3426.

Wanted: Well-Kept Farms For Dairy of Distinction Merit

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co) – Pennsylvania dairy farms are invited to apply for this year's Dairy of Distinction Award from the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program. Applications must be submitted by April 15.

The award is based on the idea that attractive farmsteads enhance consumer confidence in the wholesomeness of milk and stimulate milk sales and public support for the industry Dairies receiving the highest scores in each of 10 Pennsylvania districts will be awarded an 18- by 24-inch Dairy of Distinction sign to display in front of their farm

"This program is run by volunteers and recognizes the hard work and dedication of dairy producers who promote a positive image for the dairy industry," said Mike O'Connor, secretary of the Pennsylvania Dairy of Distinction program and professor of dairy science extension in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences

Roadside judging will take place in May Judges will look at factors that can be controlled by the farmer, such as clean and attractively finished buildings, neat landscaping, ditches, roads, and lanes, and well-maintained fences They also will take into account other aspects of the farm, such as cleanliness of animals, the barnyard, feed areas, and manure management

Crystal Spring Farm, Mifflintown

Winning farms will be notified in late June Because this is a yearly award, previous winners are reevaluated each year to see if they are still maintaining excellent standards

To receive an application, call Mike O'Connor at (814) 863-3913 or e-mail him at MOConnor@das psu edu

Since 1987, Pennsylvania's Dairy of Distinction Program has recognized more than 750 dairy farms The Pennsylvania program is part of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program, which also includes New York, New Jersey, and Vermont Dairies in these states can contact the program secretary in their state for applications

How Is Your Farm Scored?

Awards will be based upon neatness, good maintenance, and other factors, which can be controlled by the farmer Attractive background scenery should not be weighed heavily in judging All judging observations should be made from a vehicle at one or more points on an adjacent public highway (or if farm is off the road, the nearest lane) Judging should give equal consideration to old wood construction and new construction of metal or concrete block

The award program may be used for subsequent advertising or promotion activities for dairy producers or dairy farming Farmers who apply for awards agree that, if selected, they will cooperate with these activities and make all reasonable efforts to maintain both the exterior and interior of their properties in an acceptable condition

How The Judging Works

Judging teams will visit farms during the month of May Farms will be judged each year as the award is presented on an annual basis Any dairy failing to maintain appearance standards will be asked to remove their sign The Dairy of Distinction signs remain the property of the committee, not the property of the dairy farmer All farms must achieve a compliance score of 90 percent of their Dairy of Distinction score card Your cooperative or milk handler will be contacted to approve your milk quality

Rules

1 The Dairy of Distinction sign remains the property of the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program Committee (NEDFBP)
2 The post and bracket shall be supplied by and maintained by the dairy farmer NEDFBP suggests that a wood post 4"x4"x12' or iron pipe 2"x12' be used Posts or pipe should be installed and maintained in true vertical position with 8' above ground Top of the bracket should be lower than six inches from the top of the post In addition, NEDFBP suggests that the sign be mounted in a frame to provide additional stability
3 The sign shall be displayed in front of the dairy at roadside An attractive post and bracket, or other frame shall be used to display the sign No more than three signs should be displayed from the sign frame or post, and all shall be of a style, general size and quality comparable to the Dairy of Distinction sign The sign should be secured on all sides to avoid wind damage
4 Signs shall not be moved to other premises New owners of a Dairy of Distinction farm must apply to retain the sign
5 Replacement of damaged signs shall be at the discretion of the committee
6 No producer shall be charged with scoring or sign expenses
7 The judges' decision will be final
8 Judging will take place between May 1 and May 31
9 Farms awarded a Dairy of Distinction sign in previous years will be judged between April 1 and April 30 If they do not qualify, they will be rejudged between May 1 and May 31 so they have the opportunity to keep the sign
10 Farms that do not requalify will return the sign to their regional Dairy of Distinction Committee

Dairy of Distinction
2002 Pennsylvania Application

PURPOSE OF PROGRAM

Attractive dairy farms give the consumer greater confidence in the wholesomeness of milk and stimulate milk sales which encourages public support for the dairy industry The award gives recognition to the dairy farmer for maintaining a well-kept farmstead

ELIGIBILITY

All Northeast dairy farms producing milk for sale are invited to submit an application for the award Dairies receiving the 10 highest scores in each of the 21 districts will receive an 18"x24" Dairy of Distinction sign to be displayed in front of their farm

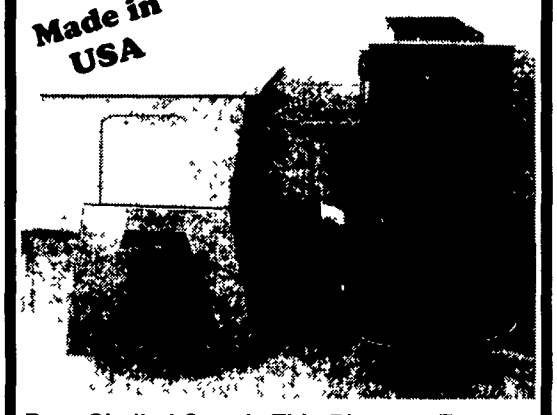
Heat with Corn!



Burn Shelled Corn In This Biomass Furnace
A BETTER ALTERNATIVE
The corn burning furnace has many advantages over wood and coal heat The large storage bin holds up to 14 bushels of fuel, which is automatically fed into the combustion chamber as needed There's no need to load the furnace several times a day The use of corn also eliminates the bark mess, insects, splinters, and handling problems connected with the use of wood fuel, and the dust and dirt from coal UL Approved

Novak Sells Antiques, Collectibles From Shop,Web

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

FISHERTOWN (Bedford Co.) — "When it comes to antiques, smaller is better," Karen Novak adds laughingly, "especially if you have to mail them."

It was the difficulty of mailing large items that led Karen, a vivacious mother of two, to deal primarily in toys, match safes, and several smaller objects.

She especially likes "Tootsie" and "Chein" toys. Chein toys stem back to the late 1940s and early 1950s and are metal toys that duplicate carnival rides. Chein toys in good condition, especially with the original boxes, can run as high as $1,300.

"When I first got into this I bought two, one for each of my children," Karen says. "They will be used to help fund their college educations."

Tootsie toys are small metal cars and trucks that date to the early 1900s. The idea for the cast metal toys came from a dry cleaner who made cast metal buttons. The name came from a great-niece of the originator. He liked her name, "Tootsie."

Of her knowledge, Karen credits a friend from Windber, who would often pick up a piece, look at it and say, "Now here is a real hen's tooth."

Karen enjoyed the expression so much she named her shop accordingly, "The Hen's Tooth."

The shop is located in the front room of the Novak home, which was once a barn. Quaint, spacious, and comfortably filled with collectible, nostalgic, items from the past including toys and an Eisenhower collection there is little to testify to the home's former life.

The Eisenhower collection stems from an experience Karen had as a small child. "I was in Gettysburg attending church with my grandmother when the president appeared. I was sitting on the end of the aisle and as he passed, he patted me on the head. I never forgot it."

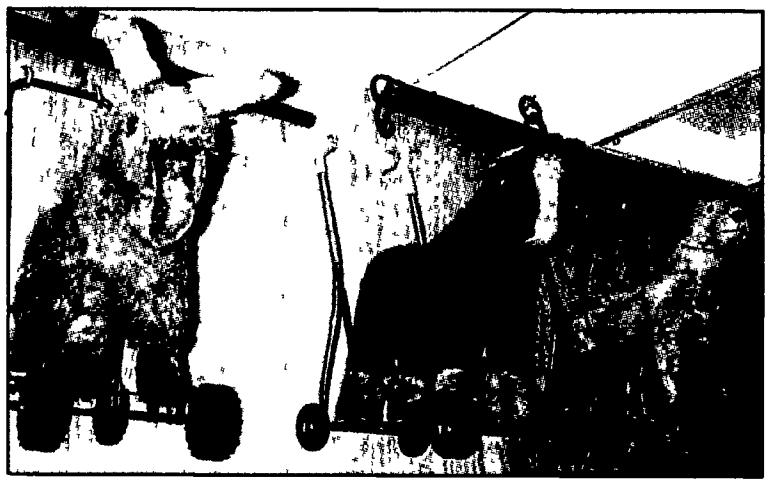
For awhile I tried doing business through the shop only," she explained. "But I love to talk and would quite happily talk the day away, consequently not making any money or getting much done."

Her dentist husband needed help in his office setting up the computers and Karen pitched in to help. By the time she was finished she was certain she could design a Website and thus was born Novak Antiques.com.

"I learned quickly that you have to connect your Website to the search engines," Karen says. "When anyone types in "Tootsie Toys," my Website comes up. The same goes for 'antique toys' or many other items I have in my shop."

Living near to Penn State University, Karen also learned of the nostalgia many people have for anything connected with PSU. A second Website was born known as "Happy Valley on Line."

Karen Novak finds these small metal cars and trucks that date to the early 1900s and known as Tootsie toys are appealing to her and collectors.



These English riding toys are considered extremely rare.

According to Karen Novak, Chein toys are very valuable when in good and working condition. This one is extremely rare.

Penn State memorabilia in Karen's collection includes banners, pennants, bottles from the creamery, programs, bulletins, and photographs of Joe Paterno and other top Penn State officials. She also has a line of new Penn State souvenir items including golf bags.

The Penn State collection led her to yet a third Website known as golf bags.com where she sells golf bags from various universities.

Like many of today's dealer, I started with E-bay," Karen admits. "But that takes a percentage of the profit and everyone was doing it. I found designing my own Website was much more profitable. I am keyed in with both Google and Excite search engines.

When a friend, Dan Morphy who owns the Adamstown Antique gallery asked for help, Karen was only too happy to accept the challenge.

"I am excited with the success he has had," she said. Displaying an example of her product, Karen shows a very "user friendly" site which allows the antique shopper to browse through picking out whatever might tickle his fancy.

With his own Website, which allows the shopper to pick and choose from hundreds of items, all clearly pictured, Morphy saw his business immediately increase. Antique pickle castors, glassware, cocoa cola tip trays, glass bells, and other items of either antique or nostalgic value have sailed off the shelves.

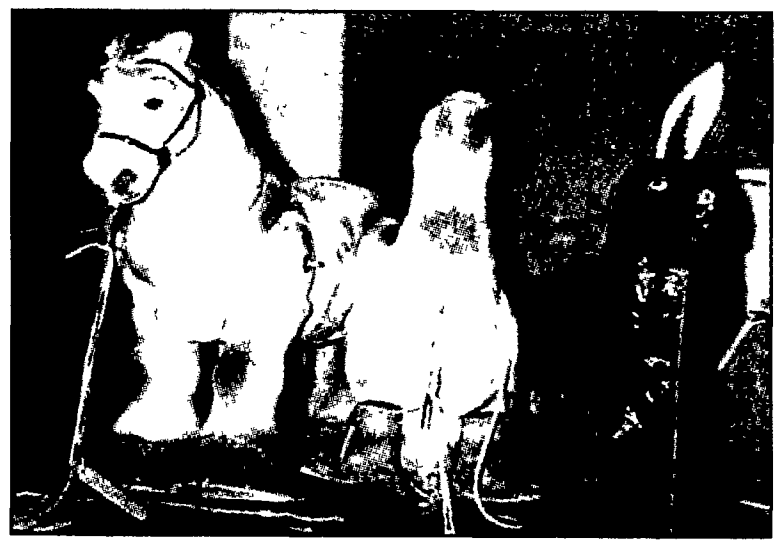
"I'm happy that I could help him and I learned a lot in the process," Karen says.

As for her own future in antiques, Karen says she has a never-ending list of projects and interests. She likes English riding push toys, coffee grinders, dollhouses, and miniature toy horses.

"Sometimes the hardest part is deciding if it is a keeper or something I should sell." She laughs and said, "Too many keepers are bad for business."

Karen realizes that above all else, in order to stay in the antique business in today's world, it is important to keep up with modern trends.

"The computer has become a valuable asset," she emphasizes.



Although Karen has a shop, The Hen's Tooth, she prefer to do business on line.

Tips For Oriental Rug Collectors

If you like the look of oriental rugs but are intimidated by the mystique and hesitate buying on your own at auctions and estate sales, learn a few facts.

First, forget the misconception that it takes a dealer to be knowledgeable. Actually some of the most knowledgeable collectors are self-educated. However, it does require research. What and how to look at oriental rugs is just the beginning.

For instance, if a rug shows an irregular weave or a variance of color from one place to another, does this mean there is something wrong with it? To the contrary. This is proof it was hand woven. Perhaps the weaver ran out of the original colors. And, probably several weavers added their own touch. Don't confuse this with running dyes where designs are blurred and bleed into lighter areas of the rug. Avoid them.

Basically there are five rug types.

• Persian: Designs range from bold geometric tribal and nomadic patterns to the curving floral patterns in intricate designs. Colors range from bold to subtle.

• Turkestan: Patterns are repeated often in the form of geometric "guls."

• Caucasian: Bold geometric motifs in bright blues, reds, and white.

• Chinese: The background is a solid color with a central motif of flowers, animals and Buddhist and Tao symbols. The most common are in olue and white or tan and ivory combinations. However in the 1920s and 1930s, it was common for people to have rugs and carpets custom made to match American room decor. Some the finest Chinese rugs I have seen were made for private individuals using multi-floral patterns in a variety of colors.

• Indian: These rugs can confuse experts as well as beginners, since they are copies of both Persian and Chinese rugs. To the trained eye they have a coarser weave and the designs are lacking the artists' centuries old touch.

There is also a specific design in the form of a stylized mosque; the prayer rug. It was made by all mideastern countries.

Most available older oriental rugs are from the 1920s.

CLUES: To examine a rug, turn it over and look for rewoven sections and alterations. If you see that a damaged section was cut out and the rest of the pieces stitched together the rugs' value is lessened from 60 to 70 percent. Check the rug borders.

Elverson Fire Company Spring Antiques Show And Sale

ELVERSON (Chester Co.) — On March 16 and 17, Elverson Fire Company will conduct its 65th semiannual antique show and sale. The show is hosted by the Fire Company for the benefit of the New Engine Fund. This year's show includes 44 dealers displaying fine country furniture, primitives, American folk art, quilts, linens, baskets, tools, toys, dolls, pewter and more.

Admission is $3.50. The show is open 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Saturday and 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Sunday. Lunch, dinner, and refreshments will be available. The Elverson Fire Company is located on Route 23, three miles east of Morgantown, exit 22 of the Pennsylvania Turnpike.

Antique Detective

If the side borders or selvages are gone, subtract from 25 to 40 percent. Unfortunately some rugs may have had worn pile touched up with paint. Rub with a cloth. Be especially wary of rugs at local auctions.

Learn to look at such clues as border designs and central motifs, one by one. Each tribe and village had specific border designs. For instance, Caucasian rugs have stylized figures of people, dogs, and birds. Persian rugs may have stars and rosettes.

Caucasians also have serrated leaves and striped borders. Turkish rug borders often have running vines, Rhodian lilies and rosettes similar to Persian forms. Disks, eight-pointed stars and floral geometric are sometimes used.

Look at a fine oriental rug as a painted canvas. Is the finished result pleasing to the eye? Value depends not only on current popularity of one type of rug over another but scarcity of examples.

If you are serious about collecting it's a good idea to not only study the many books on the subject but subscribe to catalogs put out by the major auction houses. This helps you keep in touch with market ups and downs.

Antiques Questions And Answers

Would this covered vegetable dish be saleable? On the bottom it is marked; Haviland, France, The Cherbourg, Haviland Bc Co., Limoges. It is porcelain with a delicate floral motif and gilt trim.

N.M.C. - North Miami, FL

Hundreds of patterns were made, many similar. Your vegetable dish could sell in a shop for $250.

I bought this gilt porcelain lamp with a center medallion of an 18th century romantic couple 20 years ago for $2.00. Could it be Limoges? On the back there is a round medallion marked inside, "Le Mieux china. 24 K gold. border crafted." Is it worth having it appraised?

J.R.B. - Cincinnati, OH

Your lamp is not Limoges. It is one of many gilded porcelain items made in the 1940s, 50s. Unfortunately "all that glitters isn't gold." It has a shop value of around $75.

Are travel posters worth anything? I found an old one in my late aunt's attic in good condition. It is of the Palace Hotel Wengen, 1928 that shows a hotel at the bottom of the Alps.

C.T. - Cincinnati, OH

Age, rarity, condition, subject and artist determine the value. Yours is listed in the Warman's Antiques and Collectibles Price Guide at $800.

We have a cradle made generations ago and handed down in our family. It is a figured maple and the family dates it as around 1870. Aside from sentimental value what could it be worth?

G.S.F. - Cincinnati, OH

Similar cradles sell at auction for around $350-400.

I've been told my beautiful green glass pitcher with the white enameled figure of a boy and bird is Mary Gregory glass. It belonged to my grandmother, and I am 80. It is around 5" high. What can you tell me?

S.Z. - Cincinnati, OH

Legend has it Mary Gregory was an artist at the Sandwich Glass company, where she painted white enamel figures on glass. This type of glass was also done in England. It was an imitation of the cameo glass made in Bohemia. The Sandwich Glass factory made it in the late 1880s. Reproductions have been made over the years. An authentic small pitcher such as you have described could sell in a shop for $200 or more.

I found an Orphan Annie figure at a yard sale made of bisque. It is marked "Germany." and I paid $10 for it. What intrigued me is that her head bobs up and down. Did I find a treasure?

T.F. - Cincinnati, OH

You did good. Your "nodder" could sell in a shop for $150. "Nodders" originally were made in the 19th century and still are the most expensive are of porcelain and made by Meissen.

I found a bag of glass candy containers at a garage sale...five for $25. They were in different shapes. One a fire engine. Another a bus, etc. The seller said they were his when he was a child and that he is in his 80s. How do I find out their value ?

B.B. - Cincinnati, OH

You'll find prices and descriptions and history in Schroeder's Antiques Price Guide, Published by Collector Books, and in book stores and library reference departments.

Claas Offers New Twin Rotary Rake

COLUMBUS, Ind. — Rake up to a 20-foot 6-inch swath with the new Liner 650 Twin Rotary Rake from Claas of America. The new rake features a chassis that swings into different positions with a double action hydraulic cylinder, allowing the operator to make one windrow or two. Each rotor contains 11 tine arms running in a sealed permanently lubricated gearbox, designed for years of reliable service.

The Liner 650 also features a standard tandem axle under carriage that pivots independently for smooth and accurate tracking. The rake swings directly behind the tractor for a narrow transport width.

McCormick Unveils New C Series Tractors

PELLA, Iowa — McCormick International USA, Inc., has unveiled its new C Series tractors — a value priced, cabless lineup ranging from 73 hp to 102 hp. The C Series is the fourth tractor series to be introduced by McCormick in the U.S. market since the company's rebirth in early 2001.

Produced at the McCormick tractor plant in Doncaster, England, all four C Series models (C70, C80, C90 and C100) feature Perkins high torque, lean-burning four-cylinder diesel engines.

McCormick's 8/4 Synchro shuttle transmission is also standard on all models, with available powershift speed and creep speed control options to improve productivity and operator control. Both 540 and 1000 PTOs are available on the C70, C80, C90 and C100 models.

With flow rates up to 16 gallons per minute, the C hydraulic system offers one of the highest capacity systems in low- to mid-range hp tractors.

A narrow 84-inch wheelbase on the 2WD models provides good maneuverability in tight quarters. A full-tilt, one-piece hood provides quick, easy access to the air filter, engine and radiator for daily service checks and routine service work. "A" post exhaust allows for a wide, open view upfront. For convenience and safety, the 20-gallon fuel tank can easily be filled from ground level.

McCormick USA also sells the CX, MC and MTX Series of tractors in the U.S. The company expects to introduce several other series of tractors, with a variety of horsepower ranges and uses, during the next several months.

John Deere Introduces 4000 Ten Series Compact Utility Tractors

TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. — Quicker response time...easy implement hookup...low-effort controls...just three of the many new features of the John Deere 4000 Ten Series compact utility tractors. With nine models included in the series — 4010, 4110, 4115, 4210, 4310, 4410, 4510, 4610, 4710 — every customer is sure to find a 4000 Ten to suit his or her needs, no matter how big or small the job.

Combining the latest technology with more than 165 years of experience, John Deere offers a variety of new features in the 4000 Ten Series. The eMatch™ Operating System, an enhanced electronic operating system, allows the operator to "customize" the tractor transmission responses to the job at hand.

The features include: SpeedMatch™ that offers the ability to preset a maximum speed; MotionMatch™ that offers the ability to select the rate of deceleration; and LoadMatch™ that helps prevent engine stalls. Optional automotive-style cruise control features on-the-go acceleration, deceleration and resume functions.

With the 4000 Ten Series tractors come two industry firsts — the eHydro™ and the ePowrReverser™ electronically controlled transmissions. All eHydro models (4210, 4310, 4410, 4610 and 4710) feature eTouch™ controls that provide for easy electronic engagement of PTO, MWFD and hydrostatic drive pedal functions. This technology is similar to the "fly-by-wire" technology used in fighter planes.

The 4310 and 4410 models offer the new ePowrReverser™ transmission — an exclusive in the market. This feature is an electronically controlled reverser transmission that eliminates the need to clutch.

Also available on every model of the 4000 Ten Series is the new John Deere iMatch™ quick coupler hitch system. This implement attachment system converts a typical three-point hitch system to fixed hooks with attaching points allowing operators to simply back the tractor up, flip the lever and slide on the PTO shafts. iMatch is a direct response to customer feedback and will make implement attachment quicker and easier.

Implements for the 4000 Ten Series include: loaders, backhoes, front and rear blades, field cultivators, disks, mowers, rotary cutters, posthole diggers, rotary brooms, snow blowers, and rear tillers.

For added operator comfort, all 4000 Ten Series models offer a deluxe, high-back seat; easy entry and exit; convenient right-side service checks; wide-open operator stations; and operator presence systems. And, with new lighting and safety systems, including higher-wattage bulbs, sturdier ROPS structure, new seat belts and others, the series meets all ANSI and OSHA safety standards.

Industry Outlook Reports Sales Decline

CHICAGO, Ill. — Forecast for the U.S. unit retail sales of farm tractors, self-propelled combines, farm field machinery and farmstead equipment are indicating a slow down and in some categories a decline for 2002 according to the Association of Equipment Manufacturers' (AEM) recently released "2002 State of the Ag Industry Outlook."

AEM is the consolidation of the Equipment Manufacturers Institute (EMI) and Construction Industry Manufacturers Association (CIMA) effective Jan. 1, 2002.

Farm Tractor Forecasts Down

Predictions for the total sales of all two-wheel and four-wheel-drive farm tractors are down 3.3 percent compared to 2001 sales. Two-wheel-drive farm tractors 100 PTO hp and over are predicted to have the greatest decline in sales with -4.4 percent.

U.S. unit retail sales of self-propelled combines are also indicating a decline for 2002. Sales are predicted to be -6.0 percent compared to positive sales in 2001, which were up 12.8 percent from the previous year.

Field Machinery Predictions Mixed

Unlike farm tractors, farm field machinery survey results indicate mixed results for 2002.

Responses from key industry agricultural manufacturers indicate the sales for round balers, mower conditioners, windrowers/swathers, farm loaders, chisel plows, disk harrows and air seeders/air drills are expected to be higher this year.

Leading the way with 3.1 and 3.0 percent sales increase for 2002 respectively are farm loaders and air seeders/air drills.

Rectangular balers are predicted to remain flat, while forage harvesters, planters, manure spreaders and field cultivators are indicating negative sales ranging from .2 to 5.3 percent.

The sales of equipment parts for farm field and farmstead-type machinery are once again expected to be positive. Sales forecast for farm field equipment parts is at 3.6 percent while farmstead-type equipment parts is expected to reach 1.0 percent.

Positive Signs

Showing positive signs for 2002 are farmstead equipment. Both dairy mechanization equipment and milking machines are projected to increase sales by 0.3 percent and 1.0 percent respectively over 2001 figures.

According to the survey respondents, interest rates and dairy, beef and hog livestock prices are this year's key positive factors influencing the sales of new equipment.

Negative influences on new equipment sales for 2002 are predicted to be soybean and cotton prices along with quantity of used equipment for sale.

Survey Responses

The results of this survey are based on the responses from 39 key AEM agricultural industry member companies that manufacture tractors, combines and other farm field and farmstead equipment. These companies account for more than two-thirds of the total related products sold by the industry. The report provides industry average forecasts for 2002 versus 2001 sales in the various product categories. Forecasts for each product line represent the average of the responses from AEM member companies.

Printed copies of the "2002 State of the Ag Industry Outlook' are available from the Association of Equipment Manufacturers for $25 each. To order, contact the AEM office at (312) 321-1470.

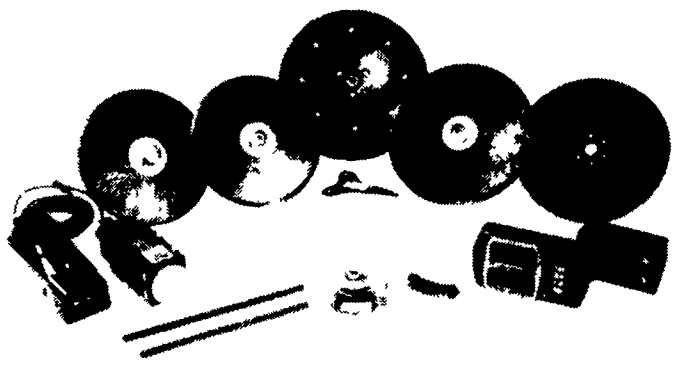
The First Step to Successful Planting



Good crops aren't produced by chance. Before the first seed is placed in the soil the quality of the crop is effected by the tools used in the planting process. Genuine AGCO planter parts help ensure a precise depth and accurate row spacing. Set the foundation for a great year and produce the results you expect. Stop in today for all of your planting needs.

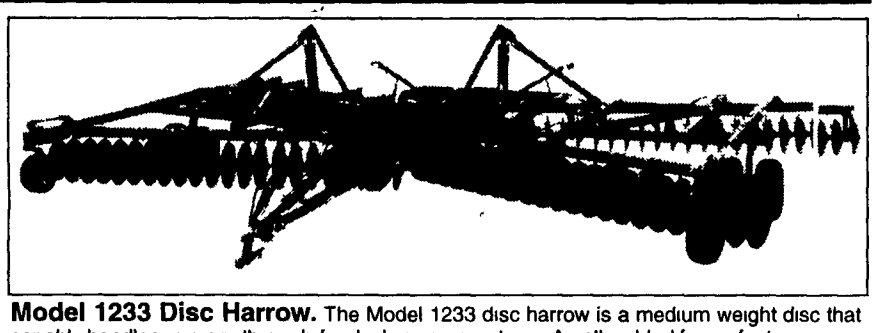
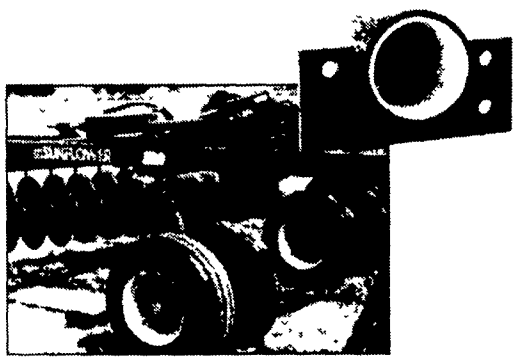
Model 1211 for Smaller Horsepower. The Model 1211 Disc Harrow is Sunflowers discing answer for Americas smaller farmers It is available in rigid models only and matches tractor horsepower in the range of 110 and lower With exception of gauge wheels the 1211 has all of the same outstanding features common to the 1233 It's tough, heavy and capable of performing primary and finish discing operations You'll like the way it cuts the soil leaving your field in a ridge free condition The 1211 truly meets the toughest standards earning it the label of America's best built disc Cutting widths available from 10 to 15'

Sunflower – The best performing discs on the market today!

They Cut & Level, Level, Level
High Quality/ High Performance
From sizes as small as 10' wide up to 42'



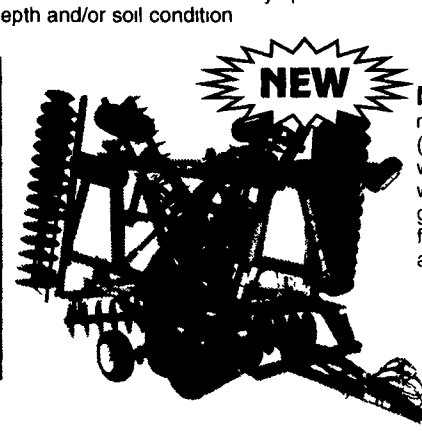
Model 1233 Disc Harrow. The Model 1233 disc harrow is a medium weight disc that capably handles primary-through-finish-discing operations An all welded frame features even weight distribution for uniform penetration, and the three flexible sections assure that rough, rolling and terraced ground will be tilled evenly and smoothly. Large tires provide excellent flotation, unmatched depth control and the base for level discing Like all Sunflower Discs, the 1233 is loaded wtih features that give it a definite edge over competitive brands These features enable the 1233 to always provide a level job of discing, regardless of terrain, discing depth and/or soil condition



Maintenance-Free Lift System

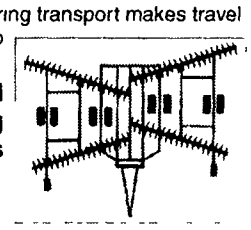
Gauge Wheels

C-Flex™ Bearing Standard

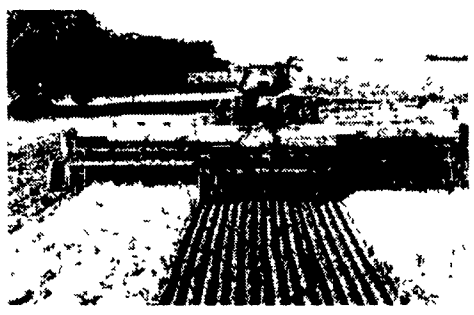


Model 1434 Disc Harrow. Unit folds to a narrow transport width (13' 5" on 19-28' models) (17' 8" on 29-35' models) Walking tandem wheels on center section effectively distribute weight evenly for increased tire life Increased ground clearance during transport makes travel from one field to another much easier

Staggered Overlapping Gangs



9000 Grain Drill

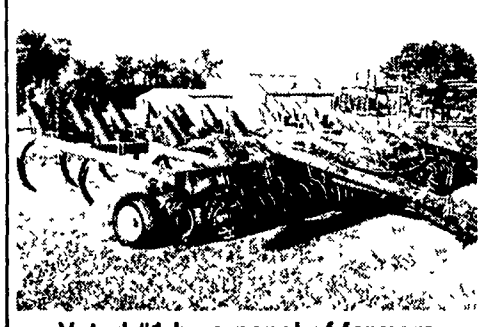


Capable of no-till, min-till or conventional seeding

The 9432 Three Section Grain Drill from Sunflower features a unique design to deliver unmatched flexibility and seeding performance in all field conditions. The staggered box design eliminates any box contact in uneven terrain Team this new design with the industry's most capable opener and you'll discover a new level of performance

- Two opener designs available to meet your needs featuring no-till or min-till capabilities
- Exclusive soil control device directs soil into seed trench ahead of the press wheels
- Three axis hitch allows greater flexibility between tractor and drill
- Available in 30' as well as 40 working widths

4200 Coulter Chisel

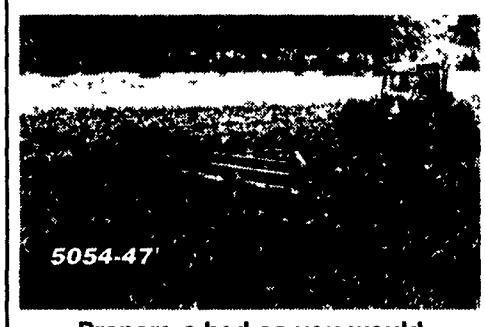


Voted #1 by a panel of farmers at the Farm Progress Show

When complete soil fracturing is needed at a depth of 12" or less, the Sunflower 4200 Series Trash Mulcher is your best choice. Designed with shanks every 15" and coulter blades every 7 1/2', not much gets by this tillage tool The 4200 series is built like a tank and can perform well in challenging field conditions It's time to discover a new level of performance

- Front Mounted Single Point Depth Control is easy, safe and precise
- Standard walking tandems
- Rigid Shear-Bolt or Auto-Reset shanks available
- Sizes 8'-9" through 28'-9" available
- Coulters can be hydraulically raised

5000 Field Cultivator

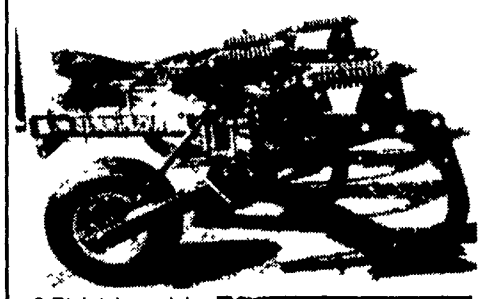


Prepare a bed as you would for yourself

The Sunflower 5000 Field Cultivator ranks as one of the best overall cultivators on the market today. Structural design, trash clearance and depth control are just three reasons why this unit has attained such a high rating A heavy-duty 3"x4" rectangular welded steel frame provides the rugged durability it takes to withstand the stresses created by today's high horsepower tractors It's time to discover a new level of performance

- 190 lb Point load spring shank assembly or a 2 piece "S" tine shank available
- Heavy-duty walking tandems standard in all locations
- Front Mounted Single Point Depth Control is easy, safe and precise
- Available in 18' through 63'6" working widths

Rip And Open Up
Yield-Robbing Compaction Layers



- 3 Pt. hitch models
- 4 - 9 Shank units

4000 SERIES RIPPERS

- Highest point pressure in the business
- Ratchet adjust gauge wheels

SnowWolf Ultra Series Heavy Duty Skid Loader Plows

Trip Cutting Edge Design
The SnowWolf Ultra features a trip cutting edge design which allows full down pressure for incredible scraping ability in forward or backdragging situations It eliminates "false tripping" from snow load and will only engage if you actually strike an immovable object

Massive Construction
The SnowWolf Ultra is designed to take abuse from the largest skid loaders. At approximately 100 pounds per foot of plowing width, you know the Ultra means business

Food for Thought
Did you know that a modern skid loader with a high speed transmission and a SnowWolf Ultra will outplow a pickup truck under most plowing conditions? A cleaner job, closer to the obstacles (without worrying about your fenders), and more acres plowed in the same amount of time!

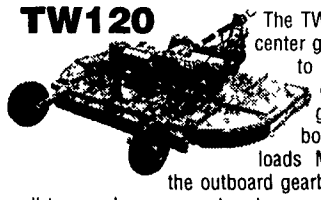
Model R500 - 7 Foot

TW120



The TW120 cuts a 120" swath of material The center gearbox, rated at 120 HP, transfers power to the 100 HP outboard gearboxes Torque dampeners on both sides of the center gearbox help prevent driveline and gearbox damage caused from sudden shockloads Massive 2-3/8" diameter output shafts in the outboard gearboxes help provide optimum service The pull-type and semi-mount units require a 50 HP (min) tractor and the lift-type unit requires a 60 HP (min) tractor (with adequate front weights)
TW120 - 10' Cut • TW84 - 7' Cut • TW72 - 6' Cut

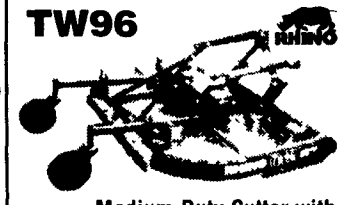
Pull-Type
The pull-type SE10 requires only a 45 HP (min) tractor for economical, wide-cut mowing A hydraulic cylinder or ratchet lift screw is available for raising and lowering the mower A spring shock absorber is optional to help cushion shockloads to the mainframe when operating in rough terrain (Unit shown with optional chain guards Deflectors are standard)

TW96



Medium-Duty Cutter with Heavy-Duty Features!
96" Cut, 120 HP Center Gearbox, 90 HP Outboard Gearboxes, Pan Blade Carriers, Updraft Blades, Cat 4 Driveline, Slip Clutch Protection, Lift or Pull-Type, 540 or 1000 RPM, Replaceable Skid Shoes, Rated for 2" Diameter Material, Safety Deflectors Standard

DB150. Over 30 years of hydraulic mower design experience has made the Rhino® DB150 the preferred choice of experienced operators for the mowing of pond banks, levees, drainage ditches, and hard-to-reach areas

The DB150 can extend to a maximum of 158" from the center line of the tractor allowing the 60 inch rotary head to cut areas that are difficult or impossible to reach with ordinary mowers By being hydraulically driven, maintenance is greatly reduced with the absence of belts and pulleys The DB150 outperforms many competitive units with smaller hydraulic systems The DB150 utilizes a 60 gallon hydraulic system which allows the unit to run cooler in tough mowing conditions The large reservoir also serves as a counterweight and remains stationary on the mainframe eliminating the potential traffic hazard of a movable counter-balance weight The DB150 features a heavy-duty three-point hitch using a lower double lug hitch system to fit a wide range of tractors To help insure a clean cut, the DB150 features updraft blades and a blade tip speed of 20,028 FPM

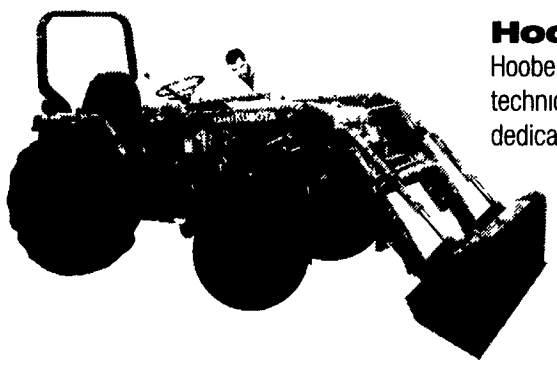
It Won't Milk The Cows... But It Handles Almost Every Other Farm Task

Kubota

Kubota Tractors
Kubota utility tractors are ideal for a wide range of applications, and when matched with a loader or mower, they are perfect for picking up bales of hay, loading manure, cleaning stalls, and several other farm maintenance chores. Fuel-efficient Kubota tractors are dependable and reliable, and when it comes to horsepower per dollar, no other utility tractor stacks up to the value of a Kubota.



Hoober Incorporated
Hoober has experienced tractor service technicians and parts support personnel that are dedicated to keeping your Kubota running strong. Call Don Beidler today and get a Kubota tractor from the dealer that has been selling and servicing tractors for 60 years

Consider a Kubota tractor for your farm!

Reel Auggie = Results

The Reel Auggie Design provides a fluffy, more palatable ration that promotes feed consumption. When your cows consume more high quality feed, they'll produce more milk.

MORE MILK IN THE TANK, THAT'S THE BOTTOM LINE!

To see results, ask for a Reel demonstration from your local Knight dealer today.

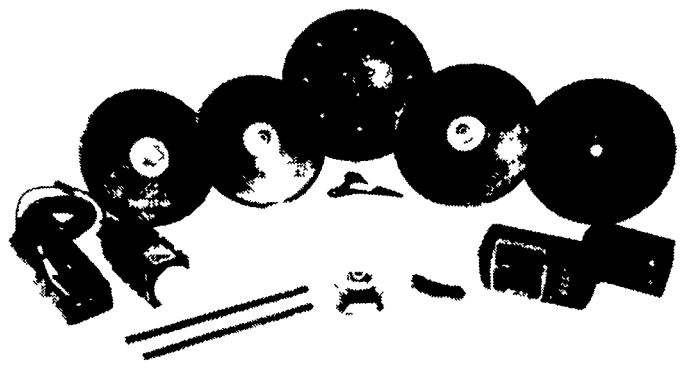
The First Step to Successful Planting



Good crops aren't produced by chance. Before the first seed is placed in the soil the quality of the crop is effected by the tools used in the planting process. Genuine AGCO planter parts help ensure a precise depth and accurate row spacing. Set the foundation for a great year and produce the results you expect. Stop in today for all of your planting needs.

NEW AGCO WHITE PLANTERS

You've picked the perfect seed –

FIELDSTAR READY

- Superior Seed Singulation
- ½ inch to 4-inch planting depth
- Improved Seed Meter Access
- Easy-to-View Seed Depth Indicator
- Quick Release Hoppers

INTRODUCING THE WHITE 8000 SERIES PLANTERS

You've done your research, prepared your field, and picked the perfect seed variety. Now plant that perfect row, with the 8000 Series planter from White. With 49 models to match your needs, they're packed with features that save time and plant 4 to 31 rows of corn or soybeans with unmatched precision The 8000 Series features an improved seed meter design for outstanding accuracy with a wider variety of seed sizes And standard walking beam gauge wheels along with increased planting depth range of ½ inch to 4 inches give superior depth control over larger surface irregularities. Select models feature "on-the-go" seed rate adjustment from your tractor cab. FlexFrame designs range from 30' to 60' for an "acre-eater" performance from one end of your field to the other.

It's time to plant the perfect row. Stop by your White Planter Dealer today and get it right with WHITE

- Simple drive system for more reliability.
- Change from windrow to swath in seconds - without tools.

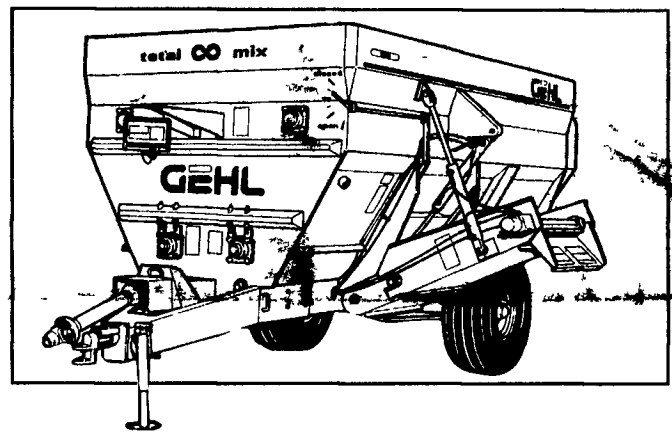
TMR "Total Mix" Mixer Feeders



"Total Mix" TMR mixer feeders let you mix more long-stemmed hay into your ration - up to 30% by weight depending on hay type and moisture content.

- "Hay - slicer auger" - Incorporates knife assemblies into the two bottom augers.
- Better mixing action - Four-auger design creates a double figure - 8 mixing pattern for fast and complete mixing of all feed ingredients.
- Energy efficient - Planetary drive system requires less horsepower.
- Built to last - Patented star couplers absorb shock loads by allowing the bottom augers to flex, providing long service life
- Five sizes - 150 to 455 cubic feet capacities.

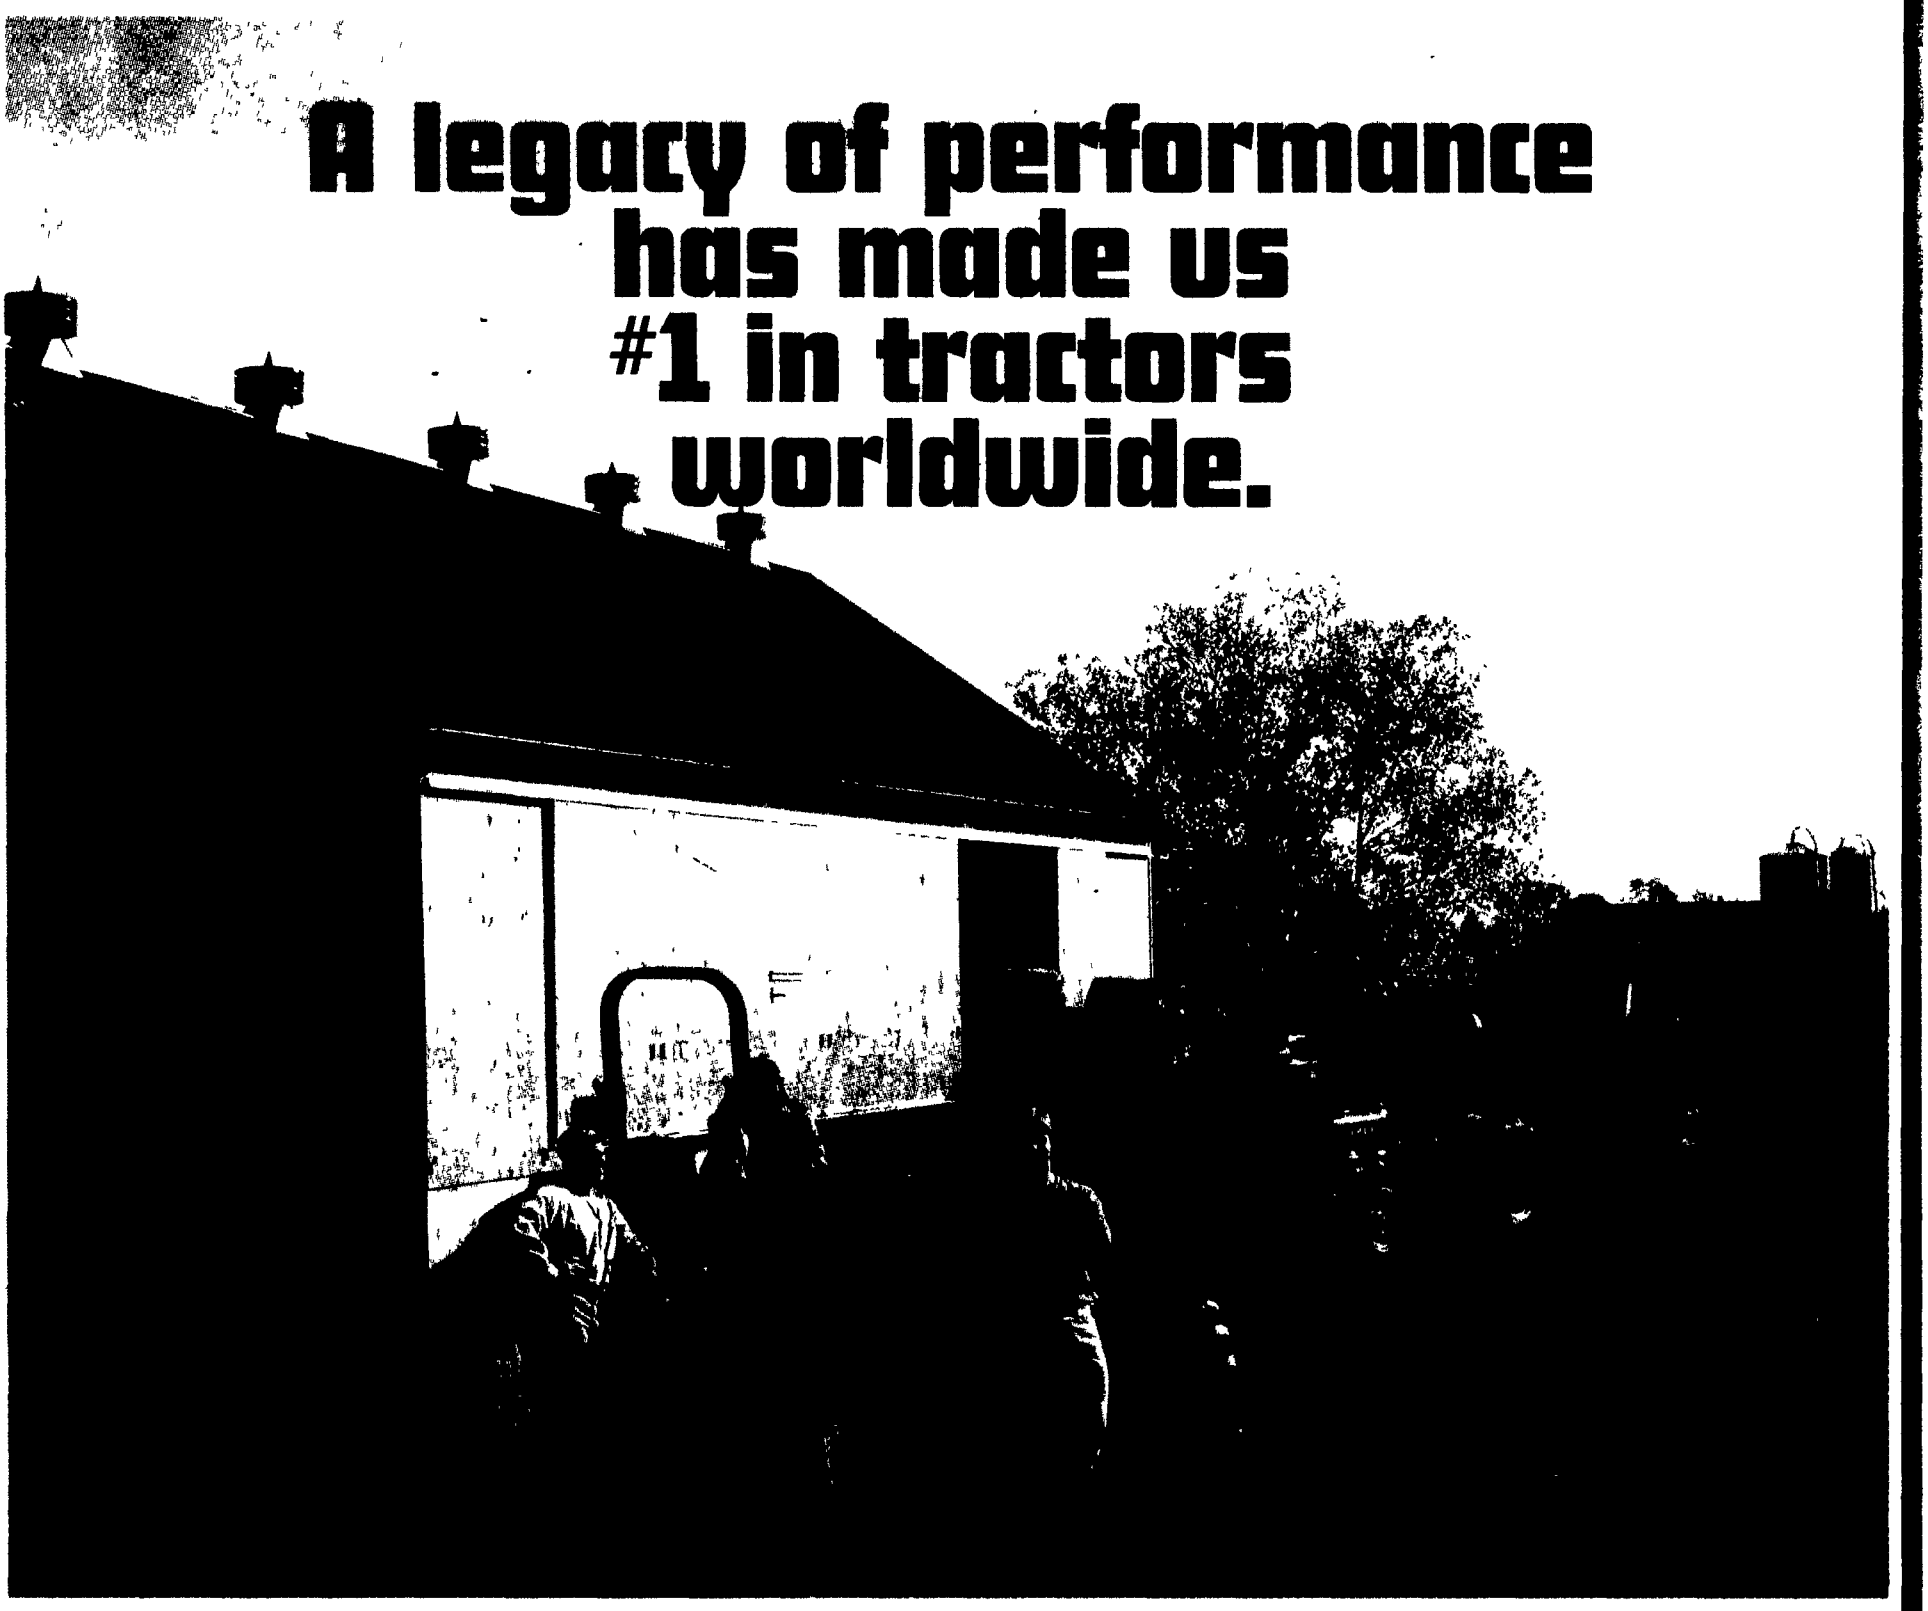
A legacy of performance has made us #1 in tractors worldwide.



We're New Holland.

From the old Ford 30 Series tractor to the "built for you" New Holland TN, generations of farmers have relied on blue tractors to power their productivity. That legacy continues.

Today, New Holland sells more tractors worldwide than any other manufacturer. Why? Because New Holland and your New Holland dealer are specialists in keeping you productive.

New Holland hasn't forgotten what made the 30 Series - or the many trusted Ford tractors before it - performance leaders. So, we're working harder than ever to keep New Holland your brand of choice.

Get into New Holland blue and enjoy a whole new level of productivity. Visit your New Holland dealer today and ask about our full line of tractors from 18 to 450 hp.

ROTO-MIX

ROTO-MIX

"We Like The Consistency of the Mix"
– Nelson & Dennis Weaver, Weaver Homestead Dairy

"Our Roto-Mix mixer from Lapps Barn Equipment processes baled hay just the way it needs to be done. It gives a nice coarse mix, with average stem length 2" to 4"—ration passes the particle size test with flying colors Processed hay almost never wraps around the augers in our Weaverline feed cart.

"We purchased the Roto-Mix 414 in 1998 It has been reliable and trouble free."

Weaver Homestead Dairy milks 133 Holsteins with a herd average of 22,300 lbs.

- Ration haylage, corn silage, dry baled alfalfa hay, brewers grain, minerals, grain, etc
- Feed cost per 100 lbs milk 1999 average $4 24
- Alfalfa hay is purchased from Kansas, 4x4 bales The hay is processed through Hay Processor System of the Roto Mix Mixer
- 4% dry hay is fed (300lbs per mix)
- Farm 100 acres (corn for corn silage and alfalfa for haylage)

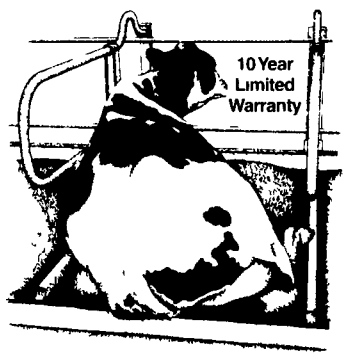
Waterbeds for Cows



ALANTA
LimPoly

The ALANTA Waterbed for cows is a revolutionary product, comfortable, safe and hygienic. It clearly improves your cows' well-being and therefore promotes higher milk production. It is the ultimate stall floor covering for the modern, animal-friendly dairy farm.

WELL MADE
The ALANTA Waterbed is made of two rubber layers with a water-filled compartment in between GD-Enerka gives a 10-year guarantee.

COMFORTABLE
The waterbed molds itself to the cow's shape It's cool in summer and pleasantly warm in winter

SAFE
Thanks to the non-slip rubber upper surface, the cow is gripped firmly and cannot slip off In this way the ALANTA waterbed keeps damage to hooves to a minimum

Here's What Some of Your Neighbors Say About Alanta Waterbeds:

Dale Hindman, Brockway, PA
"We have seen a big savings in the amount of bedding we use and I believe the durability of the beds will be excellent over time."

Harlan Hoover, Oley, PA
"I am pleased with waterbeds. Cow comfort is excellent."

The Next Generation In Milk Cooling

It's new... it's improved .. it's the next generation in chiller technology. Mueller's new and improved IS chiller is the most energy-efficient cooling system in the world. Compact in design, the IS chiller is easy to install in the smallest of spaces and it can be expanded as your cooling needs increase.

For instant cooling or additional cooling, the high-quality scroll compressor provides for lower electrical costs when cooling large quantities of milk. The IS chiller is the only chiller built specifically with the large dairy farmer in mind, and better yet, it's manufactured by Mueller.

Don't skip a generation. Call Mueller today at 1-800-MUELLER.

Silo Doors by Agri-DOOR

We can gladly custom manufacture your silo doors and hardware. We use cedar wood sent directly from Montana. The doors have two layers of tongue & groove cedar with a sheet of plastic in between to prevent feed freezing to the door. All our hardware is powdercoated. Call and order before March 1 and you will get a 5% discount!

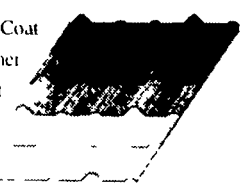
Everlast Roofing, Inc.

Metal Roofing & Siding

The Ultimate G-100 Process
"The Best"



1. Valspar 10S Finish Coat
2. Epoxy Primer
3. Zinc Phosphate Pretreatment
4. G 100 Zinc Coating
5. Full Hard Steel (80,000 min yield)
6. Heat formed less paint cracks
7. Everlast II

NOTE! It is more important what is under the paint than what you see on top!

1 One of the best paints, superior acid rain, cracking resistance and color retention

2 Primer coat promotes outstanding top coat adhesion

3 Zinc phosphate pretreatment This is a very important process If your current supplier cannot supply you with this or does not know, you should reconsider

4 G-100 Galvanized Most metal roofing has approx 40% less galvanized under the paint G-100 is more galvanized than most unpainted panels

5 Full Hard Anything less than full hard will bend easier lower snow loads, etc

6 Heat formed Metal is painted before ribs are formed Most paint cracks at bends, heat forming greatly reduces cracks (check metal siding that is installed for 5-10 years)

7 Stronger design, superior strength, more metal per L F

8 Add Everything Together And Price Should Be $53 37 Per Square $1 69 Per L F

OUR SPECIAL PRICE ONLY

Having Problems Getting Milk Cold?

Consider a Mueller precooler. It's an excellent way to lower the cost of cooling milk. It reduces milk temperature with water pumped straight out of your well. Mueller® precoolers are available in sizes to work with any system. If lower electric bills would make your life easier, call us and ask for more information on Mueller precoolers.

SWEETCAKE 16NU

FEED SUPPLEMENT BLOCKS FOR THE LIVESTOCK INDUSTRY

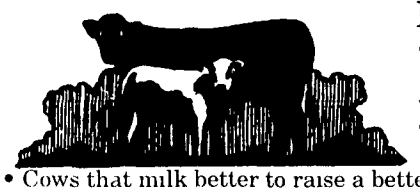
• High Natural Protein • No Urea • Fat Enhanced
• Balanced Supplementation • Safe For All Livestock Classes

Sweetcake Advantages

- Aids in making the best use of your available forage
- Promotes a more even herd consumption, with 24-hour availability to all cattle
- Reduces labor to save you money and give you more time to make important management decisions
- Supplies much-needed vitamins and minerals that forage lacks to help your cattle perform to their genetic potential
- Supplies fat in most formulations to enhance energy intake

For Dairy

- Replacement heifers that grow out soundly and economically
- Body condition on dry cows so they can return to lactation, producing at the maximum potential
- Healthier herds, with essential trace minerals that help prevent metritis, retained placenta and other health problems
- Prompt re-breeding, thanks to essential nutrients



For Beef

- Stronger, healthier calves at birth
- Heavier Calves at weaning
- Cows that cycle better for improved conception rates
- Cows that milk better to raise a better calf

- AVAILABLE IN 200 LB. SIZE -

Dauphin Co.: 82 Acre Beef and Poultry farm is a good investment for any serious buyer. The Organic egg contract is an excellent money make and a first rate building with only the 2nd flock in the building which is just over 1 year old. What's best is the building is fully automatic and temperature controlled even if you aren't there The land is very fertile with all the manure there is little or no fertilizer required for excellent crops. A private setting with silo's for the cattle operation and a very comfortable farm family residence Serious buyers call for a private showing.

Northampton Dairy Family Pleased With New Manure System

DEANNA CUNFER
Carbon Co. Correspondent

BANGOR (Northampton Co.) — When the area was covered with five or more inches of snow in December the Brewer family of Brewer Farms, Bangor, knew there was at least one chore they would not have to deal with thanks to the manure storage structure they installed during the summer of 2001.

The Brewer Farms work force and management team consists of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Brewer; sons Kevin, Jeff and their families; and Robby, a Delaware Valley College graduate.

For many dairy farmers throughout the area, dealing with the daily manure output of their dairy operation in winter months can often consume more time than planned. Fighting the elements to manage the daily removal of manure can be an unwelcome enough chore. When equipment breakdowns occur, as they so often do in the bitter cold and most unpleasant of weather conditions, a farmer's daily routine can be altered very quickly. What often is a 40-minute job can end up taking hours to accomplish while the rest of the daily chores still need to be done.

The daily removal of manure generated by any dairy operation needs to be put somewhere. Often in winter the ground is frozen and runoff can occur. In times when snow cover makes it impossible to reach distant areas of the farm, the fields closest to the barn receive the organic cover often resulting in excessive nutrient levels. In times of deep snow the farmer needs to stockpile the manure for later spreading, also causing runoff.

Prior to the construction of their new manure handling system, the Brewer family used a rear discharge spreader and removed the manure on a daily basis — 365 days a year. Being very conservation-minded the Brewer family knew it would be to their advantage to store the manure enabling them to apply it to the fields at the most opportune times. By installing the manure storage structure, the Brewers have better management control over the nutrients produced by their dairy herd, which will also improve water quality for downstream neighbors. Converting to a storage system not only eliminated a daily chore that took about 40 minutes — in good weather with no unexpected problems — it also enabled the farm to keep the area much cleaner where the manure leaves the barn.

With cows in high production as those in the Brewer herd, the daily manure generated by the animal tends to be of a thick soupy consistency. When a traditional barn cleaner delivers the output to a rear discharge manure spreader, any operation will inevitably have spillage. The Brewer family has eliminated this scenario by installing their new system.

Through the guidance of Claudette Gilbert, agricultural resource conservationist for Lehigh and Northampton counties, the Brewer family voluntarily completed a nutrient management plan. Brewer Farms is currently milking 82 cows with 120 head of young stock and 30 head of feeder steers. Their nutrient management plan addresses manure and fertilizer application rates for cropland that the Brewers farm. Their dairy is not classified as a concentrated animal operation (CAO) but by completing a plan they were able to identify best management practices (BMPs) for proper nutrient management and address their nutrient and environment concerns. Completion of the plan also enabled them to qualify for the Nutrient Management Plan Implementation Grant Program provided through the Pennsylvania State Conservation Commission. This grant program is for cost-share funding to implement BMPs called for in a nutrient management plan.

The BMP for the Brewer Farms involved construction of a 16-foot deep by 80-foot diameter poured concrete manure storage structure. Construction of the system was done by Star-Sollenberger Silos of Chambersburg beginning in June 2001. Construction was complete with manure first entering the tank on Aug. 1. The system was designed with the technical assistance of the Northampton County Conservation District and Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS).

Where the manure exits the barn and previously fell into the rear discharge manure spreader, a new 10-foot deep by 5-foot diameter concrete pipe was buried upright to act as a reception pit. The angle of the chain gutter cleaner outlet had to be lowered to deposit the discharge directly into the reception pit. Washwater from the milkhouse also flows into this pit, keeping the contents fluid. The Brewer operation produces an estimated 600 gallons of discharge per day.

The contents of this tank flows to the manure storage structure through a 24-inch gravity flow pipe. This pipe enters the structure three feet above the bottom of the storage tank.

The capacity of the manure storage structure was designed to store seven months' worth of slurry and allows for future expansion. The family chose to apply the contents of the storage tank to their wheat fields in September at the rate of 5,000 gallons per acre as called for in the nutrient management plan.

The storage structure is surrounded by a five-foot high chain link fence. Although government regulations require a four-foot fence, the family preferred to go a foot higher since young children are involved in the operation. The fence has two 10-foot gates as well as a gate to provide a safe spot for scraping matter into the tank. Plans include cementing the area around the storage structure to make it easy for scraping manure from the surrounding heifer lot into the storage tank.

A four-inch drainpipe was installed around the outside of the storage tank walls to move groundwater away from the tank and prevent any possible damage to the structure. The concrete storage tank was constructed onsite and is a watertight structure actually resembling a huge bowl set in the ground. On occasion, a high water table under such a tank has actually lifted the tank. Installation of the four-inch drainpipe redirects any groundwater and eliminates this possibility.

Another conservation feature the family previously installed was a stand pipe in an earthen and stone catch basin next to the roadway to catch water running across the public road as well as the clean runoff from the buildings. This water bypasses the manure storage system and has eliminated much of the erosion next to the roadway while directing the clean roof runoff away from the building area.

The Brewer Farms' new manure handling system was included last December in the Dairy Waste Management Tour hosted by Hackettstown NRCS, Rutgers Cooperative Extension and Sussex County Soil Conservation District.

Calf Clones Doing Well On Maryland Farms

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

WILLIAMSPORT and NEW WINDSOR, Md. — Perhaps you remember the two Holstein calves on the cover of Lancaster Farming's March 24, 2001 issue.

The calves, Cyagra Z and Genesis Z, are the clones of Con-Acres-HS Zita ET (2E 94, GMD DOM), an exceptional cow that had proven herself in both production and type. Zita died March 2, 2001.

Lancaster Farming spoke with Greg Wiles, who along with his father Charles owns Futuraland Farm, Williamsport, Md., to get an update about the calves.

"They have a disposition just like the original Zita," he said. "They're growing extremely well. I guess the thing we're most anxious about is soon we'll be able to flush them and start an embryo transfer program. They're in excellent health and are really aggressive calves that like to eat all the time.

"Basically they're normal calves. They still get a little more preferential treatment because we know who they are," he said. "But they are fed the same thing. We've never seen anything different from the other calves. They're right where they should be at that stage."

Although no more Zita calves have hit the ground since the last two were born in February, the Wiles family is looking forward to another calf due in February.

They experienced success when the two were born, however so far 20 embryo transfers were not successful.

"We were very lucky with these two, but other people are supposed to be having success with it now," said Wiles.

A dairy operator in Massachusetts, for example, is expected to have a cloned calf born this February.

Northampton Dairy

The manure storage system is an attractive feature that blends well with the other buildings. There are no unpleasant odors, even when standing along the fence surrounding the tank. According to Jeff Brewer, the family is well pleased with their system.

As a forward moving, conservation minded dairy, Brewer Farms has already realized the benefits of manure storage.

Calf Clones

"I think we're very happy we're involved with the program," he said. "We have thought of other animals that we may clone down the road.

"Zita's age made it important to get her cloned, but I can see us going to younger and younger animals with more genetic worth. In the early stage of involvement people have been cloning matriarch cows.

"Eventually there could be a five-year-old cow that could actually be on the farm working and have two-year-old clones," he said.

"The cloning process can begin with a live calf as soon as it hits the ground, so people may start cloning a special natural calf or ET calf to make more contemporaries of that calf as the cost of the cloning process goes down.

"We haven't really lost genetic progress because Zita still has the numbers. We have contracts on embryos and bull calves out of her clones," he said.

On the other hand, "we don't need another five or 10 Zitas. It doesn't make a lot of sense to focus a lot on Zita when basically we should be focusing on newer generations."

The Wiles family sold a future Zita clone, which has not been born yet, for $50,000 at the Maryland State Sale in March.

Coldsprings Farm

In New Windsor, Md., at Coldsprings Farms, two cloned calves have come home to the farm after their birth at the New Bolton Center.

The two calves are from C Aitkenbrae Starbuck Ada, a cow from Canada. Born Sept. 7 and 9, they returned to the farm in the middle of October. The cow, now 15 years old, is still alive.

What's On The Horizon For Nutrient Management?

Feb. 28 Permit Deadline For Smaller CAFO's

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

KAUFFMAN STATION (Franklin Co.) — Nutrient management concerns and the future of Pennsylvania and federal policy were the focus of a presentation given to a gathering of dairy producers here January 4.

"(Nutrient management) is a very rapidly changing area," said Charles Abdalla, Penn State department of

(Turn to Page 10)

Hoff began the process almost two years ago when he was contacted by the National Holstein Association. "They were looking for people who were interested and we got into it that way," he said.

C Aitkenbrae Starbuck Ada, An All-American 3-year-old in 1990, has some "very outstanding daughters," said Hoff, including an All-American 5-year-old this past year.

She produced 25,000 pounds of milk as a 2-year-old but "mostly it's been her show winnings and her daughter's show winnings" that makes cloning her a viable prospect.

"On the first try we didn't get any clones," Hoff said. They then implanted a second group of 20 cows with two eggs each and ended up with two pregnancies that went full term.

The calves seem to be in fine health and do not exhibit a lot of differences among their peers. However "we watch them a little closer than the other calves, of course."

Hoff plans to keep one calf and sell at the state Holstein sale March 9, 2002, "to get some of my investment back and then have the other calf without a pile of money in it," he said.

Hoff has no plans for future cloning as of now. "We want to see how these do first," said Hoff. They will hold off cloning "until I'm satisfied that they make normal animals."

As far as the future of cloning in the dairy business, the procedure may have value, however "they will have to do a lot better on the pregnancy rate."

The farm includes 1,000 acres in close proximity with 480 additional acres in close proximity. The Hoff family milks approximately 550 cows.

Abdalla reminded producers that operations falling in the range of 301 to 1,000 animal equivalent units (AEUs) with more than 2 AEUS per acre of land suitable for spreading manure must apply for a permit by Feb. 28 through the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection (DEP).

One AEU equals 1,000 pounds of live animal weight.

According to Abdalla, 187 mature cows (averaging 1,300 pounds,) 94 replacement animals, and 150 acres of land available for manure would add up to 310 AEUs and 2.1 AEUs per acre. Such an operation would be classified as a CAFO and required to apply for the permit.

CAFOs with more than 1,000 AEUs were previously required to apply for the permit by May 19 of last year.

Required by the National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System (NPDES) through the DEP, the permit requires operators to comply with specific design and operating standards including a state-approved nutrient management plan, erosion and sediment control plan, best management practices, and self-inspection.

Abdalla also urged producers to find out in which watershed their farm is located. Some watersheds are designated as "special protection" and require a more extensive, individual permit in addition to the general permit.

"Location matters," Abdalla said.

New and/or expanded CAFOs of more than 1,000 AEUs and operations with direct discharges to surface waters must have individual permits, regardless of their watershed location.

Abdalla outlined the three principle laws governing nutrient management in Pennsylvania: the Pa. Clean Stream Law, the Pa. Nutrient Management Act of 1993, and the Federal Clean Water Act of 1972.

He also took a look into the future of nutrient management policies, on both state and federal levels.

One proposed EPA rule of interest to Pennsylvania agriculture will be the inclusion of poultry under CAFO definitions, effective in December of this year.

Federal policy is also shifting towards a more phosphorus-based nutrient management system. In October, USDA's Natural Resource and Conservation Service will begin requiring phosphorus-based nutrient management plans for operations that accept government cost-sharing funds for nutrient management, according to Abdalla.

Meanwhile, the course of Pennsylvania's Nutrient Management Act is under discussion, with changes in the works defining concentrated animal operations, phosphorus management, regulations on exported manure, and monitoring of nutrient management plans.

Changes in the Nutrient Management Act are scheduled to take effect in 2004.

Clean Cows, Clean Milk

Lebanon County Dairy Posts Consistently Low SCCs

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

BELLEGROVE (Lebanon Co.) — The Hostetter family Holsteins have a reputation for producing clean milk.

For six years out of the last seven, they have earned the lowest somatic cell count (SCC) count in Lebanon County for herds on Pennsylvania DHIA.

With a rolling SCC of 65,000 for 2001, the milk is well below the 200,000 SCC mark needed to receive the quality milk premium offered by Wengert's Dairy where the Hostetters ship their milk.

Barry Hostetter manages the operation with wife Barbara, son Jeff and his wife Heather.

"I don't have any particular secrets," Hostetter said of the consistently clean milk produced on the farm.

The cows are housed in a stall barn with rubber mattresses and wood shavings for bedding. Management practices include keeping the cow beds clean and "paying a lot of attention to dry cows."

The dry cows in freestalls are provided with rubber mattresses and Hostetter said he makes sure they get a sound transition diet.

Any cows that showed elevated SCC counts are treated again during the dry period. The Hostetters also "dry treat" heifers about a month before calving.

Jeff and Heather, both Penn State dairy science graduates, returned to Jeff's home farm recently after a stint of dairy industry work in Minnesota.

Clean Cows

"There are no magic bullets" when it comes to making clean milk, Jeff said. Cow and udder cleanliness is the most obvious practice.

"Keep those udders and teats clean," he said. Thorough handwashing, and pre- and post-milking dips are the main parts of that program.

With a background in nutrition, Jeff keeps a close eye on the TMR and on the cow's eating habits. A recent count of the milking string showed that all but five percent of the herd were chewing their cud at that time, he said.

At the time of this interview, none of the cows had had a displaced abomasum for more than a year.

The cows are let outside to eat at the bunkfeeder every morning and, in the summertime, graze during the night.

The Hostetters installed a new manure concrete liquid manure storage tank two years ago. The system holds more than a half year's worth of slurry, allowing some room for herd expansion.

The rolling herd average at the end of 2001 was 23,700 pounds of milk, 858 pounds of fat, and 691 of protein.

Odor Issues: 'A Long Way To Go' To Find Answers

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — In a 1999 Penn State survey, people made it clear: perhaps the complaints they may harbor about large-scale livestock operations have something to do with a simple, emotional desire to live someplace else than how far they live or work from ag confinement buildings.

The issue of complaints from odors or other issues is "as much emotional as it is physical," noted Ken Kephart, Penn State swine specialist.

Kephart spoke about the 1999 Swine Farm Study at a Penn State-sponsored Manure Haulers Certification Conference conducted in mid-December last year at the Berks County Ag Center in Leesport.

But coming up with technological methods to understand and control odor issues is proving extremely challenging. Scientists have few answers. "We have a long, long way to go," noted Kephart.

One of the difficulties in understanding potential odor complaints comes from the very way the human brain is constructed.

Odors and emotions occupy the same part of the brain. "Odors and emotions are intertwined," said Kephart.

Often, those who smell something can feel the "triggering" of a memory that can go back many years. And that "image" generated could prove hurtful.

But do ag odors really impact human health? Kephart said, "As far as I'm concerned, we still don't have the answer to that question."

For some people, certain odors can create a feeling of nausea. "It's an issue," he said. "We have to be sensitive to that."

But there is documentation on how odors behave. When leaving a facility, the odor plume stays on course in a straight line. The width of the plume doesn't change that much.

Clean Cows

Barry Hostetter said he uses BST to boost milk production only on cows that were bred back late or are destined for cull, to keep production up for a longer period of time. The hormone causes too much stress on the animals to be used on the whole herd, he said.

"Good genetics don't need BST," he added.

The Hostetters choose proven bulls to maximize the genetic performance in their cows.

in a big way to completely disperse the odor. But at night, because of cooling, temperature inversion takes place, and even fairly modest odors can get carried great distances.

But to address potential affects on conceptions of large-scale housing, "to this day, our best friend is distance," from the facility to neighboring farms or developments, said Kephart.

"Isolate (the buildings) as far from neighbors and resident development as much as possible."

When applying manure, inject or incorporate, Kephart noted. Apply as early in the day as possible. In residential areas, avoid holidays or weekends. And ask the neighbor to notify you about special events so manure can be applied in a timely, nonconflicting manner.

In the study, Penn State identified eight swine farms in the field study. Also, nearby neighbors were also identified. The field study installed three odor-reducing technologies, including biofiltration of exhaust air on thee farms, dust filtration of exhaust air on three other farms, and a floating biofilter for manure storage on two farms.

Kephart noted the relative success of each system. Biofiltration worked well, better than dust filtration, which was not effective. Floating biofilter effectiveness was mixed.

Neighbors were also interviewed about odors, and there was very little correlation between health symptom frequency and distance. Yet, those who desired to live elsewhere, for whatever reason, seemed to be concerned more about health affects.

Some "personal factors" are at work that may not be related to any potential odor problems from neighboring farms.

But these days, producers must remain sensitive to these concerns.

"We see more and more ordinances that are creeping up in townships," noted Kephart. "They are written because of odor conflicts and complaints."

Excess Phosphorus Fed To Pennsylvania Dairy Cows, According To Survey

Zhiguo Wu and Virginia Ishler
Penn State University

Dairy producers are facing environmental challenges that call for minimization of manure phophorus excretion. The fundamental way to minimize phosphorus excretion is to avoid feeding phosphorus in excess of the animal's requirement.

In an effort to prepare producers in Pennsylvania for meeting the challenge, a survey was conducted in summer of 2001. The objective was to assess the level of phosphorus fed to lactating cows and address concerns dairy producers and their nutrition consultants have on reducing phosphorus feeding levels.

A questionaire was mailed to Pennsylvania dairy producers and nutrition consultants in 11 counties representing areas where the majority of milk is produced. These counties were Adams, Bedford, Berks, Bradford, Centre, Chester, Crawford, Cumberland, Franklin, Lebanon, and Lancaster. Response to the survey was anonymous. Thirty-three producers and 38 nutritionists responded to the questionaire.

According to the survey, the phosphorus levels fed ranged from 0.35 to 0.45 percent for the low producing group of the herds, and from 0.39 to 0.50 percent for the high producing group. Averages were 0.39 and 0.44, respectively, for the two groups.

Compared to levels recommended by the National Research Council, these levels are high. The council recommends 0.31 to 0.37 percent phosphorus for cows producing 55-100 pounds per day.

According to these recommendations, producers in Pennsylvania can reduce their phosphorus feeding amounts by 20 percent, on average. This means that cows can often be fed without the use of mineral phosphorus supplements. Elimination of supplemental phosphorus can minimize phosphorus inputs to the farm and improve farm phosphorus balance.

Because excess phosphorus in the feed will end up in the manure, a 20 percent reduction in manure phosphorus can result in an even higher reduction in manure phosphorus. This will have significant bearing on how much manure can be applied to the land.

Reducing dietary phosphorus to amounts that the cow actually needs can help producers cope with forthcoming environmental regulations.

CAFO Permitting: Know The Requirements

Robert E. Graves
Penn State Agricultural, Biological, and Engineering Extension

Implementation of Pennsylvania's CAFO NPDES (Concentrated Animal Feeding Operation National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System) permit program is well on its way. Any farm business with livestock (AFO Animal Feeding Operation) that has more than 1000 animal equivalent units (total live weight of animals divided by 1000 one AEU) should have applied to the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) last year for either an individual or a general NPDES permit.

We interrupt this article for an important CAFO announcement.February 28 is another important date for any farm that is a CAO (Concentrated Animal Operation) under the Nutrient Management Act. CAOs with between 301 and 1000 AEUs must apply for a Pennsyulvania CAFO NPDES Permit. To learn more: Contact your regional DEP office Visit DEP Web site at www.dep.state.pa.us/farmers/default.htm.

See article by Dodd and Abdalla in Farm Management Reports, November 2001. Contact your County Conservation District Office. Talk with a knowledgeable consultant. If you qualify, it is your responsibility to comply. Fines for noncompliance can be substantial. It takes time to develop the materials needed for the entire permit application. The main portions of the permit include:

- Description and location of your AFO and all land that will receive manure.
- Approved NMP (Nutrient Management Plan.)
- Conservation Farm Plan (E&S plan for plowing and tilling.)
- Identification and implementation of appropriate BMPs (Best Management Practices) to control pollution.
- Certificate of design, installation and inspection of liquid manure storage structures by a professional engineer.
- A plan for regular inspection, record keeping, emergency response, training and reporting concerning various aspect of the manure handling and storage system.

Long range business plans for any AFO should also consider existing CAFO requirements and the possibility that the animal numbers may change. Just like financing, building design and selecting a milking parlor the steps required to obtain an NPDES permit take time and effort.

Learning how to work with and abide with DEP regulations is becoming just as much a part of operating a dairy as following milk inspection rules.

"The answer to the most common question is 'No, there is no build-up.' "

"In my previous barn, I scraped two times a day; and I was tired of it, not to mention the danger to the cows if a cable snapped. I thought I would not be able to justify the additional cost until my builder suggested a design change which brought the cost down relatively close to the original design.

The biggest benefit to me is the labor savings. Two people can handle all the chores for our herd. I save money not only on labor but also on repairs.

The cows' hooves are healthier, and they show heat better because they are not afraid of slipping. During the five years with slats, I have not lost a single heifer from slipping. The cows stay much cleaner, even with my misting system for cooling them. The water has a place to escape."

- Raymond Good
Good's Dairy Farm

"We would use slats again if doing it all over!"

"Our original plan was to install scrapers. But after 10 minutes in a slatted barn in Somerset County, we changed our minds. Some people stay away from slats because of the initial cost, but that extra cost is made up for in the first couple years.

The one thing I like the most about slats is that there is no expense. I don't have any scrapers or drive units to maintain. I don't have to run scrapers every day or haul manure like we did in our previous tie stall barn. The cows' foot health has been a lot better, and the cows stay much cleaner. Our milk production is up and the somatic cell count has gone down. I give at least some of the credit to the slats because with less moisture on the floor, there is less bacteria."

- David Wolfskill

Dairy Management Seminar Conducted At Farm And Home Center

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster County) — A two-day seminar conducted one week apart provided an educational forum for dairy producers who attended the event conducted at the Farm and Home Center, Lancaster in January.

Developed several years ago by Glenn Shirk, dairy extension agent for Lancaster County, the course, "Dairy Farm Management Basics," offered financial and herd management information.

"I hold one almost every year to help farmers manage the farm to support their personal and family goals," he said. Shirk drew upon nearly 40 years of experience as a dairy extension agent to draw up the program.

In that time he "got a feel for what's important and what's not — I've observed successes and failures and I've attempted to show that to others, to help families manage their farms more effectively and efficiently, and to meet their goals," he said.

Shirk began the seminar by covering farm and family goals, along with business management topics. The latter part of the day, and the entirety of the second day, is focused on herd management details.

Although farming is an ideal way of life for some, said Shirk, the farm must still prove profitable for producers to fully enjoy farming. In the beginning of the seminar Shirk said that those considering farming should think about basic questions of personal commitment, besides business considerations, before starting a farming operation.

A prospective farmer should "earn while you learn," according to Shirk, and perhaps work at a farm first.

He also covered factors affecting farm profits such as pasturing versus cropping, renting versus buying, and custom hiring someone to do the work versus owning and operating machinery. He advised producers to know their cost of production to make "smart management decisions."

In the herd management strategies component of the seminar, Shirk emphasized the "plan to succeed, then manage to succeed" approach.

Although he listed several herd management goals, he said that the producers should "set goals appropriate to your game plan — view these goals cautiously." For example, some goals were having the heifers be 24 months at the first calving, her weight being 1,200 pounds after the first calving, and having each cow produce 18,000 pounds of milk.

Profit priorities included "managing money so you can ride out the waves of volatility in the marketplace," he said. He also emphasized controlling debt and cost, increasing milk to profitable levels, and reducing involuntary cull rates.

"Look into the mirror and ask yourself, 'what am I ready for? What can I commit myself to?'" he said. "Hopefully the person in the mirror is honest."

Factoring in fixed costs of housing and basic cow costs will enable a producer to find the cost of feeding and housing the cow. This amount is the of break-even milk production. Basic costs, which do not vary with the level of milk production, are the "DIRTI 5:" depreciation, interest, repairs, taxes, and insurance.

The next 10-30 or more pounds of milk is the cheapest milk farmers can produce, as the only cost associated with the increased amount of production is the extra feed. One pound of feed dry matter can produce 2-3 pound of milk.

Consequently, said Shirk, if times are tight feed costs should not be the cost which a farmer looks to cut, as it will curtail badly-needed production. "Be careful where you trim," he said.

Additionally, he recommended recordkeeping, as "it's easier to make decisions. When you have information you're not working in the dark." Getting accurate data to the veterinarian, DHIA representative, and AI technician will also help in making better decisions.

Also feeding and nutrition, preparing dry cows and late-bred heifers for their next lactation, controlling feed costs and grazing considerations were part of the herd management sector of the seminar, along with cow comfort, housing, and behavior, diseases, parasite control.

Shirk has also developed worksheets to help producers figure out their farm profits and analyze their income and cost. In addition he also made available a worksheet to help farmers compute the value of feeds given to their dairy animals. Other exercises helped participants develop a sense of direction in the farming enterprise, develop an effective management team, and determine the herd size, profit margins and production levels needed, among other useful worksheets and reports.

Dairy Managers Complete Human Resource Training

New Sessions Slated To Begin In April

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Another group of dairy managers recently completed Dairy Alliance's Management Essentials for Dairy Success (MEDS) course and received their certificates. They are now ready to organize their dairy operations for improved employee performance and satisfaction.

MEDS training equipped the new class with proven techniques that they can use to make their dairy businesses more profitable and more desirable as a place of work. MEDS develops the supervisory leadership skills of middle and senior dairy managers.

The most recent MEDS class took place in Altoona during October and November. Graduates included Duane Hershey from Ar-Joy Farm in Cochranville; Robin Stone, Bethany Nelson, and Pamela Craig from Murmac Farms in Bellefonte; Doug Smith from Frosty Hollow Farms in Roaring Spring; Chad Ripka from Fair Valley Farms in Martinsburg; Dan and Penny Ulmer from Guided-Path Farm in Bellefonte; Logan Bower from Pleasant View Farms in Blain; Dave Hileman and Terry Foster from Hilecrest Farm in Tyrone; Mike Trout from Trout Brothers in Loysville; Jodi McClintock from McClintock Dairy in Accident, Md.; and Clay Reese from the Reese Farm in Port Matilda.

Instructors for the course were John Park from Penn State Management Development, Lisa Holden from Dairy and Animal Science, and Richard Stup from Dairy Alliance.

MEDS is a comprehensive, six-part, supervisory leadership program. A new class is forming that will meet at the Clarion Hotel and Convention Center in Carlisle. All dairy managers who wish to improve their employee management skills are invited to attend. The first three sessions of MEDS will be held in Carlisle on April 3, 24, and May 1.

Titles of the first three modules are as follows:

1. Communication Skills and Techniques.
2. Supervisory Roles, Responsibilities and Leadership.
3. Performance Management and Motivation.

The last three sessions will take place in Fall 2002. MEDS is an intensive course and registration will be limited. For more information, or to reserve your place in MEDS, contact Tammy Perkins at the Dairy Alliance office (888) 373-PADA or HYPERLINK "mailto:tap10@psu.edu" tap10@psu.edu.

Guidelines For Spreading Manure In Winter

Penn State Extension

It's a pretty well accepted fact these days that manure can contribute to water pollution problems. Organic matters, nutrients, and microbes can get into surface and, eventually, ground water.

Winter, in particular, is a tough time to spread manure and yet control pollution. Winter provides conditions most likely to cause pollution and loss of nutrients. There is little or no plant growth to use nutrients and the ground's surface is often frozen. This not only keeps the manure from being absorbed into the soil, but also encourages it to wash off with rain and snow runoff. When snow gets deep, manure is often over applied to the fields closest to the barn.

To reduce pollution from winter manure spreading, follow these practices whenever possible:

- Spread on dried fields. Spread on wetter fields when soil and weather are drier to avoid heavy runoff.
- Apply to flatter fields.
- Avoid frozen fields, if possible.
- Apply to fields with good vegetative cover such as hay or cover crop.
- Leave a "buffer zone" of thick, undisturbed vegetation between the area to be spread and streams, runs, springs, wetlands, drainage swales, and any other water areas.
- If possible, catch up on all your spreading before the ground freezes in fall, or wait until it thaws in the spring.
- Don't overload the spreader so that manure falls out into streams, road ditches, and other drainage areas.
- Stockpile manure during the worst weather. Caution must be used here to avoid creating pollution from the stock pile area. Often a structure of some sort is needed. Get professional assistance before proceeding with stock piling of any kind.
- Compost or digest manure rather than spreading. Again, be sure to consult a professional.
- Prepare a nutrient management plan and follow it. A nutrient management plan puts all the aspects of preventing pollution from manure into perspective as well as maximizing nutrient use. It balances out your nutrient production with soil and plant use. It helps you weigh alternatives for handling your animal waste.

Assistance in preparing a plan is available from the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service.

Growing Heifers Fast: Does It Pay?

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

KAUFFMAN CENTER (Franklin Co.) — How fast can we grow dairy heifers to reap maximum economic gains?

That was the question Dr. Jud Heinrichs of Penn State posed to a group of dairy producers at the Franklin County Dairy Day here January 4.

Heinrichs presented research showing the economic effects of accelerating growth in heifer calves after weaning to allow the animals to breed, calve, and start producing milk sooner.

"The bottom line is we want to get milk out of these heifers," he said.

Based on the studies he cited, Heinrichs concluded that "a little is good, but too much is not good" when it comes to pushing heifers above their natural growth rate.

"At current feed/price relationships, very rapid heifer growth does not pay," he said. "Repeated studies show significant loss in milk production as heifers were raised faster and faster."

The highest priority related to milk production in a 2-year-old heifer is the size of the animal at calving, Heinrichs said.

"Body weight at calving is going to have the biggest impact on what her lactation (milk production) will be."

For Holsteins, the optimum weight a day after calving is 1250 to 1300 pounds. While fresh heifers weighing less than that will produce less milk, those that weigh more than 1250 to 1300 pounds will show no increase in production, Heinrichs said.

The corresponding optimum age at first calving is 22 to 24 months, based on production vs. heifer raising costs. Heifers that calved earlier showed a loss in milk production compared to those calving at 22 to 24 months.

Even though a heifer on an accelerated feeding ration may begin milking sooner, the resulting loss in overall production will, in the end, have a negative effect on the milk check, according to Heinrich. "We lose more in first lactation milk production than what it costs to raise them a little slower," he said.

A primary reason that rapidly accelerating heifer growth does not pay lies in the fact that "animals have a genetically set growth curve," Heinrichs said.

Just as periods of slow growth cause by poor quality feed is rapidly compensated for when the young animal begins eating good rations, an animal growing faster than normal will attempt to return to its genetically determined rate of gain.

"The animal is fighting to get back to its regular growth rate," Heinrichs said.

New Technology For An Age-Old Chore

More than 100 people turned out last week to learn about AMS and tour the dairy, which consists of Holsteins as well as Jerseys. One of three farms now using AMS in the state, the Heindel operation is being studied by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture towards potential approval of AMS for general use by May of 2003.

Penn State extension agent Vinton Smith said data so far on working AMS is "very positive." At a price of about $150,000 per unit capable of milking 50-70 cows, affordability may be the biggest drawback. Photo by Dave Lefever

Keep Good Records For Nutrient Planning

An Important Management Tool On Dairy Farms

Jerry Martin
Dairy Environmental Agent

Records are an integral part of every facet of successful dairy herd management. Good records are critical in the ongoing management process of any business. Records allow managers to evaluate previous management plans and implementation activities. On the basis of this assessment, adjustments and improvements can be made to future plans. Records provide other benefits as well. This is especially true with nutrient records.

Why Keep Nutrient Records

- To better manage nutrients. The primary benefit of any records kept on a dairy operation should be for the purpose of improving the management of that part of the operation. It is no different with nutrient records. Nutrient records are vital for agronomic planning and maximizing the value of nutrients produced on the farm. Whether it is reducing the amount of commercial fertilizer used or providing for a wiser distribution of nutrients across the operation, good records provide the ability to make these decisions.
- To defend against complaints. The possibility of complaints from urban and long-term rural neighbors alike regarding the handling and application of manure on dairy farms is an ever-increasing possibility. An approved nutrient management plan, as well as the records of when, where, and how much manure was applied to each field, are necessary and valuable in providing a sound defense against complaints. Records give a dairy operation proof of their actions.
- To meet regulatory requirements. Many dairy operations in Lancaster County, whether Concentrated Animal Operations (CAOs) or volunteers, have developed approved nutrient management plans under Pennsylvania's Nutrient Management Program (PNMP). These plans, if properly implemented, provide limited liability protection. Proper implementation of an approved nutrient management plan includes keeping all records required by the Act and outlined in the regulations. Up-to-date, accurate records are critical in providing the necessary documentation of nutrient management plan implementation for liability protection purposes.

What Nutrient Records Are Important?

The following is a list of nutrient management records you should keep for your dairy operation. Note: Items marked with the asterisk (*) are required by Pennsylvania's Nutrient Management Program (PNMP).

- Soil Test Results* — Soil tests should be taken every three years (required to be current within the last six years by PNMP). Soil tests reveal soil fertility levels and track changes in these levels over time.
- Manure Test Results* — Although book values are available for dairy manure, your manure nutrient levels could range 100 percent above or below book values. Book values are an accurate average, but only an average. (For PNMP, manure analysis is voluntary except for CAOs that export manure.)
- Manure Application Agreements — Many dairies don't have the land base needed to handle all the manure produced on the operation. In these cases, rented land or other farms are used to safely apply the excess manure nutrients. It is important to obtain a written agreement to spread or apply manure on any land that you do not own.
- Annual Manure Production* — Record of total amount of manure generated on the dairy operation yearly by all animal groups (including non-dairy production animals).
- Containment Records — List of where manure is stored, size of the storage, and the type and form of manure stored. This should include permanent and temporary stacking areas.
- Farm Maps — A map of all fields on the farm(s) that includes field identification (name or number), acreage, soil type(s), and location.
- Land Application of Nutrients* — An application log should be maintained for all manure and non-manure (sludge, compost, etc.) applications. The following information is required by the PNMP: field location, number of acres, month of application, rate of land application, method of application (including incorporation time), previous year's crop, and this year's crop. Other recommended information should include: specific date of application, who applied the manure, wind direction at the time of application, wind speed (gusty, variable, light, calm), air temperature for the day, and soil conditions (wet, tacky, dry).
- Commercial Fertilizer Applied* — Record for each field that receives commercial fertilizer including the amount, analysis, date applied, and method of application.
- Crop Yields* — Record of annual yields for each field. While hand harvesting is not required by PNMP, the simplest estimation methods for a particular crop (loads, bales, etc.) should be used to obtain as accurate approximation of yield as possible.

Record Keeping

• Manure Used For Non-Land Application* — Specific use and amount of manure used for a non-land application purpose.

• Manure Transfer Records* — Under PNMP, CAOs are required to maintain completed 'Manure Transfer Sheets' while volunteers must record the destination, date and amount of exported manure.

• Equipment Calibration Records — Manure spreaders and injection equipment need to be calibrated when initially developing a nutrient management plan. Recalibration should be done periodically or when manure-handling practices change.

While there may be other items of nutrient information that producers may want to record, the items listed above are sufficient for most dairy farms. The most difficult step in the whole process is getting started.

Don't wait until regulations force you to keep nutrient management records. Rather, be proactive and begin to document your nutrient information, management activities and cropping history.

Keeping these records should become standard practice for all dairy producers. Your records are the only way you have to document the practices you have followed and implemented on your farm. In addition, these records provide the most reliable basis for sound management decisions in the future — both for agronomic and environmental stewardship decisions.

PDQA Program In Place

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Dairy Quality Assurance Program (PDQA) is an integrated management program that identifies best management practices (BMPs) influencing the quality of milk, meat, and biosecurity.

PDQA includes three modules for quality assurance: milk quality, meat quality, and biosecurity. Objectives of the program are to help producers:

• Produce consistent, safe, high quality products through increased animal health, productivity, and profitability.

• Meet consumer and regulatory expectations regarding onfarm food safety and quality using a systems-based approach.

• Promote environmental stewardship.

To enroll in PDQA, producers must complete an application, then work with an implementer and Penn State personnel to identify objectives of that particular farm.

Study Looks At Manure Management To Control Foodborne Pathogens

Composting Kills Harmful Organisms

WOOSTER, Ohio — The effects of nutrition and waste management on microbial pathogens found in manure may help to control their spread from the environment to humans.

Ohio State University and North Carolina State University researchers have received a four-year, $2.4 million USDA grant to study which zoonotic organisms are present in manure and in what amounts, and what happens to them when animal diets are changed or when the manure is subjected to various waste management treatments. Zoonotic organisms are those that can spread infection from animals to humans.

"Through different waste management technologies and the effects of certain nutrients, we want to see whether or not the pathogens survive," said Mo Saif, head of the Food Animal Health Research Program at the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center (OARDC) in Wooster.

"There are some feed ingredients that might have an inhibitory effect on pathogens. We also want to determine which management procedures work best in eliminating those pathogens."

Animal manure is just one way that food-borne pathogens are spread in the environment. Food-borne illnesses are considered to be the most serious food safety problem in the United States.

According to the most recent data published by the Centers for Disease Control, food-borne diseases can potentially cause an estimated 325,000 serious illnesses resulting in hospitalizations, 76 million cases of gastrointestinal illnesses, and 5,000 deaths each year.

Some of the more common food-borne pathogens include enteric viruses, E. coli, cryptosporidium, salmonella, brucella, listeria, clostridium, cyclospora, and chlamdiya — all of which can potentially be found in manure.

"Because of the concerns with food safety and the use of animal manure on agricultural land, we are basically going to study every food-borne pathogen in manure to see if there is a risk associated with public

Good Milking Procedures Help Draw Premiums

Greg Strait
Fulton County Dairy Agent

The dairy industry is again changing. You basically have no control over the prices you are being paid. The only thing that you can do is harvest the highest quality product from your cows that you can.

If you do this you will be receiving premiums from your milk company. Milking procedures have a lot to do with the quality of milk that you are shipping.

Many of you have made the switch to pre-dipping, however, a few are still using water. If you are not having a problem then do not change anything. If your somatic cell count is higher than you would like then maybe you need to take a look at the milking procedures. Make sure that your pre-dip is staying on the teats for the recommended time. A good rule of thumb is 30 seconds of contact time. However, the teats need to be clean of any foreign material prior to applying the dip. Be sure to forestrip the teats to clean the teat canal. This will make sure that you have rid the teat of any bacteria that may have entered the teat.

After waiting the specified time, wipe the teat clean and dry. Apply the unit. Make any adjustments that may be necessary to eliminate squawks during milking.

When the animal is finished milking, apply a post dip to the teats. During cold weather it may be necessary to blot the teats dry. This will eliminate the possibility of the teats freezing because of exposure to cold air.

If you have any cows that have a very high somatic cell count it is highly recommended to milk them last. This will reduce the chance of contaminating any other animals in the herd. I hope that this will help you in reducing your somatic cell count.

Study Looks At

health," said Qijing Zhang, an Ohio State animal scientist and one of the project collaborators. More than 150 pathogens can cause zoonotic infections. "We'll then find the most effective technique to kill the pathogens."

Farmers and gardeners who use manure to fertilize their crops are recommended to compost their manure before application, since the high temperature (at least 130 degrees Fahrenheit) that is generated over several weeks kills any pathogens that may be present.

"Many people are pushing for the composting technique," said Zhang. "I would say that there is pretty solid scientific data out there that points to the significance of treating animal manure before applying it to the land."

Other Ohio State researchers involved in the project include Linda Saif, Ken Theil, Warren Dick, Fred Michel and Lucy Ward, all of whom work on the OARDC campus.

California Dairy Advisor From Pa. Retires

DAVIS, Calif. — If the 22 years Tom Shultz spent as dairy farm adviser for University of California Cooperative Extension in Tulare County had any one focus, it was increasing milk production by making cows more comfortable. Shultz retired Sept. 10.

Shultz' research showed that water misters in cow barns cool heat-stressed cows and increase both feed intake and cow performance. This practice has been adopted by more than 75 percent of local dairies where, according to Shultz' estimates, it results in $1 million each summer in improved milk production.

More recently, Shultz has found that oversized ceiling-mounted fans keep cows as cool as the more commonly used smaller wall-mounted fans.

"The fan's 10-foot-long blades make it look something like a helicopter rotor on the barn ceiling," Shultz said. 'It generates the same air movement as six traditional fans, but uses 85 percent less electricity — something particularly important, considering California's energy crisis."

A native of Pennsylvania, Shultz was raised on a dairy in Corning, Calif. He earned a bachelor's degree in animal science at California State University, Chico, and a master's degree in animal science at UC Davis. Graduation was followed by an 11-year stint in Venezuela, where he conducted applied nutrition research, taught animal nutrition, and worked directly with local dairy and beef ranchers.

After returning to the United States, Shultz completed a doctorate degree at Oregon State University. In 1979, he joined the UC Cooperative Extension staff.

At that time, he said, there were 120,000 cows in Tulare County at 236 dairies. In 2000, 358,000 cows were producing milk at 303 Tulare County dairies.

"Even though the number of dairies hasn't increased tremendously, cow numbers have risen dramatically over these last 20 years," Shultz said. "In 1995, Tulare became the largest dairy producing county in the nation."

Shultz has made significant contributions to the industry in his research and education programs. For example, he researched seasonally available crop residues and agricultural by-products to determine whether materials that were previously considered waste could be nutritious cow feed. He evaluated steam processed orchard wood, tomato pomace, feather meal, kenaf paper processing residues, and other materials. This information continues to be used by dairy producers, nutritionists, and feed companies to reduce feed ration costs.

Shultz has also been a leader in research and education efforts addressing the environmental impact of dairy farming, most notably on air and water quality. He has conducted regular environmental stewardship short courses, monitored nutrients in dairy lagoon water for use as crop fertilizer, studied the efficiency of various manure solid separators, and monitored gaseous dairy emissions. He also played an integral part in developing Tulare County dairy site location and animal density guidelines to minimize environmental impacts.

Shultz published 65 dairy industry articles, 17 peer-reviewed papers, and numerous scientific abstracts. Being bilingual, he published county fact sheets and videos in Spanish and English to enhance communications between dairy managers and Hispanic milker and feeder employees.

During his retirement, Shultz plans to complete the research projects he has under way, including publishing results of his work with oversized ceiling fans and an evaluation of a New Zealand-built electronic teat sprayer, which reduces labor intensive hand cleaning of cow teats before milking.

Shultz said he also plans to travel in his free time.

Study Shows No Relationship Between Stray Voltage And Mastitis

Penn State Extension

Voltages appearing at various cow contact points, such as livestock waterers, feeders, and animal restraining/living or holding areas have been claimed to cause increases in somatic cell counts. However, several studies focusing on the effects of stray voltage on animal health have shown no relationship between voltage exposure and mastitis.

Some individuals have conjectured that voltage causes mastitis by lowering the animal's immune defenses against bacteria in the environment. No one has shown this mechanism occurring in controlled scientifically designed experiments, however. On the contrary, research has shown that voltages of up to 4 volts RMS failed to significantly alter blood born stress hormone (cortisol) and immune globulins. Another study showed that cows with chronic subclinical mastitis did not show clinical signs when exposed to steady state voltages of either 0, 1, 2, or 4 volts RMS AC on water bowls. This strongly suggests that steady state cow contact voltages do not lower the resistance of cows making them more susceptible to mastitis. If this were the case, the chronic mastitis cows would be stressed, the immune system compromised, and the cows could conceivably develop clinical mastitis.

A recent Cornell University study was conducted to determine if steady stray voltages would cause cows to develop clinical signs of mastitis to a greater degree if they received voltages at the water bowl, and had their teats dipped in a solution of mastitis pathogens after milking (to increase exposure of teats to pathogens). One might expect that cows would develop mastitis more readily if their immune resistance was lowered by voltage.

Sixteen cows were exposed to either 0, 1, 2 or 4 volts RMS. All cows teats were dipped in Streptococcus uberis after milking. Milk production, feed and water intake, somatic cell counts, and milk fat and protein percentages were compared between treatments. Data showed that voltages did not significantly influence any of the variables studied. Results suggest that steady stray voltages of up to 4 volts applied to drinking cups for a period of seven days do not result in an increase in mastitis when teats are exposed to mastitis pathogens.
